Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—The administration money bill with its provisions for a 50 to 60 cent dollar, and the creation of a 2 billion dollar stabilization fund out of seized federal reserve gold, found itself assailed from two sides as it started on its way through the senate today.

Led by that most vehement of gold standard advocates, Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], the conservative, "sound money" wing closed in from the right.

Led by Senator William E. Borah, Idaho's insurgent Republican, the ardent inflationists circled in from the left.

Call Passage Assured.

There was no such smooth sailing as saw the measure pass the house last week, 300 to 40. Democratic leaders expressed no fear concerning the measure's eventual passage. With the force of the President's demand behind it, the bill will certainly go through perhaps as early as Friday night, but not without a test between the New Deal forces and the conservatives of both parties, and not without a trial which will show how strong the inflationist sentiment in the senate really is.

Inflationist senators are dissatisfied at the potential expansion of credit which enactment of the bill presages. Predictions that this credit expansion may run anywhere from 7 billions to 40 billions of dollars did not assuage their thirst for more currency. And the debate today rang with their demands for direct inflation of the circulating medium.

Wants Profits Capitalized.

Senator Borah announced that he would press for an amendment requiring any profit on the treasury's gold beyond 2 billions required for the stabilization fund to be used as the basis of a currency issue. He had not yet decided how he would combat the treasury's desire to use this excess profit which may run to half a billion dollars for the immediate financing needs of the government. Nor was it made clear how gold certificates could be issued which would not be gold certificates within the meaning of the current prohibitions against owning them.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.] announced his readiness to introduce an amendment requiring the treasury to purchase silver until a billion ounces have been acquired or until the price of silver reaches a ratio of 16 to 1 with that of gold. The silver would be paid for by an issue of silver certificates.

But both these amendments are slated by the Democratic leaders for annihilation.

May Limit Special Fund.

The only concession President Roosevelt is willing to make is to leave in the bill the amendments placed upon it yesterday by the senate banking and currency committee, limiting to two or possibly three years the life of the stabilization fund and the President's power to alter the gold content of the dollar.

The third major amendment, that placing in the hands of a board of five the control over the stabilization fund proposed to be given to the secretary of the treasury alone, will have to come out, the President decreed.

Glass Attacks Warren Plan.

The bill and the whole monetary theory propounded by the President's professorial advisers, George F. Warren of Cornell university and James Harvey Rogers of Yale, were laid upon the surgery table and pitilessly dissected by Senator Glass as the senate debate got under way.

From his pocket the diminutive 75 year old Virginian pulled a twenty dollar federal reserve note with its promise, "Redeemable in gold on demand at the United States treasury, or in gold or lawful money at any federal reserve bank."

"There is no earthly mistake about the fact that this legislation provides an irredeemable currency," he de-

ROOSEVELT ACTS ON GRAFTING; TO CLOSE CWA

Hopkins Also Tells of Complaints.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
(Picture on Back Page.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—The Civil Works Administration, once proudly hailed as among the greatest of the Roosevelt benevolences, has brought thorny crowns instead of laurels to its authors.

The CWA administrator, Harry Hopkins, has made the extraordinary announcement that his own program has been beset by many grafters.

President Roosevelt himself conceded somewhat ruefully today at his regular press conference that he is receiving from 200 to 300 letters daily bringing charges of corruption in the handing out of CWA jobs.

Hopkins Gets Far More.

The President added that Administrator Hopkins probably was receiving 2,000 or 3,000 letters daily carrying the same protests of graft.

The accusations are about evenly divided, the President said, against Democratic politicians and Republican politicians.

The charges are that local politicians are cashing in on supplies sold to the CWA; that workers are not taken on without political indorsements; that checks are given to politicians and friends of politicians who are not in need at all; that political contractors are raising their charges three and four times over at the expense of CWA, and countless others.

Never in the recollection of Washington newspaper men has a President and one of his administration heads made such astounding statements concerning such wholesale grafting with federal funds.

There are said to be two motives behind the anouncements. First, the President desires to halt the rottenness and to attempt retribution against those guilty. Second, he has a natural wish to forestall the facts of the widespread grafting being dug out by congressional committees or by Republican organizations.

President Facing Issue.

The President, it is said, would much rather face the issue squarely and, instead of attempting to cover the mess, to have it aired by his own initiative.

But behind the whole incident, as it is viewed by those who have been skeptical of the pouring out of billions of federal easy money, lies a much deeper sociological fact which hits at the inner purposes of the administration.

The administration leaders have sensed no peril in spending the billions for public works and for CWA, although warnings were given that corruption inevitably would result. It was intimated strongly the stench of graft would bring a breaking of confidence in the New Deal and outweigh whatever good the doling out of the billions might have achieved.

It is said now that the President and Mr. Hopkins would gladly abandon the CWA now if it were possible, but even the gradual curtailment of that program, as it is being applied, is raising a storm of protest from mayors, governors, and others in the areas free from graft as well as in those honeycombed with it.

4 Million Americans Aided.

Four million Americans, many of them jobless for months, or for years even, have been shown the promised land of good pay for raking leaves, leveling rubbish heaps, painting pictures, teaching contract bridge, repairing streets, playing in bands and orchestras. Many sober-minded observers fear the effect of abandoning the profligacy of government and putting the 4 million back on relief rolls.

It also is pointed out that private philanthropy has about ceased under the greater generosity of the federal government, and that state and local taxing bodies are so far in debt that they cannot sustain the pitch of dole giving undertaken by the Roosevelt régime.

At the present time President Roosevelt's plans are to wind up the CWA program by May 1. His projected appropriations go no further than that date. But sensing the pressure which may be put upon congress in efforts to have that body arbitrarily order the continuance of the CWA beyond that date, Mr. Roosevelt said today that if it became necessary after May 1 to continue parts of the CWA work, funds could be taken for that purpose from the 500 million dollars being appropriated for direct relief needs.

Present funds will carry the CWA

Traylor Gains; Hope Grows for Recovery

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, appeared last night to be on his way to recovery as he continued to show improvement through the midnight hours in his fight against pneumonia, in which he has suffered two serious relapses.

"Mr. Traylor is having the best night he has had since his illness became severe," Dr. Carl Johnson, one of the attending physicians, announced at 2:45 a. m. "He has been sleeping since 7:30 p. m., waking occasionally for a few minutes."

At that time the banker's pulse was 118, slightly lower than a few hours earlier, and his respiration was 26, a drop from 34 in midafternoon. The physician described his heart action as "good" and his breathing as "fair."

Better Than Early Yesterday.

"Although he is still dangerously ill, Mr. Traylor is very much better than he was 24 hours ago," said Dr. William R. Cubbins, family physician, in a statement issued shortly before midnight.

"Mr. Traylor appears quite cheerful," announced Col. James B. Kaine, vice president of the First National bank and a close personal friend of the family. "He feels that he is on the road to recovery, and that means a great deal. He still realizes the gravity of the situation, however. His color is much better and he is able to partake of food."

Appears More Rested.

After sleeping intermittently during the afternoon, the banker appeared somewhat more rested in the evening than at any time since his illness first became critical on Monday. He ate an eggnog, some cooked cereal, and toast with coffee, and fruit juice during the evening.

His mind continued clear and active and he is willing to converse, but his physicians permitted him only short talks with immediate members of his family. Edward Eagle Brown, executive vice president of the First National bank, was permitted to enter the sickroom to talk with the patient, but his visit was limited to a few minutes.

All members of the household expressed optimism over the banker's condition. His wife, Mrs. Dorothy Traylor, their daughter, Nancy, and their son, Melvin Jr., who was summoned from Leland Stanford university, felt certain enough of his condition to retire to their own rooms last night. They had been in close attendance all the preceding night, when it was feared the banker might not live until morning.

COLD WEATHER FORECAST FOR CHICAGO TODAY

Cold weather sweeping down from the Canadian northwest is due to strike Chicago today, according to last night's forecast by C. A. Donnel, government meteorologist. While zero temperatures and lower are expected in some of the north central states, Mr. Donnel did not expect the temperature to fall much below 20 degrees here.

Snow is predicted for tomorrow afternoon or night, accompanied by rising temperature.

The cold will follow abnormally warm weather in Chicago. Yesterday's maximum was 54 degrees.

Forecaster Donnel pointed out that the 1934 winter season so far has been one of the seven or eight mildest winters in the history of the weather bureau. The mildest January was that of 1880 and the second mildest came last year. This January so far has been the fourth warmest since records have been kept.

Court Orders an Operation to Save Boy

Eau Claire, Wis., Jan. 24.—(AP)—County Judge George L. Blum, sweeping aside religious scruples of the parents of 4 year old Raymond Velie, today issued another order providing for medical attention for the boy. Surgeons said an operation is necessary to check an infection developing from an injury which has penetrated to the bone of one of the boy's legs.

In court this afternoon Velie, 36, and his 25 year old wife again were asked to withdraw their objections to an operation. Both shook their heads firmly and said they are confident that God and not doctors will heal their son.

Father Addresses Court.

"You, who haven't experienced religion as we have, cannot be expected to know," he told Judge Blum. "But God is the great healer, and without help from the doctors he will make the boy well."

Velie was asked whether he would remove a sliver in his hand or whether he would await an intervention of divinity to pull it out. He said he would remove it.

"Then why not let us remove this evil thing from your boy's leg?" he was asked.

Orders Doctors to Act.

"You don't understand," he replied.

Judge Blum thereupon ordered Drs. Ivar Stoland and Christian Midelsart to proceed with treatment which, in their judgment, is required, and to operate if necessary. The surgeons said an operation may be performed tomorrow in Luther hospital, where the boy is under observation.

$7,500 Award to Police Wife for Lost Love

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

After six hours' deliberation a jury in the Superior court of Judge Irving L. Weaver last night found Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge guilty of alienating the affections of Policeman Norman E. Nottingham and awarded damages of $7,500 to his wife, Susanne, who had sued for $100,000.

None of the three principals was present when the jury brought in the verdict. The two women had gone home to rest and Policeman Nottingham was preparing to go back this morning to his patrol wagon at the Grand Crossing station.

Myrtle Says She's Broke.

Two comments were made on the jury's decision. One was that of Attorney Murphy O. Tate, who represented Mrs. Nottingham. The award was fair and satisfactory, he asserted.

The other comment was made by Mrs. Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue, at her home.

"It doesn't make any difference, does it?" she asked. "I haven't any money to pay."

Mrs. Blacklidge apparently overlooked the fact that she might have to spend as much as six months in the county jail if she fails to satisfy the judgment in dollars. Legally a finding of guilty in an alienation suit carries automatically a malice count. If Mrs. Nottingham desires, failing to obtain payment, she may get a writ to imprison the defendant. She must, however, pay board of $3.50 a week for the time the defaulting debtor is held behind bars.

Jury Compromises on Amount.

The jurors, it was learned, agreed shortly after retiring at 4:30 p. m. that Mrs. Blacklidge was guilty of "deliberately and maliciously" stealing the affections of the policeman.

A long debate then ensued on the amount of damages. One juror, it was said, suggested that about $100 was a fair measure of the affections' value, while another held that $25,000 would be right. The amount finally chosen was a compromise.

In his instructions to the jury Judge Weaver explained that to act "maliciously" meant merely "to act without just cause and to the deliberate detriment of Mrs. Nottingham." He also instructed the jurors that it was not necessary to show any actual instance of illicit relations between the defendant and Nottingham, but that if it were shown that the opportunity for such an instance existed they might return a guilty verdict.

"Playtoy" or "Predatory."

Mrs. Blacklidge, 42 year old widow, heard herself described as "just a playtoy to Mr. Nottingham" by her own counsel, and as "a predatory female" who was bound to get her man by Mrs. Nottingham's counsel in the closing arguments to the jury.

Throughout the arguments, which occupied most of the afternoon, Mrs. Blacklidge, dressed in the same black satin she has worn daily in court appearances, faced the jurors with a cheerful countenance, studying their faces.

Mrs. Nottingham sat across the counsel table from her rival, conspicuously holding in her lap her 7 year old daughter, Jeanette. Jeanette wound an arm around her mother's neck and often whispered in her ear.

Jeanette Listens Closely.

Although Mrs. Blacklidge's lawyers had contended that Jeanette should not be allowed to testify—as she did for her mother on Tuesday—because of her tender years, the child listened closely as Attorney Tate said to the jury:

"You know, gentlemen, that no one man's heart is big enough for two women. It just can't be done. It's

Crowd Thrilled by Doctor's Story.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

The negotiations which led to the payment last July 12 of $70,000 ransom for the release of John Factor were fully revealed for the first time yesterday in Judge Michael Feinberg's court, where Roger Touhy and three of his gangsters are on trial for kidnaping the wealthy speculator.

The story of Dr. Herman M. Soloway, Factor's physician, who handed over $70,000 in ten and twenty dollar bills to the kidnaping band, was the feature of a session filled with spectacular testimony.

Dr. Soloway also revealed that he had recently received telephoned threats from the same man with whom he conducted the ransom parleys, in which he was told to warn Factor that his family would be harmed if he testified for the state at the trial.

Factor's Son Testifies.

Factor's son, Jerome, who is 20 years old, was another witness whose testimony stirred the crowded courtroom. Jerome was himself seized by kidnapers three months before his father was abducted. In court yesterday Jerome identified a picture of the late Willie Sharkey, Touhy gangster, as that of one of the gunmen who kidnaped his father.

Another witness who identified Sharkey's picture was Rudy Benitez, a bellboy, who testified that Sharkey handed him a letter to give to Dr. Soloway during the ransom negotiations. This letter contained a ring of Factor's as a token of the authenticity of the ransom demands.

Sharkey committed suicide in a St. Paul prison after he had been acquitted with Touhy and other members of the gang for the kidnaping of William Hamm Jr., brewer. There was no identification yesterday of the four men on trial—Roger Touhy, Edward McFadden, Albert Kator, and Gustav Schaefer.

Boasts He'll Ruin Purvis.

Another highlight of the session was the assertion of Defense Attorney William Scott Stewart that he will "ruin" Melvin H. Purvis, government investigator, before the trial is concluded. Stewart's boast was made during the cross-examination of Benitez. Purvis led the federal investigation into the elder Factor's abduction.

The court fans also got a thrill, after being searched for weapons by the scores of police guarding the courtroom, when they heard from A. L. Epstein, who was kidnaped with Factor, a realistic story of how kidnapers talk and act while engaged in their profession.

The Soloway Testimony.

Dr. Soloway, who lives at 5009 Sheridan road and has offices in the Marshall Field Annex building, told in detail of the telephone calls he received from the kidnapers beginning July 3, two days after the abduction.

The first call to his office was a message for Mrs. Factor, telling her that her husband was safe and that she should get together $200,000 as a ransom for his release. The same person, a man, called each day thereafter, the physician testified, until the final arrangements were completed. On July 4 and 5 Dr. Soloway expressed skepticism that the caller was actually one of the kidnapers and asked for a token of some sort from Factor. The caller said that Factor's watch would be delivered to the doctor's office, but this was never done.

"On July 7 I asked that a letter signed by Factor be sent to me," the witness testified. "But the caller said: 'Nothing doing. That's out. We don't want to get mixed up with the government in this.'"

Curses at the Delay.

On several occasions, the doctor said, the caller cursed at the delay. Finally a letter, containing Factor's ring and a slip of paper containing Factor's signature, was left at the Copeland hotel with Benitez, the bellboy. The boy delivered it to the Soloway apartment and the ring was readily recognized by Mrs. Factor as belonging to her husband, the physician testified.

The calls continued each day, with the physician telling of Mrs. Factor's efforts to raise the demanded ransom. On July 10, the doctor testified, he told the caller that Mrs. Factor had been able to raise $55,000.

"That's not enough," the voice insisted. "We must have $200,000."

On July 11 Dr. Soloway told the caller, he said, that Mrs. Factor had borrowed another $15,000 from friends, making a total of $70,000 available. The caller then asked to talk to Mrs. Factor and a conversation followed later in the afternoon in which the wife was assured that her husband was alive and well.

Then on July 12 the caller informed the physician that the $70,000 would be accepted, he testified. He was told to get the money and to await instructions. After he had been given the money package from William Cohen, Mrs. Factor's brother, he received a call, he said, to go to the basement of a drug store on East Washington street and await an incoming call on the last booth in line.

Kidnapers Give Directions.

"I answered the call in the drug store booth," the witness continued. "I was told to take a Checker cab and go south to Jackson boulevard, then west to Des Plaines street and south to 22d street. There I was told to proceed west in 22d street until I was contacted."

Dr. Soloway said he followed these orders. After the cab had been driven slowly west in 22d street for about 20 minutes another car came alongside, waved to him and then pulled in back of the cab, which was stopped.

"I got out and went over to the other car. There were two men in it. One handed me a ten-commandment token on a silver chain which John Factor always carried. The man had a machine gun in his lap and an automatic pistol in his right hand. I turned over the money and the men in the car, which was a small coupe, drove away."

"Did you see their faces?" asked Prosecutor Wilbert F. Crowley.

"Yes. And I would recognize one of them, but I have never seen him since," said the witness.

"They told me Jack would be released that night," he concluded.

Tells of Phone Threats.

After a recess Dr. Soloway told of the telephone threats against Factor which he received in December.

"I recognized the voice as that of the man who had called me so many times before," he said. "It asked me what Factor was doing and remarked: 'Ian't Jake afraid of what will happen to his family?'"

He testified that there were two other calls, the last one just before New Year's day, in which the caller expressed a desire to talk to Factor, but the interview was never arranged.

The manner in which the ransom money was raised was told by several witnesses. It was revealed that the Factor family held out $5,000 on the kidnapers, having actually raised $75,000 on an account in Stein, Alstrin & Co., where Factor traded under the name of his brother-in-law, William Cohen. The "borrowing" of $15,000 by Mrs. Factor was fiction to delude the gangsters, it was admitted.

Jerome Is Cross-examined.

After Jerome Factor had told of the kidnaping of his father near the Dells he was cross-examined by Attorney Stewart, who brought out the fact that Jerome had been kidnaped on April 12, 1933, and held for eight days before being released.

"Didn't your father enlist the aid of Sam Hunt and Murray Humphries to find you?" asked Stewart.

"I was told so," young Factor replied.

The black haired, bespectacled youth's identification of Sharkey as one of the armed men at the scene of his father's kidnaping was attacked by the defense lawyer, but the witness persisted that he could not be mistaken.

"You know your father is wanted back in England and you want to do all you can to help him in order that he may gain favor with the government, don't you?" Steward inquired.

After the form of the question had been changed, young Factor admitted he wanted to help his father in every manner possible.

Threat Against Purvis.

It was during the cross-examination of Benitez, the bellboy, who is a Filipino, that Stewart made his remark concerning Federal Agent Purvis.

Prosecutor Crowley had objected to what he termed Stewart's "distortion" of the witness' testimony. He demanded that if the defense intended to impeach the witness they be warned to go into the matter thoroughly and not leave inferences in the jury's mind. He asked Stewart what he intended to do.

"If I answered your question," retorted Stewart, "I'd ruin Mr. Purvis now as he will ruin himself if he comes here to testify."

In his opening statement to the jury Stewart had asserted that the defense would show that the prosecution of the Touhy gang had been inspired by the Capone syndicate which had been able to do so because "it had made inroads into the government's office, the state's attorney's office and the police department."

DESCRIBES A KIDNAPING

A description of a kidnaping such as has rarely been offered in a court of law came at the morning session from the lips of A. L. Epstein, who was abducted with Factor early on July 1, but was released after being held temporarily.

Allowed to tell the story in his own words and without interruptions from the attorneys, Epstein succeeded in infusing somethinr of his own terror into his narrative. He repeated the cool, terse, clipped phrases of the kidnapers as they descended upon the Factor car and bore Factor and Epstein away.

Under the questioning of Prosecutor Crowley, Epstein first told of the trip to the Dells roadhouse the night of June 30 in company with Mr. and Mrs. Factor and the other members of the party. Upon the departure from the roadhouse about 1 a. m. on July 1 he, Factor and Jerome Factor climbed into Factor's Duesenberg roadster. Factor sat in the middle, Jerome drove and Epstein sat at the right.

Drive Out West Gate.

"We drove slowly out the west gate of the Dells grounds," said Epstein, a tall man with sallow features who betrayed a slight nervousness. "Jerome speeded up the car when the ladies in the party in the car behind us had started to leave.

"About a block and a half east of the Dells a dark colored sedan came alongside us to our left and cut in front of us. Jerome was forced to stop the car, and as he did so another black sedan appeared directly beside us, so that we were hemmed in on the side of the road.

"Four men, armed with machine guns and shotguns, jumped out of the first car and ran back to the Factor car. Another group, also armed, poured out of the second car. One of the first four men yanked at the door of the Factor roadster and yelled: 'Get out and keep your heads down.'"

Then as Factor, his son, and Epstein wriggled out of the roadster with their heads bowed low one of the men asked: "Where's Jack?" [Factor, generally known as Jake, is called Jack by his intimates.]

"I'm Jack," answered Factor quickly, the witness said, and the gangster replied: "Come on." A second man put a gun in Epstein's back, he said, and ordered: "Go on, follow."

Factor was placed in the rear seat of one of the sedans with two men on either side of him. Epstein was forced into the front seat. The car started off and this is the conversation as related by the witness which followed as the car sped away at a dizzy speed:

"Which way?" from the driver.

"Straight ahead!" in a curt tone from one of the men in the rear.

"Turn right!" a command from the rear to the driver after about three-quarters of a mile had been traversed.

"Better tie him up," another order from the leader in the rear. Factor was bound with handkerchiefs and blindfolded and Epstein was also blindfolded.

"Search them for guns," ordered the man in the rear, and this was done despite Factor's plaintive assertion that they were unarmed.

Epstein was asked his name and when he gave it the leader remarked: "I guess we'll let you out." The driver stopped the car and as Epstein was pushed out Factor said to him:

"Al, for God's sake, tell Reila [Factor's wife] not to do anything to get me in trouble."

Removes the Blindfold.

"We'll get in touch with you," one of the men called to Epstein as the car drew away. Epstein testified that he removed the handkerchief from his eyes and saw the tail lights of three cars disappearing to the south. He found that he was near Touhy avenue and Carpenter road, he said. He called a taxicab at a house near by and returned to Chicago.

Asked if he could recognize any of the men at the kidnaping scene that night, Epstein said he was "afraid" he could not, adding with a wry smile: "I kept my head down as ordered."

Defense Attorney Stewart, when the witness was turned over to him for cross-examination, called each of the defendants to stand before the witness. In an easy manner Stewart introduced each defendant to the witness.

"Mr. Epstein, meet Mr. Roger Touhy," said the defense lawyer. "Turn around, Mr. Touhy. Now, was Mr. Touhy one of the men there that night?"

"He was not," replied the witness, and made similar answers when McFadden, Schaefer, and Kator were brought before him.

"You mean," said Prosecutor Crowley on redirect examination, "that you didn't see them there. You don't know, of course, if they were there or not?"

Gives Sigh of Relief.

"That's it," said Epstein, with a sigh of relief.

"On July 2 (the day after the kidnaping) I received a call at my home at 11:30 a. m.," he told the jury. "The voice said: 'I'm speaking for Jake Factor. Tell Mrs. Factor to get $200,000 ready. I'll phone again.'"

Garfield communicated this message to Mrs. Factor, he said, and on July 3 received another message at his office at 160 North La Salle street asking if he had delivered the message. To his affirmative answer the voice said: "You'll hear from me in a couple days for further instructions."

FIRST WITNESSES OF DAY

Ernest Bederman, 215 Woodbine avenue, Wilmette, a construction company superintendent, was the first witness of the day. He and his wife had been at the Dells the evening of the kidnaping and drove up to the scene shortly after Factor and Epstein had been abducted, he testified.

A chum of young Factor, a dark featured youth named Charles Redlich, who lives, he said, with his mother, Mrs. A. L. Epstein, at the Belden-Stratford hotel, also described his experience that evening. He had been in an automobile ahead of the Factor roadster and was not present at the actual kidnaping. Policeman Gustav Milz of the Niles Center force, who received the first complaint of the kidnaping, was another witness for the state.

The colored chauffeur who drove the car in which Mrs. Factor, Mrs. Epstein and some others had followed the Factor roadster also described the appearance of the armed men on the road. He was James Reddick. He appeared in a black uniform and his big eyes rolled as he told his story.

"We came up to find two cars gathered around Mr. Factor's car and a lot of men with guns running around," he said. "The men with guns covered me and told me to stay in the car. So I stayed."

This witness said emphatically that he would not be able to identify any of the armed men on the scene.

Mrs. Epstein told a similar tale. She had been in the car with Mrs. Factor. She declared that "at least fifteen men with guns" were on the scene. She said she would not be able to recognize any of them.

RUMORS BREMER WILL BE FREED BY KIDNAP GANG SOON PERSIST

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Rumors that the release of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, is near continued to flood this city today as the kidnaping case which has aroused the nation entered its second week.

It was about 8:20 last Wednesday morning that Bremer was seized just after he had left his 8 year old daughter at the fashionable school which she attends.

Today, despite reports that contact had been established with the kidnapers, his return seemed even farther off than it did when the $200,000 ransom demand was made a few hours after Bremer had been seized.

The Bremer family, ready from the first to pay the ransom, has denied repeatedly that contact has been made. To these denials Adolph Bremer today renewed his pleas that police keep out of the case, saying that press reports of activity were "ruining" all chances "for return of my boy."

To the crop of rumors was added today the report that the kidnapers had failed in an attempt to obtain the ransom money last night.

The failure was reported due to the kidnapers having followed the wrong automobile.

The purported attempt to secure the $200,000 took place near Hinckley, Minn., where two cars supposedly containing representatives of the kidnaping gang stopped the car of Harry Bachman, St. Paul business man, and fled after carefully surveying him.

ILLINOIS SENATE AGAIN ADOPTS LIQUOR CONTROL

Up to House Today After Conference.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—With not a vote to spare, the Illinois liquor control bill, as approved in conference, was passed by the senate tonight on the second try.

On the first attempt late in the afternoon the administration forces, backed by Al Horan, Chicago Democratic leader, who flew down when trouble loomed, were able to muster only 30 of the 34 necessary votes. Then a recess was taken and the "missionary" work began. So successful was it that within 45 minutes the session reconvened and the needed votes were there.

Faces House Today.

Now the bill must obtain 102 votes in the house tomorrow if it is to become effective immediately. This, it appeared tonight, will be quite a task but not an impossible one. There was a counting of noses on the house roll call and during the evening leaders made rounds of hotel rooms seeking support. Republicans in the lower chamber are balking at concurrence and their opposition probably will be considerable.

The senate convened for its first try at the bill amidst an aura of uncertainty. There were rumbles that a number of Democrats were dissatisfied with several provisions, notably that which forces taverns to become restaurants.

Graham Asks Passage.

Senator R. V. Graham [Dem., Chicago], majority leader and chairman of the conference committee, moved concurrence and the roll call began. Everything went along smoothly until the name of Joseph V. Mendel [Dem., Chicago] was reached.

"I've heard about the black bag in connection with this bill but I haven't seen it yet," Mendel exploded. "Let me tell you that this is bad legislation. Such powers of thieving as are given distilleries in this bill have never been seen before. It lets them put in a little brown sugar, and some colored alcohol and call it whisky. I hope you live long enough to see the deaths which will come if this bill is passed. There'll be more than during prohibition."

Quiet Quickly Restored.

The resulting uproar was stilled after a time and the roll proceeded. It went through the 51 names and when concluded only 23 votes had been recorded, a number of members remaining silent in their seats. John M. Lee [Dem., Chicago] was the first of these to explain his vote when the absentees were called.

"Everybody but the drinking man gets a break in this bill," he declared. "But I'll hold my nose and vote for it."

Other votes came in slowly and finally 30 had been tallied. This was four short. "I think we can pass this with 34 votes," said Graham. "I move we recess."

Horan Gathers Votes.

In the meantime Bailiff Horan of Chicago, No. 2 in command of the Democratic central committee of Cook county, had arrived by plane and had gone among the recalcitrant members. He gathered two votes, but this wasn't enough.

The recess was marked by intensive work. Senators J. S. Mundy [Dem., Marshall], James O. Monroe [Dem., Collinsville], W. L. Finn [Dem., Iuka], and Roy C. Woods [Rep., Chicago] were rounded up. Then Lieut. Gov. Donovan called the senate to order.

Mundy, Monroe, Finn, and Woods climbed on the band wagon and the bill was passed with its emergency clause. The vote was 34 to 8.

Only the house blocked passage of the bill. Speaker Arthur Roe and Mr. Horan started the counting of noses and the house was adjourned until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Strives to Explain Bill.

Both houses stalled along most of the day before the senate began its roll call. Dewitt C. Billman, secretary of the legislative reference bureau, first explained the conference committee's amendments to the senate in the morning, then moved to the house with the same speech in the afternoon.

His was a most difficult task. The measure qualifies as the gargantua of the bill by virtue of its 25,000 words, and only Billman and Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton of Chicago are considered authorities on all that it contains.

It does provide, however, that there shall be separate liquor commissions for both Chicago and downstate in compliance with the wishes of Mayor Kelly and the Chicago delegation. The bill contains prohibition of sales of liquor over bars, save in establishments whose principal business is the serving of food.

DIGEST OF STATE LIQUOR BILL

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—A digest of the state liquor control bill which passed the senate tonight and faces the house tomorrow follows:

Creation of a state commission of three appointed by the governor, which, headquartering in Springfield, would have the power to appoint inspectors; make standards for the manufacture of alcoholic liquors; hear and determine appeals from local commissions; issue and revoke licenses to distillers, brewers, importing distributors, retailers, and others. The commission could not issue a license unless one had been issued by the local commission.

Provisions for a separate commission for Chicago, composed of the secretary of state, chairman of the state commission, and the third member to be appointed by the city council. However, not more than two members could be of the same political party, which would probably mean that the council would select a Republican

License fees as follows:

Manufacturer of spirits, $2,500.

Manufacturer of wine and beer, $500.

Importing distributor, $250.

Local distributor, $100.

Retailer, $50.

Service of liquor and beer over bars only in establishments where the serving of food is at all times the principal business.

Labeling of beverages as "whisky" and "gin" only when they are made from a distillate of fermented grains. Otherwise products should be labeled "imitation."

Local option for townships in rural districts, villages, downstate, and precincts in Chicago. City councils would have the power to ban all liquor until May 10, 1934.

Prohibition of sale of liquor on all election days. No Sunday sales would be allowed save by order of city councils.

Gallonage taxes as follows: Two cents on beer, 10 cents on wine containing 14 per cent alcohol or less and 25 cents on wine containing more than 14 per cent alcohol; 50 cents on whisky and spirits.

54 U. S. EMPLOYES FACING OUSTER; CHARGE POLITICS

Fifty-four employes of the custodian in the United States courthouse were ordered yesterday to show cause why they should not be discharged for incompetence or inefficiency. The order was issued after Frank Frawley, postoffice inspector, had investigated the activities of 304 custodian employes in the building. All those ordered discharged, most of them elevator operators and janitors, charged that the action is a political move. Until four months ago they were civil service employes under the treasury department. At that time they were shifted to the postoffice department and classified as temporary employes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The first important step towards repudiation by the Labor party of the dictatorship policy advocated by Sir Stafford Cripps, party leader, was taken by the national executive committee of the party, meeting in London today. At the conclusion of the meeting an official statement was issued which said: "The Labor party stands for parliamentary democracy. It is firmly opposed to individual or group dictatorship, whether of the right or left. Statements which are at variance with the declared policy of the party on this question which have been or may be made by individuals are hereby definitely repudiated."

Unusual Action Brought Against Chicagoan.

Lawrence H. Whiting, president of the Furniture Mart, is named defendant in a suit for $2,231,156 on file in the United States District court, it was revealed yesterday. The suit, filed and suppressed several days ago, was made public yesterday after the defendant had been served with a subpoena by government agents.

L. H. WHITING.

The action was filed by Attorney Charles A. Russell of Washington in behalf of the government and of W. C. Read, who lists his residence as Washington and Ohio.

Bill Charges Tax Fraud.

The bill of complaint charges that Whiting defrauded the government of $1,165,578 during 1926, 1927, and 1928 by failing to include in his tax returns for those years income received from the sale of stock in the Indiana Limestone company.

This failure to file a proper income tax return, the suit alleged, is tantamount to bringing a false claim against the government. Under federal law such an action entitles the government to collect double damages from the taxpayer.

While neither the complainant nor his counsel could be reached, Chicago attorneys expressed the belief that the action had been brought under the law which allows an individual to bring suit in behalf of the government. In such an action, said to be exceedingly rare in court history, the complainant is entitled to half the money collected by the government as the result of such a suit and also to the cost of the litigation.

Defendant Socially Prominent.

Whiting, former president of the Boulevard Bridge bank, said yesterday that he did "not attach any importance to the suit." The defendant is socially prominent and lives at 1524 Lake Shore drive. He said that he could "not imagine who Read or Attorney Russell might be."

"The government has approved all my income tax returns," Whiting said, "including the return for 1932. The first thing I knew about the suit was when a deputy marshal served notice on me at my home. I am anxious to find out what is behind it. I believe there is some kind of law which allows a citizen to file suit for the government and to collect half the money obtained in the suit—if any. If that is true, that might be the reason."

Although the suit was made returnable in the February term of court, the defendant announced that he intended to go to Arizona today in keeping with plans made earlier.

The bill of complaint alleges that Whiting received 50,000 shares of stock in the Indiana Limestone company worth $5,000,000 in 1926. According to the suit Whiting sold the stock in three blocks, one in 1926, another in 1927, and the third in 1928, and failed to pay any taxes due the government.

3 CHILDREN BATTLE ALBERTA BLIZZARD; REACH FARM HAVEN

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Caught in a blizzard, with his two sisters, Pauline, 8 years old, and Mary, 14, Vernon Stifle, 12, found all signs of road and path blocked out by thick snow shortly after they had started their three mile walk to school near Hanna, Alta.

Joining hands with his sisters and quieting their fears, he kept them trudging until they felt a fence against their bodies. Vernon then used the fence as a guide. Plunging through ever deepening drifts, the children followed the fence for three miles.

Stopping only to rest or to shout consolation at each other above the roar of the storm, the three came at last, weary and frightened, to the prairie home of J. Kaemp.

Except for slight frost bite, the three, who are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stifle of Sunnynoon, Alta., showed little signs of their long struggle against wind and snow.

DOUBLE CROSSED PALS BLAMED AS WHITE'S KILLERS

All the tangled threads of the investigation into the death of William [Three Fingered Jack] White yesterday led the police to a single definite conclusion—that he was stalked and slain in his flat at 920 Wesley avenue, Oak Park, because he was double crossing his associates in crime.

What particular form of the double cross on the part of the racketeer, public enemy and former convict caused his one time pals to show their resentment by pumping lead into him was a matter of pure guesswork. White, the investigators held, had used too many forms.

Theories on Killing Motive.

The most plausible of the guesses concerning the slaying motive were:

1. That White was, or was suspected of, dealing directly with government agents in turning up information against prominent criminals.

2. That he had looted a safety deposit box that he and James [Fur] Sammons had in common and had kept the $80,000 it contained while Sammons went to serve a life sentence in the Indiana state prison.

3. That he had failed to make a proper division of the receipts from his titular control of teamsters' unions with his partners.

Visited by U. S. Agents.

There were indications that any one of these reasons might have been sufficient to furnish a motive. One of the strange facts developed was the singular visit he had received late Tuesday afternoon from two investigators for the bureau of investigation, department of justice. The two men, James Hartin, a regular agent, and Oliver Kempster, a state highway policeman assigned to the bureau, were taken into custody by the Oak Park police a few hours after the killing, but were speedily released after telling their story.

"These men were working on something that came to us from another office," Mr. Purvis said. "I shall not tell what it was. They were told that White might be found at the Oak Park flat and they went there to find out if the report was true.

Fail to Find White.

"When they called there they did not see White. They talked briefly with Mrs. White. Not wishing to create an alarm they formed the intention of getting help from the police and the state's attorney's office and arresting White.

"However, they were called into our office and told to take another angle of the investigation, the watching of a train for a notorious criminal. The killing of White took place while they were on this assignment."

Supposedly the government agents wanted to question White about his knowledge of the man or men they were seeking. The further reasoning along this line is that White, as a marked man in the underworld, was being closely watched by his erstwhile pals, and that some of these, learning of the visit of the government men to his home, decided that it was too dangerous to leave him able to talk.

Hunt Klondike O'Donnell.

A suspicion arose that the killers might have been William (Klondike) O'Donnell, long a power in the rackets of the western suburbs and one of his henchmen. An order to arrest O'Donnell was issued, after the police were told by Mrs. White and her brother, James Kelly, that they left the flat during the evening while White was drinking amicably with two men known to the other members of the household only as "Bill" and "Joe."

The police said that Mrs. White identified a picture of O'Donnell as that of the man she had known as "Bill." Her brother made the same identification. Until her marriage last August Mrs. White, under the name of Nancy Kelly, was an entertainer in the Club Royale.

Bernard O'Donnell, brother of Klondike, told investigators that Klondike was in Florida, but some doubt was cast on this statement by the fact that Mrs. White said "Bill" had been a frequent visitor in the White home recently.

Supervising Capt. John Stege, of the Chicago police, said that he had learned there was common gossip in the underworld to the effect that White had double crossed Sammons after the latter's arrest and had refused to furnish the heavy sum Sammons felt he needed to defend himself in the Indiana courts.

Possibly, the captain suggested, the gangland enemies of "Three Fingered Jack" became convinced that he should be erased when they put the safety box information with the news that he was "singing" to the government.

"Withholding Union Funds."

A proponent of the third theory, that White was withholding union funds, was Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the state's attorney's police force.

"He had been getting all the revenues from his teamsters' union, No. 727," Capt. Gilbert said. "He wasn't doing right by his particular associates, Marcus [Studdy] Looney and Claude Maddox."

White was one of the 17 defendants in the Trucking and Transportation exchange, or TNT conspiracy case, which is scheduled to go to trial before Judge Walter Steffen on Feb. 16. He had not been apprehended on this charge, although the office of Sheriff Meyering was supposed to be looking for him. Presumably the deputy sheriffs would have been glad to have the information on his whereabouts picked up by the department of justice men.

In the Oak Park flat were found some records of the transportation business. Assistant State's Attorneys Robert Donigan and Donald Thompson took possession of these, in the belief that they might furnish important evidence for the trial.

Most mysterious of all the figures in the case, however, was Miss Diane Anderson, who was with Mrs. White and Kelly when they were taken by the police an hour after the murder. She admitted that it was she who had led Kempster and Hartin to the apartment. She also told the investigators where the agents could be found. A former resident of Sterling, Ill., she said she had met Kempster there.

It was apparent that she was a close friend of Mrs. White, but how her path happened to cross that of government agents, crooks, actors [Mrs. White and Kelly were once a vaudeville team] was left unexplained. Nor, with her knowledge of so many people, could the police understand why she failed to learn the exact identity of the suspected killers, Bill and Joe.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty went to the Oak Park station to take charge of the investigation. He said he was satisfied that the killing was premeditated; that it was not the outcome of a drunken quarrel. The slayers apparently spent an hour and forty minutes in conversation with White before using their weapons.

Fights to Reach Weapon.

White had tried to defend himself. He was on his feet when shot three times and was headed for a drawer where he had two revolvers and a sawed-off shotgun, but he fell dead before he reached it. Many other shots were fired, all shoulder high, as was indicated by the holes in the walls.

Coroner Frank J. Walsh directed that an inquest into the murder be held this morning at the county morgue. Meanwhile, the police were holding the widow, her brother, Miss Andersen, and a man named Edward De Veau of 525 South 24th avenue, Bellwood, in custody. De Veau had been arrested in connection with the recent killing of Theodore [Handsome Jack] Klutas by police and the capture of Walter Detrick, escaped Indiana convict, in Bellwood. The possibility of a connection between White and Klutas and Detrick was being considered.

Last of the Gang.

The slaying of White marked the passing of the last of six members of the "dead shot gang of doormat thieves." Members of the gang banded together about twenty-five years ago after White came to Chicago from an Iowa farm in his teens. He lived in the neighborhood of Harrison street and Kedzie avenue.

Characterized by a police official as "deadly as snakes," the members gained notoriety in the gang world as they grew older and one by one met death at the hands of other killers. The youthful gang started out by stealing milk from doorsteps and similar petty thievery. It was made up of White, George (Red) Barker, Mickey Reilly, William Clifford, Cy Cawley, and Thomas McElligott.

The nickname "Three Finger Jack" was never used by White's associates, as the hoodlum was sensitive about his right hand, which was mangled in a threshing machine on his father's farm in Iowa.

ALDERMAN ACTS AS COUNSEL FOR THEFT SUSPECT

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Ald. Frank E. Konkowski [26th] appeared as counsel for Robert A. Lutz, 59 years old, owner of a filling station at 459 Ogden avenue, yesterday, when Lutz was arraigned before Judge Joseph A. Graber in the special Automobile Theft court on the charge of possessing a stolen automobile battery.

Anthony Moskall, 20 years old, arrested by Racine avenue police when he was caught tampering with an automobile, confessed that he had sold a stolen battery to Lutz for 75 cents on Nov. 27. Police who searched Lutz's filling station failed to find the battery, but did find thirty used tires stored in the basement.

Lutz denied buying the stolen battery. He also denied that the tires were stolen, but admitted that he had no license to deal in automobile accessories. Judge Graber continued the case until Friday and warned Lutz that if he did not offer a better explanation of the presence of the tires action would be pressed against him.

$1,200 FIRE IN HOME.

FEDERAL LOANS TO CHURCHES HIT AT CONFERENCE

Opposition to the Ludlow bill, which authorizes the Reconstruction Finance corporation to loan money to churches at 4 per cent interest, was expressed last night by directors of the national home boards of the Congregational and Christian churches in annual conference at Evanston.

"The firmly established American principle of the separation of the church and state would be violated by the bill," said the Rev. Ernest M. Halliday of New York. "There will be no end to which subsidies will lead if funds from government agencies are once made available to churches for any purpose.

"Great peril to a free church lurks in this bill. Neither should politicians want to add the churches to the many mouths clamoring to be fed from the government pork barrel."

Mr. Halliday, who is general secretary for church extension, and Attorney Elbert C. Wood of New York, church building secretary, were instructed to appear in Washington and oppose the bill at hearings.

DR. DODDS TELLS COLLEGE'S VITAL ROLE IN NEW ERA

New Princeton President Guest of Alumni.

Is a college education a waste of four years' time in this critical period?

This question was asked and answered emphatically in the negative last night by Dr. Harold Willis Dodds, president of Princeton university, at a banquet given for him by the Princeton club at the Drake hotel. It was the first appearance of Dr. Dodds in Chicago since he was elected to the office last June as the successor of John Greer Hibben. He is 44 years old, the youngest man to hold the position in 175 years.

"The world is asking whether four years spent in a little college town, away from the strain of modern life, is worth while," said President Dodds. "Many of us are not quite sure whether the world is building up or breaking up. How shall we prepare our youth?"

Fits Boy for Life.

"I believe," he said in answering the question, "that this four years of detachment fits and equips a boy for a life of strain. I can't show graphs on this, but I know it to be true. It gives him opportunity for mental development.

"Now, as in no other time in the history of the country, a liberal education fits men to help humanity. It has been demonstrated that the world will not be saved by the vocational mind. What we need is the mind that can analyze and correlate."

Dr. Dodds told the alumni that more money for scholarships is wanted by Princeton. He decried reports that Princeton is a school for rich men's sons, declaring that one-third of the students contribute to their own support.

"Democracy is on trial, it's true," he said. "I think democracy will prevail. It is the only form of government for self-respecting people. We have always emphasized democracy at Princeton. It's only by living in a cross-section of the country that the boys can prepare for democracy."

Teachers and Builders.

Dr. Dodds, who said he had never read a book about education, declared it is his belief that a university faculty should be composed of scholars and teachers, but that they should also be "builders," each doing independent research in his field.

Campus morals have improved, declared Dr. Dodd, and although a new low mark may have been struck in 1929 there has been a recovery, which is admitted by even the severest critics. The attitude toward sports, including football, he said, is more and more: "After all, it's only a game."

Foreign Chief's Illness May Mar Balkan Kings' Parley

BUCHAREST, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Sudden illness of Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu of Rumania and a subsequent operation for an ear infection cast a shadow tonight upon preparations for a four day conference between King Boris of Bulgaria and King Carol of Rumania, which begins tomorrow. The 50 year old minister was on his way home from Belgrade when he was stricken with a high fever.

RIOTING FELONS ADD TO SCANDAL OF PRISON RAID

New Yorker Finds Big Shots Happy.

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Corrections Commissioner Austin H. MacCormick isolated Welfare Island penitentiary from all communication today. He then staged one of the most dramatic raids in city prison history.

The commissioner found that the gossip and charges sporadically made against the institution, ranging from "dope rings" to the complete rule of the prison by "big shot" gangsters, were true. He seized narcotics, knives, lead pipe, and razor blades.

Finds Other Abuses.

The commissioner uncovered a "politicians' row" in the hospital. He found evidence of degeneracy.

As an immediate result Warden Joseph A. McCann, who has been in charge of the penitentiary through several Tammany administrations, was relieved of his duties and a deputy warden, Daniel F. Sheehan, arrested.

Mr. MacCormick ordered that no further communications be allowed to go through the switchboard to or from the island.

A squad of keepers from the Correction hospital joined the raiding party at the waterfront.

Commissioner MacCormick's raiders swooped simultaneously into every corner of the prison and the grounds.

Deputy Warden Thompson made the first discoveries in the west wing. He and his men found a valise full of drugs, hypodermic needles, knives, razor blades, and special foods.

Commissioner MacCormick found two young prisoners who had let their hair grow over their shoulders and had mascara on their eyes and rouge on their cheeks. He declared degenerate practices were rife in one section of the prison.

Prisoners Riot in Cells.

The prison became a bedlam as the commissioner and his men marched through the corridors, leaving details of inspectors in each cell block.

It was impossible to converse below a shout as the prisoners howled and pounded on the cell bars with tin cups.

The raid was carried out under a barrage of milk bottles, tin cups, and loose bits of stray metal, thrown by the prisoners. But nothing interrupted the raid.

Commissioner MacCormick uncovered "politicians' row" in the hospital. In the administration building he found Joie Rao, the Harlem gangster who was the target in the fatal Harlem baby "massacre" two years ago. With him, enjoying the privileges of "big shots," was Eddie Cleary, an equally well known criminal.

UPHAM SUBMITS $43,760,000 BUDGET TO CITY COUNCIL

City Controller Upham yesterday submitted to the city council copies of his printed tentative budget for 1934 calling for the expenditure of $43,764,871, as compared to $47,883,195 for 1933. Because of a reduction in personal property valuations since the controller put his estimates in the printer's hands the council may have to make a further cut of $4,000,000.

The county board finance committee yesterday completed the 1934 budget for the county, totaling $19,066,119. It will be presented to the board for passage tomorrow. Since all the county commissioners are members of the finance committee the consideration by the board is expected to be a formality.

Willits Missing with Two Children; Kidnaping Charged

John MacGregor Willits, who on Tuesday in the Superior court was denied the custody of his two children by his divorced wife, Mrs. Margaret Liggett Willits, disappeared from his Evanston home yesterday. Mrs. Willits' attorney charged to Judge Joseph Sabath that he had again kidnaped the children.

Under the terms of the order entered Tuesday by Judge Sabath, Willits was to turn the children over to Mrs. Willits tomorrow. The delay was granted to permit her to find a home for the children, which Judge Sabath ruled must be within Cook county.

Yesterday Mrs. Willits went to her ex-husband's home at 2215 Maple avenue, Evanston, to visit the children —Jane, 8 years old, and Ann, 3. She found the house empty and Willits and the children gone, with all their clothing, she reported.

Mrs. Willits immediately consulted her attorney, Frank B. Teed. He tried to reach Willits and the broker's attorney, Stephen Love, but was unable to find Willits and was told that Attorney Love had gone out of town on business. He then reported his discoveries to Judge Sabath, adding that he would ask today to have Willits held in contempt of court.

"He's kidnaped the children again," Attorney Teed charged.

The first kidnaping took place during the Christmas holiday season. Willets went to see the children at Swampscott, Mass., where they were living with their mother. He brought them back to Chicago with him, charging that their mother was neglecting them to attend cocktail parties.

He filed a petition before Judge Sabath to amend Mrs. Willets' divorce decree and give him custody of the children.

Judge Sabath ruled that Mrs. Willits should keep the children except during the summer.

Mrs. Willits is the daughter of John Liggett, brother of the drug chain owner. Her former husband is the son of Ward Willits, railroad equipment manufacturer.

Sees Return to Days of "Shin Plasters."

Does Lie Create Faith?

"Would it increase my confidence in the stability of the currency of the country to find that this bill has stated on its face a lie, that the government will not do what the note issued says it will do?" he continued. "I should think that that would impair, if eventually it would not destroy the confidence of the plain people. It did so right after the civil war.

"I am old enough to know when the currency of the United States was worth 34 cents on the dollar. We did not call it a dollar; we called the money 'shin plasters,' and it is my considered judgment that if we proceed with many more of these vagaries and these experiments, the money of the American people will be worth about what the currency was worth in the post-civil war period."

Senator Glass demanded that not only the gold, but the profit on it resulting from devaluation, should be left in the federal reserve system. There, he said, it would enable the banks to respond to the demands of business more generously even than they could now.

Asks About U. S. Profits.

"Is any of this gold 'profit' going to be used by the treasury to start its printing presses?" he demanded. "Why, it is not needed for that purpose. If you are going to start a printing press why not just start it by itself? What is the use of having any gold behind the currency when the currency is irredeemable in gold, and when if any one is found with a gold certificate on his person he will be sent to jail?"

Senator Glass attacked the proposal to give exclusive power over the stabilization fund to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

"Our secretary of the treasury," he said, "is a most estimable young gentleman, worthy, patient, amiable, lovable—without a day's experience as a banker and so far as I have been able to ascertain, without knowledge of foreign exchange.

"To put activities of this tremendous importance exclusively in the hands of one man, I think, and the committee thought, was a mistake."

The senator recalled an official statement in the British house of commons, in which it was asserted that the British fund was not used for the purpose of degrading the pound, but merely to prevent too wide a fluctuation of the pound in domestic transactions. The American fund proposed by the bill was, he said, "avowedly" to be used for degrading the exchange value of the dollar.

Assails Gold Seizure.

"We are setting up a stabilization fund," Senator Glass said, "for the purpose of compelling foreign nations to join wth us in the stabilization of foreign exchange. And the testimony before us of foreign exchange experts of international reputation was that it would not do that, but quite the contrary; that it would create friction and defer the stabilization of foreign exchange." Then he turned again to the question of seizing the federal reserve gold.

"No other civilized nation on the face of the globe ever has seized the gold of its central bank," he declared. "Great Britain never has taken a dollar of the gold of the Bank of England. France never has taken a dollar of the gold of the Bank of France. Germany never has taken a dollar of the gold of the reichsbank."

"Great Britain did not go off the gold standard until she was depleted of all her gold," Senator Glass continued. "She had not $20,000,000 of gold when she felt forced to go off the gold standard in a sense, not in the sense that we are off the gold standard. We had 43 per cent of the world's gold when we went off the gold standard. Except Professors Warren and Rogers, no man who appeared before our committee would venture to express the opinion that we should have gone off the gold standard, or at least that there was any necessity for our doing so."

Big Chance for Mistake.

Then the senator reverted to the amendment concerning the foreign exchange board and described how the fund might also be used "for domestic transactions upon the mistaken belief that it was being used for the stabilization of foreign exchange."

For the secretary of the treasury to be able to use a portion of the fund in open market operations in government securities, said Senator Glass, was to set him up as a central bank in direct competition with the open market activities of the federal reserve system. That was bound to lead to conflict, said the senator.

Senator Glass charged that the treasury had "made a football" of the reserve system during the last dozen years; had coerced the reserve banks and through them the member banks into buying government securities and supporting the market for governments until their portfolios were choked with government paper.

Borah Enters Fight.

The debate had scarcely begun when Senator Borah broke in and, addressing Senator Glass, demanded:

"Does the senator regard this measure as inflationary?"

"Even the President's spokesman," replied Senator Glass, referring to Prof. Rogers, who appeared as a witness in committee, "said it might result in an inflation of 17½ billions of dollars."

It quickly developed that Senator Borah was talking about inflation of the currency while Senator Glass meant potential inflation of credit., and that Senator Borah was not after currency inflation, while inflation of any sort was the very thing Senator Glass believed the country should avoid.

"Is this bill going to inflate the currency?" demanded Senator Borah.

"Not necessarily," replied Senator Alben W. Barkley [Dem., Ky.], who carried much of the burden of the administration's defense.

"Does the senator from Virginia believe the bill will increase the price of commodities?" asked Senator Borah.

"Certainly I do not, except, perhaps, temporarily," Senator Glass snapped back. "What we did last spring enabled speculators to send prices up—and then they came down."

BRITAIN STANDS PAT AGAINST U.S. 60 CENT DOLLAR

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Inquiries today by both government and financial authorities revealed that Prime Minister Macdonald's statement last night that world recovery first needs adjustment of the pound and dollar was in no sense an indication of the British government's present policy. Neither does it mean there is any likelihood of Anglo-American currency negotiations in the near future.

"International tinkering with exchange in the present state of uncertainty concerning American finance would be useless," one treasury official said. "We must have a more substantial foundation than we have now on which to build any permanent relationship between the American and British currencies. Otherwise, we run the risk of entering into an unsound agreement which would be worse for both countries than the present situation."

There have been no proposals through diplomatic channels in Washington and London in either direction for currency discussion and the policy of the British goverment concerning the dollar and pound remains unchanged. That policy is based on the assumption that the dollar at the present rate of exchange is undervalued.

DE PRIEST HEADS HOUSE INTO RACE QUESTION CLASH

Claims Secretary Was Barred from Cafe.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Although Speaker of the House Henry T. Rainey was using his influence to prevent it, the house of representatives tonight appeared to be headed inevitably for an open clash on the race question.

Representative Oscar De Priest [Rep., Ill.], lone Negro member of congress, demanded a special investigation to determine by what authority the house committee on accounts can bar Negroes from the house restaurant. Louis Morris, secretary to Mr. De Priest, and his son were refused service in the grill adjacent to the restaurant yesterday.

Chafrman Lindsay C. Warren [Dem., N. C.] of the accounts committee maintained a strict silence, but was understood to be prepared for a fight to the finish if Mr. De Priest calls upon the house to decide whether his committee has power to prevent Negroes from eating in the restaurants at the house end of the capitol.

At the same time, it was learned, Representative De Priest is smarting under what he feels is another affront to the Negro race. Within the last two days, it was understood, an elevator operator in the house office building refused to ride Negroes on the lift he was operating. The operator, whose name could not be learned, was discharged by Speaker Rainey as soon as the incident was reported and the speaker's action, brought to Mr. De Priest's attention, seemed to pacify the Chicago congressman today.

Despite the speaker's efforts to pour oil on the waters troubled by the restaurant incident, however, De Priest insisted on introducing a resolution late today under which a committee of five congressmen would undertake a special inquiry to determine "by what authority the committee on accounts controls and manages the conduct of the house restaurant, and by what authority said committee or any members thereof issued and enforced rules or instructions whereby any citizen of the United States is discriminated against on account of race, color, or creed."

JOHNSON YIELDS TO BORAH, NYE ON NRA CODE POLICY

Small Businesses to Get Complaint Chance.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Gen. Hugh Johnson, NRA administrator, capitulated today in his war with Senators Gerald P. Nye [radical Rep., N. D.] and William B. Borah [radical Rep., Idaho] over the fate of small business concerns under NRA codes devised and administered by their big business competitors.

In conferences he had sought with Senator Nye and with Senator George W. Norris [radical, Neb.], chairman of the senate judiciary committee, Gen. Johnson agreed to the establishment of a board of outstanding citizens to which small manufacturers and other business men can bring their complaints of ruinous operation of the codes.

Both Radicals Pleased.

Senators Nye and Borah expressed gratification that Gen. Johnson had yielded to their representations that little factories and other business enterprises are being forced out of business as a result of the suspension of anti-trust law provisions in the national industrial recovery act. Senator Borah indicated, however, that he will press for an amendment of the act restoring the full vigor of the anti-trust laws.

Senator Nye issued the following statement:

"Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel for NRA, called at my office this morning at their request.

Reveals Meeting Talk.

"In a two hours' conference we went over the situation with respect to small industry and its treatment by the national recovery administration, and there is every indication that the administrator is ready to reconsider my original proposal that there be created in the NRA a special board of outstanding citizens to which the small manufacturers and business men may present their complaints as to the operation of the codes which have been adopted. Of course, this is highly gratifying.

"As previously announced I shall continue my discussions of monopoly and monopolistic practice in a nation-wide radio speech Friday night."

See Roosevelt Hand.

It appears that Gen. Johnson, who cracked down on Senators Nye and Borah in his New York speech last week for their assault on his failure to protect the little business man was himself cracked down upon by the President. Mr. Roosevelt caused Gen. Johnson to yield to the senators' demands when he found he had failed to calm the storm with the executive order framed by the administrator which provided for appeals by complainants from the NRA to the federal trade commission.

Gen. Johnson reported to the President that he had reached an agreement with Senators Nye and Norris and afterward declared Mr. Roosevelt is satisfied with the arrangements.

"We have worked it out satisfactorily from the standpoint of all parties, including the administration," Gen. Johnson stated as he left the White House.

Legislation Not Necessary.

"Legislation will not be necessary."

To what extent another board can afford protection to the small business concerns suffering from code restrictions and requirements dictated by their big business rivals depends upon its success in procuring revision of the codes. Gen. Johnson has notified all code authorities to come to Washington Feb. 15 to consider code revisions.

Those who share the views of Senator Borah doubt that small business units can be adequately protected so long as the law itself permits suspension of the anti-trust laws. The NIRA provides that "any code, agreement, or license approved, prescribed or issued and in effect under this title, and any action complying with the provisions thereof shall be exempt from the provisions of the anti-trust laws of the United States," Senator Borah, at the time sought an amendment declaring that nothing in the act should authorize violation of the existing laws against monopoly, restraint of trade and price fixing. Inasmuch as the NRA was designed to permit restraint of trade and price fixing and was being supported by big business for that reason the administration senators squelched the Borah amendment.

Hit Monopolies in Proviso.

All they would agree to was a proviso that "such code or codes shall not permit monopolies or monopolistic practices." Unless "monopolistic practices" can be established small business units are at the mercy of codes involving restraint of trade and price fixing. About 90 codes include price fixing arrangements.

Prices are being fixed on the basis of production costs of big business concerns in metropolitan centers. Before the advent of the new deal small industries were able to get a share of the market because, with the lower production costs of small cities, they could make a profit at a lower price. Now with prices fixed by big business the small industries are robbed of that advantage and find their customers drifting away to the big competitors with the more extensive sales organizations.

HOUSE TO CUT COASTAL NAVY OF THE DRY ERA

Official Tells Strength of Smugglers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Despite repeated warnings that rum running is likely to become an even greater problem under repeal than under prohibiton, the house appropriations committee today recommended sharp reductions in both the coast guard and customs service appropriations for 1935. The committee was told smuggling depended largely on profits to be made.

The coast guard appropriation, which last year amounted to $25,772,950, will be pared $7,523,501, if the committee recommendations are carried out, and $1,500,000 will be shaved off the customs service appropriation, which last year totaled $19,990,000.

Follows Navy Bill.

The appropriations for those agencies are carried in the $820,692,270 treasury-postoffice supply bill, which followed the navy department appropriation measure to the house floor today.

The committee's insistence that the coast guard reduce the giant shore and floating enforcement plant which it built up during prohibition was in the face of official testimony that the smuggling problem was likely to persist for many years, and might, conceivably, become a larger matter than it is now.

Smuggling Big Business.

"The international smuggling syndicates which have been operating on all coasts of the United States for the last 12 years have millions of dollars invested in vessels, planes, trucks, radio stations, cutting, and distributing plants, etc., employing thousands of persons, and the Canadian distilleries have for the last 12 years exported to the United States through these smuggling syndicates more than 30 per cent of their total output.

"The domestic production of distilled spirits will not, for several years, meet the demand for distilled spirits in the United States, and the deficiency must be made up through importation, either legally through legitimate importing concerns, or illicitly through the international smuggling syndicates."

Commander Gorman expected the smugglers would wait until federal and state liquor taxes and regulatory measures are stabilized, then resume or quit, according to the profits in sight. If there was profit enough, he added, the most aggressive coast guard policy would be needed.

Leaves $10,000 Estate

Diana, the pet dog of Mrs. Allie Heafer, who died on Dec. 16, is assured a home for the rest of her life under the terms of Mrs. Heafer's will, admitted to probate yesterday by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to the Probate Judge O'Connell. Mrs. Heafer left an estate valued at $10,000. She left her personal effects to Mrs. Stella Freyer, 6224 St. Lawrence avenue, and also provided that Mrs. Freyer receive $15 a month for the care of the dog. The remainder of the estate goes to Grant Depew, 1048 Waveland avenue, a brother.

Vandal Preys on Evanston Home; Cop Now on Guard

Mrs. Joseph R. Hunter, 2406 Marcy avenue, Evanston, made a complaint to the Evanston police last night. Ten days ago, she said, some unidentified vandal began annoying her. He cut the radio aerial wires, cut her dog's leash and let him run unguarded through the streets, tore down the wire fence about her yard, and chalked the walls of her home. The police admitted that the complaint was justified and a policeman was stationed at the Hunter home to watch for the vandal.

Boys Play with Traffic Light; Peril Motorists

Three small boys learned last night that they could reach the switch controlling the traffic light at Ridge avenue and Lincoln street, Evanston. They immediately put their knowledge to work. Instead of flashing green and red at regular intervals, the lights were flickered so rapidly that motorists narrowly averted collisions. The police were notified and a guard was sent to watch the lights. Before their arrival the ingenious youngsters had fled.

CHARGE NRA CODE IS ABSORBING TAX RECEIVER INCOME

County's Agents Complain of Added Costs.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday were $251,331, making a total of $102,718,806 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 28, 1933. The day's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for four years follow:

	1933.	1932.
Jan. 24	$ 15,293	$ 57,152
Uncollected	15,479,951	41,263,462
	1930.	1931.
Jan. 24	$ 62,605	$ 113,180

The day's collection of 1931 personal property taxes totaled $1,955.

Code provisions of the NRA are absorbing the income of properties in receivership for delinquent taxes, which income ordinarily would go into the county treasury. This was the complaint yesterday at a special meeting of County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough's receivership agents. The meeting was called by the treasurer, who is tax receiver for the properties under the Kerner-Skarda act and appoints the agents to handle details of the receivership.

Agents for outlying hotels and smaller apartment buildings that are in receivership declared at the meeting that NRA code provisions on management favor larger properties, where greater income can meet the additional expense required by the code. They asserted that larger properties, with larger numbers of employés, can operate under some form of "staggered hours" for workers to meet code requirements.

May Stop Kerner-Skarda Act.

The position of the county treasurer's agents, they said, is the same as that of small merchants and manufacturers endeavoring to compete with larger interests under codes more favorable to big business. Unless relief is provided for outlying hotels and smaller apartment buildings operation of the Kerner-Skarda act may have to be halted, the agents said.

A specific instance was presented to Treasurer McDonough by Walter Keenan, agent for the Graemere hotel, 113 North Homan avenue. He was placed in charge of the property last June, after County Judge Jarecki had appointed McDonough tax receiver for the hotel. Since that time he has paid $7,500 in delinquent taxes.

Can't Pay Taxes Now.

Since the NRA code has been adopted, Keenan said, he has had to add 14 persons to the hotel staff at almost $1,000 a month and raise the pay of certain regular employés. Thus, he said, he is now unable to operate the hotel within its income, to say nothing of paying tax money to the county.

"I am being squeezed against the wall," said Mr. Keenan. "Unless code provisions are amended there is nothing to do but withdraw."

Other agents declared their situations were similar to that of Keenan, although not quite so acute. Estimates of loss in tax revenue to the county ranged from 10 to 60 per cent.

Treasurer McDonough instructed Keenan to file a complaint with the NRA compliance board. In this he will ask the board to make an inspection of the hotel to determine whether a reduction in personnel from 99 to 85 is not justified.

2,086 Receivers Report to Court.

Judge Denis E. Sullivan, acting chief justice of the Superior court, announced yesterday that replies have been received from 2,086 of the approximately 3,000 receivers of property appointed by Superior court chancellors to the questionnaires asking the amounts of taxes delinquent on their properties. To date receivers have reported a total of delinquent taxes of $5,067,225. The first questionnaires were sent out four months ago.

DIES FROM FIRE INJURIES.

Theodore Jacubowicz, 50 years old, died yesterday in the county hospital of injuries received Tuesday when he leaped from the third floor of a burning building at 1114 West Adams street in which two companions lost their lives.

FIGHT TO OUST CHIEF JUSTICE LAUNCHED BY OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 24.—(AP)—A fight to oust the chief justice of Oklahoma's Supreme court and to reorganize the tribunal was launched today by Gov. William H. Murray, keeping a threat he made when a special court ruled against salary reductions of elected officials which "Alfalfa Bill" whipped through the last legislature.

He sent to the secretary of state, through Baxter Taylor, his attorney, a proposed initiative petition to amend the constitution, abolishing the office of Chief Justice Fletcher Riley, his bitter political foe, and permitting the governor to name a new chief justice. Other members would serve out their present terms.

"The manifest purpose of this onslaught is the destruction of the independence of the present Supreme court and the annihilation of the present chief justice," said Riley, who laughed as he read the petition.

The salary fight came on a decision from a special Supreme court, appointed by Lieut. Gov. Robert Burns in Murray's absence, that elective officers, under the constitution, must be paid during their tenure the salaries obtaining when they were elected.

CANADA WILL TRY PAGAN INDIANS IN TORTURE KILLING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 24.—Responsible leaders of the pagan Indian tribes of northern Saskatchewan are to be placed on trial in the white man's court for the "torture killing" of a religiously demented Indian, if a Royal Canadian Mounted police expedition secures confirmation of signed statements by alleged Indian witnesses.

The statements say that near Lac du Brochet the victim, returning from the hunt with the tribe, was tied into his sleigh because he became religiously abusive. When the Indians reached camp they were afraid to release him for fear that the "weetigo" or evil spirits which they supposed to possess their tribesman would get into them. Suffering intensely in slow stages of dying delirium the alleged victim froze to death, Indians reported to police.

The tribe involved is descended from warlike Chippewayans, forced to the northern barren lands by the white man, and in turn forcing the Eskimo on into the arctic rim.

TAKE SUSPECT TO FORT WAYNE.

Yardsel O. Bachtal, 33 years old, arrested Tuesday in Chicago, was taken to Fort Wayne yesterday for questioning concerning the murder of William Lewis of Fort Wayne, whose bullet riddled body was found floating in the Elkhart river near Rome City.

MRS. BLACKLIDGE GUILTY OF LOVE THEFT; MUST PAY

$7,500 Awarded to Police Wife by Jury.

not humanly possible for one man to shower love on two women.

"No, gentlemen, it isn't possible. It's the thrill, the lust for the other woman, which drives out his love for his wife."

Attorney Tate described Mrs. Nottingham as "an honorable, home loving little woman who has remained a lady through all of this."

His voice trembled as he spoke of "the home graced by the love of a 7 year old child" and of "little Jeanette, the saddest figure in this triangle situation."

Dramatic Plea to Jury.

Mr. Tate urged the jurors to consider their duty to protect the rights of "a wife who's taken the oath to love, honor, and obey her husband until death do us part." He pointed out "the sanctity of the marriage bond." In fact, he declared, it was the opportunity of a lifetime for the jury to be able to return a verdict awarding the wife damages. The juror who is the father of seven children opened his eyes with a jerk at this point.

In heartfelt accents Attorney Tate declared:

"You know, gentlemen, whenever I take a street car or an elevated at night, and pass by all the little homes in Chicago lighted up, I think that each little light blinking away is a symbol of some man's love."

The red haired wife of Attorney Tate, sitting at the press table, gazed with moist blue eyes as she heard this.

"But, gentlemen, think how false those lights can be," Mr. Tate went on sorrowfully.

A Romantic Finish.

At the close he got down to concrete matters.

"You don't have to find that Mrs. Blacklidge committed adultery with Mr. Nottingham to return a guilty verdict," Mr. Tate said. "We do know from her letters that she hated to go to bed alone at night. We do know that she wanted to be held tight, in his arms, and, O, boy, how his kisses did affect her."

As he concluded, only juror No. 12 appeared animated. In being qualified as a juror, No. 12 had answered the question as to whether he had ever had any domestic difficulty with an indignant, "No sir. No, siree."

Juror No. 2 was smiling. He was one of two jurors who at the noon recess had gained permission to go with a bailiff to keep appointments with their wives.

Myrtle's Lawyer Speaks.

Attorney Eugene Meegan of Mrs. Blacklidge's counsel followed Attorney Tate in the final arguments to the jury.

He began by pointing out that Mrs. Blacklidge, a niece of former Gov. John Tanner of Illinois, "was raised under the very dome of the capitol." She had risen to political power and in her time helped many friends, he said. Then he asked querulously: "But where are they today?"

"On the 8th of April, 1930, she had a husband. But that night the burden of heavy sorrow cast forth its veil. Her husband died. Within a fortnight this heavy veil of sorrow was again cast forth. Her son, all she had left, was taken away, too.

Her Money Lost, He Says.

"Then one of those things that no one can account for happened. She lost all her money. Some one else lost his at the same time and wanted to persecute her for it. So she lost her job."

This apparently was a reference to the famous faro game of 1931 at Springfield in which Mrs. Blacklidge lost $50,000 belonging to Edward R. Litsinger, politician and attorney. Litsinger charged that Mrs. Blacklidge lost the money in collusion with swindlers and three days afterward she resigned as collector of internal revenue. Attorney Meegan went on:

"There she was, gentlemen of the jury, without husband, son, friends, job or money. Then this man Nottingham stepped into her life and said, 'Is there anything I can do for you?'"

Despite the apparent depth of Attorney Meegan's emotion at this time, a snicker went around the crowded courtroom and the clerk rapped for order.

"Yes," Meegan continued, "he started taking her out. A bond of affection developed. It was just like a snowball, gentlemen—the more it rolled along, the more it grew and grew."

He then pointed out that "it is not human nature for a woman to chase a man, but it is human nature for a man to chase a woman." He asked the jury to consider that Mrs. Nottingham could have stopped the snowball, but that she didn't. Instead, he said, she awaited her opportunity to collect.

"Mrs. Nottingham watched Mrs. Blacklidge like a cat watches a mouse," Meegan declared. "Why? For dollars and cents! That's the way she measures her husband's love. We don't say Mrs. Nottingham wasn't wronged, that she shouldn't feel bad, that she should go out and brag, but why didn't she stop it? We don't say Mrs. Blacklidge wasn't guilty of indiscretions, of poor judgment, but are there any of us who hasn't slipped a little bit?"

As his final plea Attorney Meegan made the statement that he himself was inexperienced, and added:

"There wouldn't be any case here if it weren't for Mrs. Blacklidge's past career and the publicity value of this case. Well, Myrtle Blacklidge didn't have the kind of money to hire counsel to defend her as she ought to be defended. I can't make the eloquent speeches plaintiff's counsel makes, but I'm doing the best I can, gentlemen.

"I want to thank the court, too, for being so patient with me, when I know I must have tried his patience many times."

QUITS MOVIE ROLE

MRS. VIRGINIA LEHMANN.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Mrs. Virginia Peine Lehmann, separated wife of Edward J. Lehmann, Chicago department store scion, today walked out of her part as a dialogue speaking show girl in "Bottoms Up," movie musical comedy, saying "Not for ten thousand dollars" when shown the costume she was supposed to wear.

The young woman, the daughter of Adolphus Peine of Chicago, whose motion picture name is "Virginia Pine," was supposed to wear a chorus costume including silk hat, tuxedo coat, stiff shirt, dinner vest, very short shorts, and opera length hose. Her previous scenes in the movie in which she and seven other show girls do voice bits will not be taken out of the completed picture. She is studying a rôle for a stage part in a play to be put in, in the future, at Pasadena Community playhouse.

THE MORNING SESSION

Before the formal opening of the morning session of court Judge Weaver heard arguments in chambers as to whether Nottingham could be a witness for Mrs. Blacklidge against his wife. Mrs. Blacklidge's attorneys, Meegan, John Henrick, and William R. Crow, argued that the old common law rule forbidding husbands and wives to testify against each other did not apply in a civil suit for damages.

The lawyers said outside of court that Nottingham was eager to take the stand and confess philandering with other women earlier in his married career and to give a close-up picture of the Nottingham home life. The lawyers intimated that this was far from tranquil even before Mrs. Blacklidge entered the picture.

Judge Mounts the Bench.

At 10:45 a. m. Judge Weaver emerged from chambers and mounted the bench. His clerk rapped for order and asked that every one in the courtroom rise. Almost half of the spectators already were standing, being wedged along walls and inside the railing opposite the jury.

The staff of bailiffs and deputy sheriffs was increased to maintain order. Many by now familiar faces of women were in the front row, most of them friends of Mrs. Blacklidge or Mrs. Nottingham.

Judge Weaver announced his decision as to whether Nottingham could testify for Mrs. Blacklidge.

"I don't believe that under the Illinois statutes Nottingham is a competent witness," the judge said. "It's true a recent United States Supreme court ruling held that the old rule prohibiting husband and wife from testifying against each other was no longer operative in federal courts, and I think in time the states will adopt that rule, but until they do he's not a competent witness."

Myrtle on Stand Again.

Mrs. Blacklidge was then called again as a witness in her own defense. She told the jury about her own sleuthing activities. The day before the jurors had listened to Mrs. Nottingham telling about her detective work, which Mrs. Nottingham considered successful as it revealed her husband and Mrs. Blacklidge together in a more or less unclad state on several occasions.

Mrs. Blacklidge was questioned by Attorney Meegan.

Q.—Now, Mrs. Blacklidge, you've been near the home of Mrs. Nottingham numerous times? A.—Yes.

Q.—Tell the jury what you saw. [Mrs. Nottingham's counsel objected unless the time were fixed.]

MRS. BLACKLIDGE [turning to Judge Weaver and addressing him snappily]—Judge, I've been there lots of times. Shall I tell all I saw?

JUDGE WEAVER—Proceed.

MRS. BLACKLIDGE—Well, since last August I've been doing a little spying myself, inasmuch as she was doing so much. At 11:30 o'clock last Friday night I parked myself across the street from her home [8453 Vernon avenue] and waited there. At 2:30 a. m. Saturday she came home. All I can say is that she was rather wobbly as she walked in.

Q. [by Attorney Meegan]—Did you observe her at any night late in August? A.—Yes, I was watching the delicatessen at 1736 West 51st street one night. I often saw her car parked in front of that delicatessen, where she visited lots. On this night I saw her sitting in her car with a man who wore a straw hat. I saw her arm around him, and his around her.

Under Meegan's questioning, Mrs. Blacklidge testified that it would require almost a truckload of bushel baskets and boxes to make a pile high enough for a woman to climb up to the roof of the store adjoining Mrs. Blacklidge's apartment at 219 East 79th street. Mrs. Nottingham had previously testified that it was thus she had reached a vantage point on the roof, from which she spied into the apartment and saw Mrs. Blacklidge and Nottingham partly disrobed.

Attorney Tate took up the cross-examination of Mrs. Blacklidge. During this questioning Mrs. Blacklidge once turned to Judge Weaver and said: "Should I answer, Judge?" The judge said she should.

Q. [by Attorney Tate]—You told the jury you were hanging around the Nottingham home. Why were you? A.—Sure I was. I wanted to see what she was doing. She was always trying to see what I was doing. I knew she wasn't home all the time by a long shot. I was trying to protect myself.

Q.—But you weren't trying to protect yourself when you kept him away from his wife and baby, were you? A.—That's his business, not mine. I don't care if a man's home with his family.

Q.—You're not interested? A.—No, I'm not.

Q.—Didn't you call his home several times? A.—No.

Q.—Did he ever buy you groceries or liquor? A.—No, never.

Mrs. Nottingham Again.

Mrs. Nottingham was then called as a rebuttal witness by Attorney Tate. She testified that at 2:30 a. m. on Saturday when, according to Mrs. Blacklidge's testimony, Mrs. Nottingham was entering her home in a "wobbly" condition, she was parked in the alley behind Mrs. Blacklidge's flat in 79th street.

Mrs. Nottingham said she saw Mrs. Blacklidge escorted home by Nottingham and another policeman. When she saw that the two men left Mrs. Blacklidge at the door, she too went home, she said.

ATTORNEY TATE—Did you ever sit in front of your home and kiss any man? A.—Never. I wouldn't think of such a thing, being married.

LAWYERS AGREE TO END TURMOIL IN RACKET CASE

First of 300 Witnesses Takes Stand.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

The first of 300 witnesses through whom the state expects to prove a racket conspiracy in the cleaning and dyeing, beverage distribution, and linen supply industries of Chicago took the stand yesterday before Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan and a jury in Criminal court.

The witness, Joseph Golden, owner of a tailor shop at 903 North Damen avenue, spent an hour and a half in a recital of what happened to his shop and other property when he quit a union of the dye shops in 1931 and joined an independent group outside the influence of the Cleaners and Dyers institute, organized by one of the main defendants, Dr. Benjamin M. Squires.

Tells of Quitting.

"I joined the union about seven years ago," Golden began, provoking vociferous objections from some of the thirteen lawyers representing eighteen defendants on trial.

"After about three years I quit and joined the Cook County Retail Tailors' Business Men's association—I was a business man and not a laborer," evoking a second thunder of objections.

"I changed dealers then and sent my bundles to the cleaning plant of Krause Bros. & Louie instead of my old plant, Rose & Miller—and then the trouble began."

Trial "Like a Riot."

Objections on behalf of Dr. Squires, Ald. Oscar F. Nelson, Attorney Aaron Sapiro of New York, and other defendants were now coming so fast that Floyd Thompson, former chief justice of the Illinois Supreme court, observed the proceeding was "going like a riot." Mr. Thompson, as counsel for Ald. Nelson, who was excused to attend a city council meeting, suggested a recess to agree on an orderly defense procedure. The recess was taken and the lawyers returned to the fray with an agreement on a blanket objection to all the witness might say, said objection to be recorded when Golden had finished his story.

Thereafter, the witness proceeded in a calmer atmosphere, but speaking in a thick accent and betraying such vagueness as to dates that Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber was heard occasionally to berate him under his breath.

"The day after I changed plants I got a call from Krause Brothers and Louie that they couldn't return my bundle," he said. "So I went over there and found Jim Gorman, Al Boris, Charlie Goldstein and a bunch of other union men around the plant.

Threatened with "Ride."

"'You can't go in — there's a strike,'" the witness quoted Gorman as warning him, and continued, "I went in any way, came out and saw Gorman talking to a man who climbed into a car. The car followed me back to my plant and between Madison and Augusta streets rammed my car. The fenders and engine were ruined, so I got out my pencil to take his number when he said, 'Get out, you son of a ——, and quit playing strikebreaker or you're going for a ride.'"

The tailor was warming up over his grievances by now and proceeded without further urging from Prosecutor Raber. The prosecutor asked him what happened when he advertised a price below the one set by the Cleaners and Dyers institute.

"I advertised hat cleaning at 25 cents a hat," he said. "First the pickup, a member of the Laundry and Dye House Drivers' union, refused to pickup man, a member of the Laundry and Dye House Drivers' union, refused to pick up my bundle unless I took down the sign. I left the sign. That night some men went by in a car and with a slingshot fired a big ball bearing at my plant. It smashed the show window to pieces."

"Such Grand Characters."

Golden was still on the stand when court adjourned. Earlier in the session Attorney Benedict Short, on behalf of the defendant Morris Kaplan, who was lawyer for the Cleaners and Dyers' institute, the Beverage Distributors' institute, and the Linen Supply association, excoriated the state for charging conspiracy against "such grand characters as my client and the other defendants here."

"Conspirators?" thundered Attorney Short. "Can you charge that against that eminent philosopher, Dr. Squires of the University of Chicago; against that renowned lawyer, Attorney Sapiro, the greatest authority on labor contracts in the North America, and against these grand old labor leaders of our city?"

The defendants thus designated permitted themselves faint smiles. Mr. Raber, who had been champing vigorously on a tobacco quid, shoved his left foot out to hook a cuspidor closer to his chair. His foot brushed the defense attorney, interrupting his address.

"I beg your pardon," said Attorney Short with forced suavity. "Now, don't stir, my dear fellow. Don't trouble at all. I wouldn't harm a hair of your head."

Aims Shot at Prosecutor.

"There's a conspiracy here, but it's on the other side," he pursued, aiming a shot at State's Attorney Courtney. "The evidence will show that this prosecution was begun only after certain individuals contributed to Mr. Courtney's campaign and that the former private secretary of the Employers' Association of Chicago is now private secretary for Mr. Raber, special prosecutor in this case."

Without developing that theme further, Short passed on to the plight of another defendant, Jerry Donovan, of the Beverage Drivers' union, reading a statement submitted by Donovan's counsel, former Municipal Judge William R. Fetzer. Attorney Fetzer had waived an opening statement, Short explained, and nominated him to do the task.

"Man of great vision—always merited highest praise, and at no time in his creditable career was ever associated with—well, this is a bit thick and calls for a conclusion," Attorney Short conceded as he skimmed the statement. "But the idea is that Mr. Donovan is an old line labor leader. I've known him myself for many years, and he couldn't be in a conspiracy with Al Capone—no, not any more than those pillars of Hercules, Attorneys Kaplan and Sapiro, nor that eminent philosopher and servant of the federal government, Dr. Squires."

Attorney Short paused to mop his brow. Prosecutor Raber chuckled inwardly at his adversary's metaphors, and Raber's assistant, Dodd Healy, threw the jurors a malicious smile. In a few moments Short subsided and the first witness was on.

Lily and a Nickel.

Dr. Squires, since Jan. 1, chairman of the joint industrial conference board of area No. 1, under the NRA is now drawing a federal salary for "doing precisely the same things the state indicted him for," his attorney, James E. McShane, declared in his opening statement.

"My client went into the racket-ridden cleaning industry at the request of the Chicago Association of Commerce, the state's attorney, John Swanson, and the United States attorney, George E. Q. Johnson," Mr. McShane said. "Such men as Al Capone, Hershie Miller, and George [Bugs] Moran were then important factors in the industry. They did not propose to let Dr. Squires ruin their racket, and soon after he took charge as general manager of the Cleaners and Dyers' institute Dr. Squires received a box containing a lily and a nickel in token that he was a despised interloper who would soon be going for a ride."

Stays at His Post.

Notwithstanding this threat, Attorney McShane declared, Dr. Squires stayed at his post, attempting to stabilize the industry with sales and agreements and wage contracts of such merit that they formed a pattern for the present NRA codes.

"Dr. Squires' specified salary was $25,000 a year," the lawyer continued. "Of this he drew only $17,000, out of which he used $6,000 for expenses. Every penny of the $50,000 otherwise collected on the fee of 2 per cent of their gross business assessed to members was accounted for by expenditures on advertising and promotion of the institute."

Any violence occurring during Dr. Squires' régime was instituted by institute members who had broken their trade agreements, or by independent cleaners, who resisted joining the institute, McShane said he would prove. He cited the case of the Michigan Cleaners and Dyers, whose president, Louis Holman, was once indicted and who, McShane said, once paid the fugitive Murray Humphries a sum of money by check to sabotage the institute.

Offer from Capone.

"Morris Becker, one of the biggest independents, had Al Capone as partner," McShane recalled. "Capone was dissatisfied with this sphere of influence and sent word to Dr. Squires that his gang would 'police' the industry for half of the 2 per cent assessment the institute was collecting from members. Dr. Squires refused."

"Capone's reply was: 'I knew the doctor wouldn't deal with me, but I am going to take over the industry am going to take over the industry, anyway,'" Attorney McShane declared.

Aware of the power then wielded by Capone, now serving a prison term in the Atlanta penitentiary, Dr. Squires called a meeting of the institute to tell members they must choose between him and Capone, Mr. McShane declared. The sentiment of the meeting was almost unanimous for Dr. Squires, he said.

In an opening statement for six defendants holding office in the Dye House Drivers' and Inside Workers' unions, Attorney William E. Rodriquiz made a bitter attack on Gordon L. Hostetter, secretary of the Employers' association. The defense charged the Employers' association instigated and assisted the state's attorney's office in building up the conspiracy case.

HELD ON ROBBERY CHARGE.

George Bondi, 19 years old, 1928 Monroe street, alleged to have participated in a $2,700 office robbery on March 14, 1933, was held to the grand jury in bond of $10,000 yesterday by Judge Edward S. Scheffler.

Weissmuller and Wife Reported Apart

Johnny Weissmuller, former Chicago swimmer, and his wife, Lupe Velez, actress, who are reported in Hollywood to have separated. They were secretly married in Las Vegas, Nev., last October. Lupe is said to have told friends that they are unable to get along with each other.

WEISSMULLER AND LUPE VELEZ DECIDE TO PART

Divorce Hinges on Result of "Trial Separation."

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Lupe Velez, the Mexican film actress, made it formal today—the announcement of her separation from Johnny Weissmuller, her swimmer-actor husband, after less than four months of marriage.

Through her studio Lupe let it be known that no divorce is contemplated immediately, that she and Weissmuller will begin at once a "trial separation," after which they would "see what happens."

Weissmuller, she said, would leave their Spanish type Beverly Hills home today and take up residence in a hotel.

The sudden end of their romance became known last night when Lupe, at the fights in Hollywood with her husband as usual, was quoted as saying that they had reached the parting of the ways.

News to Me—Weissmuller.

But Weissmuller today said he was astonished to read of the separation—and that made it all rather mysterious.

"We went to the fights," he said, "and on to a club later, and all was swell. Then we had a fuss, and I went into another room to sleep. I suppose, I'm going out today, but I don't know where."

As for Lupe, she reiterated her declaration made through the studio.

"We will try a separation for eight days," she said, "and then if we can no longer stand each other I will sue for a divorce."

No Other Man, She Says.

Asked on what grounds, she said: "O, I'll have to see my lawyer about those. I love Johnny, and he loves me, but we have two terrible tempers. We fight all the time, and it isn't worth it. There is no other man—and no other woman."

Lupe, who made her first big impression on Hollywood opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho," a silent picture, and Weissmuller, the swimming champion, who became the talkies first "Tarzan of the Ape," were married in Las Vegas, Nev., last Oct. 8, but they denied the marriage until almost a month later.

WYNEKOOP CASE JUDGE WILL BE CHOSEN MONDAY

Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan of the Criminal court announced yesterday that he will not reassign the murder case of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop until Monday morning. Earlier in the day the judge said he would pick the trial judge this morning, but late in the afternoon he declared that the press of other business forced him to postpone the assignment.

It is understood the case will not be returned to Judge Joseph B. David, who granted a mistrial because of the doctor's illness last Monday. Judge David leaves on a vacation tomorrow.

When the new judge is named attorneys for the defense will move to obtain release of Dr. Wynekoop on bond so that she may enter a hospital. Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty has announced he will oppose this move and ask for an early trial date.

Dr. Wynekoop, who is charged with the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, spent a comfortable night in her private cell. Jail attaches said that her condition continues to improve.

TWO BOYS HURT, SEIZED IN CRASH OF STOLEN AUTO

Three youths fleeing in a stolen automobile from a squad of policemen collided with another car early today at 50th street and Damen avenue and then crashed into a gasoline filling station. The stolen car was wrecked and two of the trio, injured, were captured. The third escaped, although several shots were fired at him by his pursuers.

Stanley Zabawa, 19 years old, 1256 West 50th street, is the youth most seriously hurt. He was taken to the Bridewell hospital, where it was said he might die of his injuries. John Cledo, 18 years old, 4717 South Hermitage avenue, his companion, was only slightly injured. The lad who escaped is Al Zabawa, 17 years old, brother of Stanley.

The chase started at 50th and Honoré streets when Policemen Edward Hazzard, Kenneth Ebby, and William Geegan saw the trio pass at high speed in the car, which had been stolen in front of 1438 West Garfield boulevard a half hour before. Heading west at high speed, the youths struck the car of Anthony Paulus, 4311 South Wood street, a county highway policeman, and then swerved into the Cornell Square filling station. Paulus was cut and bruised.

INSULL A MENACE TO TIES WITH U.S., GREECE RULES

State Council Confirms Expulsion by Jan. 31.

BY EUGENE SPECK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Jan. 24.—Having lost his appeal before the state council to remain in Greece, Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities promoter, became ostensibly a bedridden campaigner who, with only seven days left to stay in this country, shifted his fight against expulsion from his own sickroom.

There tomorrow the first salvo of the new struggle will be fired when he receives a governmental notification that the time for him to leave is drawing near.

Insull has been so ill, according to sources close to the old man, that he was not told for some time of the state council's decision.

The state council early this morning published its decision upholding the order issued by Minister of Interior John Moundjourides last December. This order terminated Insull's residence permit and fixed the time of departure as Jan. 31.

Brands Insull as Menace.

The council ruled that Moundjourides' notification was essentially an administrative act normally falling within its jurisdiction as a domestic matter. In this case, however, the decision holds that the Insull order is not an internal question. The old man has become an international irritation, harmful to Greco-American relations, and he is be removed by the government in the interests of the country. On these grounds the council deemed itself unable to intervene and the plea was rejected.

Insull was ordered to pay the costs of the appeal, which amounted to $22.

The text of the council's decision follows:

"Whereas, the granting or refusal by the minister of the interior of a sojourn permit to an alien, according to the provision of law 4310, constitutes an act of administration which in itself allows an appeal to the council of state, in so far as it comes under any provisions of law 3713, and

Basis of Ruling Political.

"Whereas, in the concrete case in hand as stated officially in the minister of interior's letter to the council of state dated Jan. 3, 1934, said minister by his decision dated Dec. 19, 1933, against which the appeal has been entered, refused to grant an extension of sojourn in Greece to the appellant, a citizen of the United States of America, and was led to this refusal by the consideration that it was necessary in support of the Greek government's policy of maintaining the traditional friendly relations between the United States and Greece and the existence of such a political reason concerning Greece's international relation is borne out by the elements contained in the documents of the case and was attested to in proceedings before the court.

"On the other hand, to judge the validity of such reason, which pertains to the government's general policy, does not come within the competency of the council of state, [see article 46, point C, law 3713], and Appeal Is Dismissed.

"Whereas, Under the foregoing circumstances the decision against which the appeal has been entered is a government act against which appeal is excluded by said article 46, in so far as it is manifest that it is based upon diplomatic reasons, hence the appeal should be dismissed;

"Now, therefore, the council dismisses the appeal of Samuel Insull and orders him to pay the costs of the present proceedings. It orders the appellant's deposit to be turned in to the public treasury."

It was intimated tonight that Insull may be given another short extension of time, provided it is definitely proved that he is really ill, in order that he may become fit for travel. But Moundjourides must be convinced that is the case, he said tonight.

"I will not be played with," Moundjourides declared. "Tomorrow Insull will be notified that his stay in Greece is nearly ended. He might be granted an extra period of ten to fourteen days, provided it is demonstrated to my satisfaction that he is a sick man.

Will Probe Insull's Claims.

"If Insull opposes the order to leave Greece, I will send a physician in whom I have complete confidence to make my own investigation. I am not going to receive the blame for forcing travel on an aged invalid, nor will I be tricked into granting an extra stay at the last minute when I have not time to learn the facts. If Insull is going to base his claim to remain in Greece hereafter on ill health and inability to travel, the government will have to be satisfied that that is the case. If necessary, we will make periodic examinations — and keep him under continuous medical observation."

Denis Lazarimos, one of Insull's attorneys, tonight said:

"We will have to respect the council's decision. The matter is now in the hands of the ministry of interior. Our appeal was on a constitutional issue and I would like to point out that there was nothing in the evidence to indicate in any way that the action of the government or the decision of the council was due to pressure by the American government."

Reports here tonight said Insull had hired a plane for a secret flight, but there is every reason to believe he will hang on in Greece as long as possible.

POISONED BY MISTAKE; DIES.

Mrs. Mary Brockmeyer, 42 years old, 2047 Pierce avenue, died yesterday in St. Elizabeth hospital after she had taken poison from a bottle which she had mistaken for a mouth wash container in the bathroom of her home.

ARMY AND NAVY BESET BY SWARM OF BUREAUCRATS

Pay Rollers Overrun Both Departments.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—The vastness of the bureaucracy of the army and the navy is clearly demonstrated when an effort is made to walk through the corridors of the buildings which house their Washington headquarters.

One can walk blocks and blocks without ever losing sight of civilian and military employés, working or toiling over endless rows of desks. A visit to this labyrinthal administrative headquarters of the American armed forces gives first a feeling of awe over the countless numbers of payrollers; then of doubt that they can be managed with anything approaching efficiency, and finally of resentment that taxpayers' funds should be so wasted.

A Mile of Payrollers.

It is a mile's walk from one end of the army's munitions building to the other, and if one supposes that this is stored with any munitions, he is mistaken. It is overflowing with junior clerks, senior clerks, technicians, stenographers, file clerks, office boys, lieutenants, majors, generals, ad finitum. The adjoining Navy building is about as large.

The necessity for these two bureaucratic strongholds is due for an airing before congress this summer. Representative Joseph W. Byrns, [Dem., Tenn.] majority leader of the house, and Representative John J. McSwain, [Dem., S. C.], chairman of the house military affairs committee, both have announced intentions of providing for proper investigations of the expenditures of both the army and the navy. Mr. Byrns favors the consolidation of bureaus within both the army and the navy, but in the broader view, the consolidation of the army and the navy into one department for national defense, with one bureau for the army, another for the navy and a third for a unified air corps.

Know Little of What Goes On.

An independent survey into the possibilities of merging bureaus within either the navy or the war department led to a conclusion that if both establishments are to keep the thousands of payrollers in their jobs, consolidations will be difficult to effect. It is difficult now for a bureau head to know what goes on in his own branch. For example, when an underofficer in the army ordnance department recently expressed willingness to discuss a matter with which he was familiar, but insisted that his chief must first give his consent, inquiry was then made to the chief of ordnance, Maj. Gen. Samuel Hof, who was quite unaware of the fact that a study of the subject was being made in his own department.

However, it is easily reckoned by congressional critics that if the unnecessary activities in both naval and army establishments could be dispensed with, and modern business methods installed, thousands of employés could be dispensed with, and many consolidations effected.

Compared with Tribune Tower.

Some idea of the immensity of the two departments may be gained from a consideration of the office space each occupies in the District of Columbia alone. The war department has total office space of 1,236,141 square feet, and the navy department, 548,180 square feet, both exclusive of corridors, stairways or other non-usable spaces.

For purposes of comparison, it may be noted that THE TRIBUNE Tower has a net office space of 181,000 square feet. Thus, to house the administrative and clerical activities of the army in the District of Columbia alone would require nearly seven Tribune Towers, and the navy would be crowded in three Tribune Towers. Both would fit snugly in ten Tribune Towers.

The war department, on last June 30, had a total of 6,353 employes in Washington, of whom 3,765 were civilians, 847 were commissioned officers and 1,741 were enlisted men. Of the 3,765 civilians, 2,674 were employed in departmental work, and 1,091 were in field service. Outside the District of Columbia the army has 46,165 civilians in field service; 11,334 commissioned officers, 855 warrant officers and 120,883 enlisted men, a total outside the district of 179,187 employés, and a grand total of 185,540.

Where the Money Goes.

The government budget now before congress, for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, lists 2,424 civilian employés in the war department offices in Washington, at a total cost of $4,168,936.

The division of this clerical army and of the expense is as follows:

	Employés.	Amt.
Secretary's office	129	$ 241,167
Chief of staff	118	196,809
Adjutant general	766	1,221,777
Military personnel records	78	87,840
Inspector general	13	22,505
Judge advocate general	53	95,095
Chief of finance	188	325,877
Quartermaster general	366	697,739
Chief signal officer	54	91,525
Chief of air corps	115	193,340
Surgeon general	149	240,763
Insular affairs	42	72,035
Chief of engineers	57	108,296
Chief of ordnance	179	377,037
Chief of chemical warfare section	22	45,312
Chief of coast artillery	33	22,417
National Guard bureau	82	127,604
Totals	2,424	$4,168,936

It should be emphasized that this list does not include civilians in field service here, nor does it include any officers or enlisted men. These classifications are not given separately in the budget estimates, but on the same basis as of June 30, there would be 3,600 of these working in the District of Columbia.

The propaganda department of the navy was not able to produce any adequate figures concerning its personnel in Washington. However, the 1935 budget carries estimates for 1,736 civilian employés in the navy department offices in Washington, and it is estimated there are 400 officers detailed here.

How Navy Spends Cash.

The navy's great civilian battalion in its Washington offices and its cost is split up as follows:

	Employés.	Amount.
Secretary's office	72	$ 154,800
General board	5	11,304
Examining and retiring boards	5	9,540
Compensation board	2	6,156
Records and library	18	30,672
Judge advocate general	44	104,940
Chief of naval operations	37	61,830
Board of inspection and survey	8	13,516
Naval communications	66	108,720
Naval intelligence	20	32,760
Bureau of navigation	235	407,943
Hydrographical office	165	337,856
Observatory	73	149,904
Engineering	120	208,470
Construction and repair	129	312,670
Ordnance	88	134,703
Supplies and accounts	410	683,670
Medicine and surgery	47	69,048
Yards and docks	104	251,450
Aeronautics	108	237,078
Totals	1,736	$3,388,620

There are 147 civilian employés in Washington for the marine corps under the navy department as follows:

	Employés.	Amount.
Major general commandant	58	$ 94,939
Paymaster	25	40,661
Quartermaster	64	105,920
Totals	147	$241,516

Thus it is shown that each of the three of the United States military services has duplicative bureaus, which in a general consolidation would be merged.

Many Duplications.

Each has a paymaster, although the army terms him the "chief of finance," and in the navy it is "supplies and accounts." Each has a quartermaster. The army and navy each has many duplicative officers and departments, although, as may be seen, the titles differ slightly in some instances.

Not only are there duplications between the departments but within each department as well, it is pointed out. Leaders in congress, intent upon effecting a new deal of economy and efficiency for both establishments, declare that in the army and navy both many of the clerical and accounting bureaus could easily be joined if the driftwood were once weeded out.

Secedes from China

SHANGHAI, Jan. 25. [Thursday.]—(AP)—Reports from Moscow of establishment of an independent government in Sinkiang province, one of the western outer territories of China, were considered here as confirmation of a situation which already existed, National government officials said today.

No other reports of a new government at Kashgar, professing independence of the National government, have been received, the officials added, but they felt the development likely.

Following Mohammedan uprisings in west Singiang months ago, they asserted, the district was plunged into disorder and Chinese were massacred. Authorities in the province refused to accept National government orders, it was said.

HOUSE PASSES APPROPRIATION BILL FOR NAVY

Sea Defense Cost to Be 284 Millions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Through the house today sailed the navy's 1935 appropriation bill carrying 284 million dollars for the operation and maintenance of the sea arm of the national defense in the coming fiscal year.

Big navy advocates, riding a sudden wave of naval sentiment in congress, found cause in its passage for both jubilation and regret. Their intention of attaching full treaty navy legislation to the appropriation measure was frustrated by a delicate parliamentary situation. But the bill as adopted provides for the construction of ships enough to bring the fleet to treaty strength, barring consideration of over age and obsolete craft.

"Five Year" Bill Up Next Week.

The so-called Vinson bill, authorizing a five year naval construction program to cost some 380 million dollars, will be brought onto the floor of the house probably this week, it was learned, and will find the full support of administration leaders. Its author, Chairman Carl Vinson [Dem., Ga.] of the naval affairs committee, today introduced a resolution calling for a special rule to govern the bill's consideration, and favorable action by the rules committee is expected.

The Vinson measure authorizes the President to undertake at once a naval building program which will replace all over age vessels by 1939 and bring the fleet to its full complement of modern warships under existing treaties. An appropriation of between 20 and 25 millions is to be asked this session, according to present plans, for the purpose of beginning construction on about twenty ships.

Britten Flays Bill.

Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.] branded the 284 million dollar naval appropriation bill as legislative fraud just before its passage in the house. In addition to the amount supplied in the bill, he asserted, the navy will receive during the fiscal year 1935 some 147 million dollars which the public works administration has already allocated.

"The naval appropriation bill about to be passed carries a regular budget appropriation of 284 million dollars," said Mr. Britten. "That is lower than it has been for many years. I think the administration and the gentlemen who framed this bill are to be complimented on it. They have done a great work of bookkeeping. It is in line with the New Deal in many other respects, where gentlemen on the Democratic side of the aisle are covering up their crowding deficiencies.

Talk Is Sarcastic.

"The fact of the matter is that this bill actually carries 431 millions. That will not be shown in the budget; I mean in the real budget. A great portion of it, 147 millions, will ultimately come out in some other budget, not the regular budget, because under the New Deal the regular budget will have to be balanced.

"In other words," Mr. Britten went on, "it is going to cost 431 million dollars to run the navy next year, but, because that would look like a lot of money, we will take 147 millions out of the PWA. They do not have to account for the vast expenditures of the PWA. They are carried in an auxiliary budget, and thus the cost of the navy for the next year will appear unusually low. The budget, under the new deal, simply must appear to be balanced.

"I want to compliment the Democratic majority," he continued, "because this is in line with all of the other hoodwinkery that has been going on in connection with their foolish suggestions that they will have a balanced budget this year."

For ship construction next year the appropriation bill carries $33,619,334. This figure includes $1,200,000 added to the budget estimates by the appropriation committee for beginning construction of three six inch gun cruisers and $400,000 for beginning work on one eight inch gun cruiser. When completed these ships, together with fifty-four other warships now being built with regular appropriations and PWA funds, will bring the fleet to treaty strength except for over age vessels.

Orders Blue Eagle Taken Away from Loop Saloon

Andrew A. Bruce, chairman of the local NRA compliance board, yesterday received a telegram from Administrator Hugh S. Johnson instructing him to remove the Blue Eagle insignia from Kozer's Beer tavern, 123 West Madison street. This is the fourth Blue Eagle revoked in this district. The insignia is being removed, Mr. Bruce said, because men are being worked eighty-four hours a week for only 50 cents a day in the food dispensing part of the saloon.

LEE TAKES STAND; DEFENDS SELF IN INSURANCE CASE

Attorney Denies Plot to Loot Firm.

Attorney John H. S. Lee, associate in the law firm headed by former Senator Charles S. Deneen, took the witness stand in his own behalf yesterday afternoon in Judge Benjamin Epstein's Criminal court, where he is codefendant with five other men on charges of conspiracy to loot the treasury of the Security Life Insurance company and its affiliate, the Northern States Insurance company.

Judge Epstein on Tuesday ruled that the state had failed to produce any evidence against Lee on ten of the eighteen counts in the indictment, so the ten counts were dismissed.

Lee Defends Action.

Lee on the witness stand defended his action in the litigation whereby he had originally obtained an interest in the 30 acre tract of land near Waukegan, held by the Manufacturers' Terminal corporation. The prosecution charges this land was mortgaged for $1,900,000 and the mortgages then dumped into the portfolios of the insurance companies. The prosecution contends the property is worth only $500,000.

The defendant said he took the hotly contested litigation on a contingent basis. After the litigation was finished Lee testified he took 29 per cent of the stock in the corporation in payment for his fee and that 69 per cent of the stock was in possession of Harry W. Huttig, another defendant. James H. Benjamin, who was one of the state's main witnesses, had only one share, Lee said, as a result of other financial deals in which he was involved, whereby he had placed his shares up as collateral.

Denies Any Conspiracy.

Attorney Lee categorically denied that he was in any conspiracy to overvalue the property and dump mortgages into the treasuries of the insurance companies. In fact, he said, he opposed several transactions proposed by Charles R. Surface and Benjamin, who were the state witnesses. Surface and Benjamin, said Lee, tried to juggle the property for their own benefit and gain. The attorney claimed he was absolutely innocent of all the prosecution's charges.

Before Lee took the stand Attorney John J. Healy, one time state's attorney and a member of the Deneen law firm, testified that the litigation over the title of the property was legitimate. Attorney Healy represented Mrs. Harry V. Finklestein, widow of the original owner, in the suit.

The defense started yesterday with a group of prominent men taking the witness stand and testifying to the "good reputation of character" of Attorney Lee. Among these were Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university; Amos C. Miller, former president of the Chicago Bar association, and Rufus C. Dawes, president of A Century of Progress.

GERMAN BEAUTY SENT TO FRENCH PRISON AS SPY

STRASBOURG, France, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Beautiful Fraulein Sophie Drotz of Germany, woman spy chief, went to jail today for three years.

"La Belle Sophie," as she is known here, was given two terms, two years for espionage and one year for complicity in stealing a new model French machine gun.

Five men convicted of taking orders from Fraulein Drotz were jailed for one to five years each.

The woman spy chief was arrested last October in a night automobile drive toward the mandated Saar area. Her companion, a French soldier, was charged with the actual theft of the machine gun found in the car.

Hunt $3,500 Watch Lost by Mrs. John D. Black

Des Plaines street police were asked yesterday to search for a diamond studded pendant watch, valued at $3,500, which Mrs. John D. Black, wife of the president of the Chicago Bar association, lost on Jan. 14 while visiting the Haymarket square markets. The watch had been fastened to her dress. Mrs. Black said it had been in the family for several generations and had great value as an heirloom. The Ætna Insurance company, to which she first reported the loss, notified the police.

Prince Alexis Mdivani to See His Bride Tomorrow

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 24.—Prince Alexis Mdivani of Georgia [Russia], who arrived here from Yokohama after overcoming with French aid difficulties with Japanese immigration officials today, planned to return to Yokohama tomorrow to meet his bride, the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress. The honeymoon reunion, endangered when authorities looked askance at the prince's outmoded Georgian passport, is slated for Friday morning when the princess arrives from San Francisco.

ROOSEVELT OPENS LEGAL DRINKING FOR CAPITAL RESIDENTS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—(AP)—President Roosevelt late today signed the liquor license bill for the capital city in a special message to congress; however, he asked clarifying amendatory legislation.

The bill provides for sale of liquor in Washington under a license system controlled by a beverage board.

Hotels and restaurants are eligible for license and all whisky to be drunk on premises must be served at tables.

"I prefer to approve the act now, in its present form," the President said, "and to ask the congress for amendatory legislation rather than delay putting it into effect by returning it to the congress for amendment, meanwhile postponing approval."

The administration asked that it be made clear that when the provisions of the bill conflict with the codes of fair competition, the former should be subordinated.

A suggestion to congress from J. H. Choate Jr., director of the federal alcohol control administration was transmitted by the President. Choate said a proposal requiring the formula of rectified and blended distilled spirits to be stated on the label was "impractical of operation."

Mr. Choate added, "The formulas of rectified and blended spirits are changed almost from week to week depending upon the materials available to the rectifier from which to make up the rectified product." The whole label question will be taken up Friday.

HELD ON CHARGE OF OPERATING 'CHECK RACKET'

Lester Weiss of the Central Plaza hotel, 321 North Central avenue, was seized by police yesterday on a charge of operating a "bank account racket." He was arrested a few blocks from his office at 5656 West Madison street, where he said he conducted a wine business. The office, however, showed no evidence of business activity.

Police said he opened an account in the Austin State bank on Jan. 13 and deposited about $2,000 in amounts of several hundred dollars each. Last Thursday, according to bank officials, he deposited a forged check for $4,250 made payable to him and supposedly signed by the president of the Standard Paving company, 30 North La Salle street. Officials of that concern said no such check had been issued.

With the assistance of an office girl, Miss Helen Fry, 522 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, Weiss began to draw out sums after he had deposited the check, the police said. Yesterday bank officials became suspicious and had detectives trail Miss Fry back to her office after she had withdrawn $765. Weiss was seized when he kept an appointment to meet with Miss Fry. She was not held.

HOLDS AMEBIC OUTBREAK DUE TO CLOUDBURST

Doctors' Committee Says City Is Now Safe.

Chicago is as safe as it ever has been from an epidemic of amebic dysentery, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical association, on behalf of the committee of physicians whom Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, asked to investigate causes of the epidemic last summer.

Any other city is open to the same danger as Chicago, Dr. Fishbein pointed out, and he added that Chicago hotels, due to the preventive measures taken after last summer's epidemic, are safer than those in other cities. The hotels have weeded out carriers of the disease, whereas the number of carriers in hotels of other cities is roughly 3 per cent of the employés, corresponding to the percentage in the general population, he said.

Blames Heavy Rainfall.

The committee of physicians will continue its discussion of the Chicago epidemic, and in a final report on Saturday or Sunday will recommend measures to prevent its recurrence.

In a formal statement yesterday the physicians declared there was "highly presumptive evidence that the outbreak, which occasioned 784 cases and 41 deaths from dysentery among visitors to Chicago, was due to the terrific rainstorm of last July 2, when there was a rainfall of 1.63 inches within an hour.

The volume of surface drainage, according to the physicians' findings, overtaxed the old Michigan avenue sewer and caused sewage to back up into the Congress and Auditorium hotels. There, the physicians believe, there was a cross-infection of the water supply.

Many Complaints Made.

"Since the Michigan avenue mains were constructed in 1893 numerous new buildings have been added to the already overtaxed pipes. Complaints have been made to the sewage department of the city of Chicago from time to time as to the inadequacy of the sewage mains to carry off excess water during heavy rains, but no steps were ever taken to remedy the matter."

This statement brought a reply from William R. Matthews, engineer for the city sewer department, who pointed out that property owners must bear the expense of modernizing sewers serving their properties.

System "Terribly Inadequate."

"The downtown sewer system was laid in 1850," said Mr. Matthews, "and is terribly inadequate. But this situation can only be remedied by a new sewer system, paid for by the property owners themselves through the board of local improvements. It has been repeatedly proposed that a new sewer system be built by means of special assessments, but nothing was ever done."

The modernization of loop sewers was recommended in a report to the city administration about ten years ago, he added, but no action was taken. Plans for the subway were one cause of the delay.

Either the property owners affected or the city itself may initiate a special assessment project, but the final say is always with the property owners, city officials said. A public hearing must be held on the proposal, and if 50 per cent of those affected object, the project must be dropped.

APPOINTS NEW BOARD TO DRAFT BUILDING CODE

Mayor Kelly yesterday appointed a new commission to complete the revision of the building code undertaken over five years ago under a former administration. The members of the new commission are:

Chairman, F. J. Thielbarr; secretary, Walter Crapo; architects, Zachary Davis, Richard E. Schmidt, Howard White, Joseph W. McCarthy, Alfred Alschuler, R. C. Ostergren, J. C. Bollenbacher; structural engineers, Peter Hein, C. H. Wescott, Benjamin B. Shapiro, A. J. Hammond, R. R. Leffler; mechanical and electrical engineers, G. W. Hubbard, J. A. Sutherland, Harry Clute, W. I. Bell.

Other members are John Plant, fire prevention engineer; Al Gorman, assistant corporation counsel; Patrick Sullivan and Victor Olander, representing labor, and a council subcommittee comprising Aldermen Frank J. Corr [17th], John J. Coughlin [1st], James J. McDermott [14th], Harold Perry [18th], William V. Pacelli [20th], Thomas J. Terrell [29th], and Oscar F. Nelson [26th].

The old commission was discharged from its task several months ago and the mayor asked to appoint a new commission.

Jail Term or Dose of Castor Oil Penalty for Imbibing

JUDGE ORDERS CASTOR OIL OR JAIL FOR DRUNKS

Strong Men Shudder in Edelman's Court.

Municipal Judge Leon Edelman poured drinks yesterday for the headache squad which is arraigned before him daily at the Des Plaines street police station. His cocktail was castor oil—"or else." The "else" was a ten day jail sentence.

The "eye openers"—as the judge termed his offerings to the thirty-three casuals collected during Tuesday night and Wednesday morning from the West Madison street hobo neighborhood—were two full fluid ounces of the oil which has been a homely family remedy for generations.

Strong men among the prisoners yesterday took one look at the quart bottle of liuid, illuminated by a shaft of sunlight as it stood on the judge's bench, and became weak. Half a dozen of them announced that they preferred the jail sentence to the drink. Judge Edelman was accommodating.

Explains New Punishment.

"I've been in this court for two weeks, and during that time I've had nearly five hundred men brought before me on charges of being intoxicated," said the judge, in explaining his new method of punishment for the derail drinkers who infest the vicinity of Madison street just west of the river.

"Many of these men are repeaters. They go right on drinking the foul concoctions of prohibition days. So I decided to take this means of forcing temperance on them, even though the cure is only temporary. Doctors tell me that a man can't drink any kind of alcoholic stimulant for several hours after taking a slug of castor oil."

The judge yesterday disposed of all other defendants who were in his court before summoning to the bench the group of ragged men. When he did so he told them of the conditions under which they might retain their freedom. Several of the larger men shuddered. A peaked little man wiped away a tear with a handkerchief.

"Step right up now, gentlemen. Just take your pick," prompted the clerk.

William Prefers Jail.

The first name called was that of William Ruppert, 46 years old, 4625 West Madison street, who had used the handkerchief. Pushing his way to the front of the crowd, he announced in a thin but determined voice that he would prefer jail. He was led back to the inclosure by the bailiff.

Peter Strios, 45 years old, a push-cart peddler, was almost nonchalant as he reached for the tumbler into which the judge's clerk had poured his drink. He tossed it off with a gulp, made a wry face, then backed out of the court with a grin. Joe Venevic, 25 years old, followed Strios' example.

Four men in succession refused to drink, but their successors stepped forward to quaff their potions. As the last man drained his glass Ruppert called out to the judge announcing that he had changed his mind. He was given a hearty measure of oil and, after two tries, drank it down.

"I can't take it," said he. "I'm going to take the pledge."

MARY M'CORMIC GEMS PAWNED TO AID SERGE, ATTORNEY TESTIFIES

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Testimony that Mary McCormic, opera singer, pawned her jewels for $3,500 and also gave a personal check for $1,500 to aid Serge Mdivani, then her husband, in his oil company, was given today by Michael G. Luddy, attorney for the company when it was in receivership.

He was a witness at the trial of Serge and David Mdivani, brothers, on charges of grand theft in the disappearance of approximately $30,000 of the oil company's funds.

Luddy said Serge informed him that Miss McCormic, in 1931, when the oil company was in difficulties, had pawned her jewelry and had given her personal check for a total of $5,000.

The records of the company showed, Luddy testified, that Miss McCormic, who later divorced Serge, held a note for $5,000 against the company and that only $500 had been paid on it.

Testimony that Alexis Mdivani advanced $12,000 to his brothers and that the pair later went to Paris to attend the funeral of their father and to obtain additional funds from Alexis jus, before his marriage to the $40,000,000 heiress Barbara Hutton was stricken from the record.

REFUSES TO STOP WOMAN'S SUIT AGAINST LONG

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 24.—(AP)—District Judge W. Carruther Jones today refused to dismiss the $500,000 character defamation suit of Mrs. Anne Ector Pleasant, wife of a former Louisiana governor, against Senator Huey P. Long, and overruled the senator's exceptions of no cause or right of action.

The decision, having the effect of ordering the action to trial, was handed down after submission of briefs and arguments on the exceptions heard last December.

Mrs. Pleasant of Shreveport, La., is seeking damages from Senator Long on charges that he slandered her and ordered her put out of the state house during the 1932 legislature.

Peyton R. Sandoz, attorney for the senator, argued in seeking dismissal of the suit, that the action was filed improperly in Mrs. Pleasant's name.

WAVE OF AUTO BUYING FORCES RISE IN OUTPUT

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 24.—An accumulation of orders from dealers such as the motor car industry has not experienced for more than three years and presaging a first quarter output of cars and trucks totaling upward of half a billion dollars in value was revealed today as producers devoted efforts to stepping up factory capacity.

While conceding that the bulk of the orders listed are from dealers stocking floors, swept bare since new models plans were announced, sales directors point out that caution has been the rule among the retailers and that they report increasing consumer demand in their various sections.

Authoritative estimates, based on weekly surveys, point to an output during January of 135,000 units. Twice that number, leading executives say, would not fill the orders already on hand. By mid-February, they say, all the industry's assembly plants will be in high speed operation, and this activity may be expected to continue well into the second quarter of the year.

RICHARD FOLSOM ELECTED SCHOOL BOARD ATTORNEY

Thomas V. Sullivan Out After Four Years.

Richard S. Folsom, former corporation counsel, a law partner of United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis for twenty years, was unanimously elected attorney for the board of education at a meeting of the board yesterday. At the same time the board accepted the resignation of Thomas V. Sullivan, who became school attorney in 1930 after being brought here from St. Paul, to make speeches for a former Republican city administration.

Veteran teacher leaders crowded around Mr. Folsom after the meeting to congratulate him. He served as school attorney from 1912 to 1915, while Carter Harrison was mayor.

"I haven't a great deal to say at this time," said Mr. Folsom. "School matters are infinitely more complex than they were twenty years ago. I'm going to do the job to the best of my ability."

61 and a Native of Chicago.

Mr. Folsom is 61 years old. He was born in a house at 24th street and Prairie avenue. He attended the Chicago public schools and then went to Columbia university and Williams college, being graduated from Williams in 1894. He studied law at Northwestern university and was admitted to the bar in 1896.

After serving as school attorney Mr. Folsom was chosen as corporation counsel by a former Republican mayor in April of 1915. His tenure lasted only until November of that year when the administration ousted him in a political shakeup.

Mr. Folsom is married and lives at 61 Bellevue place. He is a member of the University and Tavern clubs and of the American, Chicago, and Illinois Bar associations. His hobby is sailing.

A definite term for the new school attorney was not determined. His salary, the same as Sullivan's, will be $12,000 a year.

Funding Bonds Authorized.

The school trustees authorized the issuance of $10,000,000 worth of funding bonds to redeem outstanding 1928 and 1929 tax anticipation warrants. Word of this action was sent at once to the city council, which was also in session, and the council unanimously adopted an ordinance giving the school board full authority to issue the funding bonds.

Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, a school trustee, asked at the board meeting whether there was any "joker" in the issuance of the bonds. After the measure had been explained to her by Frank S. Reigheimer, special counsel for the board, she voted for it with the other trustees.

Issuance of the bonds is expected to improve the credit of the school system. There is $19,370,479 outstanding in tax warrants and accrued interest for the two years. The difference between this amount and the $10,000,000 of the bond issue is anticipated in the collection of taxes.

Agree to New Contracts.

A resolution providing for supplemental contracts to be entered into by the board in connection with the completion of five new high school buildings was also adopted by the trustees. James B. McCahey, president of the board, was authorized to enter into the contracts.

By the agreements 119 contractors, who have had contracts with the board for more than three years, will carry on work under the regulations laid down by the federal Public Works administration.

The five schools, upon which work was halted in 1931, will be completed with $1,326,000 in federal cash and $4,500,000 in school building fund tax warrants. Work is in progress on the schools, which are the Lane Technical, Steinmetz, Wells and Phillips High schools, and the Senn High school addition.

On the plea or Supt. William J. Bogan, he and Howard P. Savage, business manager of the system, were granted authority to allocate vacant rooms in the schools for use of the special adult education classes financed by federal CWA funds.

LONG CANDIDATE WILL NOT FORCE SECOND PRIMARY

New Orleans Mayor Will Serve Another Term.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 24.—(AP)—John Klorer, Senator Huey P. Long's candidate, who trailed Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley for mayor in yesterday's city primary by more than 15,000 votes, announced tonight he would not force a second primary in the three-way race.

The Klorer announcement, made from his campaign headquarters, settled the issue against a second primary after a bitter campaign and insured Walmsley a second four year term in office.

Klorer's Statement.

Klorer's statement, addressed "To the Citizens of New Orleans," follows:

"Some time after I declared for a drastic reduction in electric rates in New Orleans the present city administration announced that it would pass such an ordinance within 30 days.

"The accomplishment of this object would constitute the principal reason for my remaining in the contest.

"I am going to take them at their word and not run in the second primary. I wish them good luck."

Walmsley was backed by his old regular organization, which on Jan. 3 adopted resolutions resigning themselves to the task of "exterminating" Senator Long from public life.

Leads by 15,638 Votes.

With only seven precincts missing out of 262, Walmsley had a lead of 15,638 votes over Klorer. The count was:

Walmsley, 46,298.
Klorer, 30,660.
Williams, 26,070.

District Attorney Eugene Stanley, indorsed by both the Williams and the Walmsley organization, received a clear majority over his two opponents with a total of 60,183 votes.

The first line of defense against exposure

is good resistance

Many people think they are taking all the necessary precautions against winter if they wear their rubbers and carry an umbrella. But important as these protectives are, they only take care of you outside.

The inner forces you need must be built! And the time to build them is not after you're sick, but while you are well. This is the new idea of prevention which is taking hold among sensible people.

It is an idea they have found no trouble putting into practice. Every day they add to their reserve forces with the aid of Squibb Adex tablets!

Squibb Adex are a concentrate of the important vitamins of halibut and cod-liver oils with Viosterol. They have the same building-up effect as the oils, but are easy, pleasant to take.

Why not let Adex tablets aid in building your general resistance? This is the time of year to start with them. Now at any reliable drug store. And insist on Squibb Adex tablets. Made by E. R. Squibb & Sons, manufacturing chemists since 1858.

THE TRIBUNE'S PLATFORM FOR CHICAGO

1. Cut taxes in half.
2. Pay the defaulted bonds.
3. Overcome crime.
4. Speed up railroad passenger service.
5. Make Chicago the first city in the world.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

RAILROADS AND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

We sincerely hope that every one interested in transportation who noticed the press account of Mr. Eastman's report to the President, as printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, read the article to the end. If not, the impression may exist that Mr. Eastman is proposing public ownership of the railways, and all other forms of transportation, for that matter, as the only cure for transport ailments. Mr. Eastman himself points out that railway managements can avert such consequences, but apparently fears that it is too late for the railways to save themselves.

"Much will depend upon the railroad managements," he said. "They are of one mind in opposition to public ownership and operation, and in general they are against grand consolidation plans. One or the other of these remedies will eventually be applied unless the managements are able to remedy present ills in some other way."

Perhaps Mr. Eastman is right that the railways are too far gone to "come back." We thought we had detected signs of a railway renaissance and have published frequent articles along these lines. It is the duty of every one interested to prevent such a catastrophe as public ownership and operation of railways, tried so many times in other lands without developing a single attribute to recommend it.

Mr. Eastman's plan for a permanent coördinator cannot but evoke a smile. First we found it necessary to create an interstate commerce commission to act as a buffer between the railways and the public. Now we find it necessary to create a coordinator to act as a buffer between the railways and the commission. Thus regulation proceeds along its usual course.

THE ASHLAND AVENUE BRIDGE.

The desire of the Greater North Side Civic clubs for the prompt construction of a bridge at Ashland avenue is both natural and commendable. The bridge is greatly needed and should be built as soon as possible. There is no dispute on this point but a considerable disagreement on the type of bridge to be constructed. A choice must be made between a bridge of the bascule type and a fixed bridge.

A fixed bridge would cost $900,000. The bascule bridge would cost nearly twice as much, $1,700,000. The annual maintenance cost of the fixed bridge is estimated at $6,000; the corresponding charge for the bascule bridge is more than five times as much. If a fixed bridge is built at Ashland avenue it will mark the limit for navigation by vessels which require a clearance of more than 22 feet and in consequence the costs of raising and lowering the bridges north of the Ashland avenue crossing will be saved. Beyond Ashland avenue the river will still be navigable by barges, but the great nuisance and expense of bridge openings will be ended, as has long been contemplated by the harbor plan.

The advantages of the fixed bridge are pronounced. The Greater North Side Civic clubs, whose resolution called for immediate construction of "some type of bridge," are to be commended for resisting the very considerable pressure exerted by special interests in favor of the bascule type.

SADISM IN THE ALIMONY RACKET.

If the alimony prosecutions served proper uses of law, of justice or equity there would not be the general shrinking from the scene. The traditional picture is that of a devoted wife and mother of useful and patient life deserted by a bounder indifferent to the welfare of his family. That this man should be compelled to support his wife and children seemed not less an obligation of society to itself than justice to the family. It appeared that the obligation remained even if the wife freed herself by divorce from an undesirable or intolerable marriage.

The people dominating the alimony racket today are of quite different character and they disclose a calculating disposition not only to make marriage and divorce a profitable business but to inject sadistic elements of pleasure into the business itself. There are punishments which incline toward the sadistic, and that of jailing the delinquent in an alimony case may yield a twilight zone satisfaction not only to the revengeful and resourceful woman but to the judge before whom the victim stands in contempt for failure to pay. Many instances expose themselves to such suspicions. A psychiatrist would be needed to determine what is the whole range of gratification.

That a great deal of folly may be involved in the marriages which end in alimony cases or in jail for contempt need not be gainsaid, but if law undertook to punish all folly with the same severity that it punishes this particular kind, foolish moments would have many more tragic consequences for every one. The upshot of present day alimony proceedings is a general disgust, for which the proceedings themselves must assume the cause. No equitable procedure could bring down upon itself so much deserved criticism or present such a disagreeable exposure of undesirable legal methods.

JAPAN IN A FRIENDLY TONE.

There may be good reason for taking the words of the Japanese foreign minister, Hirota, at their full face value. He made a deliberately impressive speech before the Japanese diet, expressing his belief that emotional tension in the relations of the United States and Japan had subsided and that there was nothing in the present situation nor in the reasonable prospects of the future which should cause concern.

Hirota said Japan was conscious of an adverse general opinion in the United States during the period of its Manchurian operations, and he might have added that Americans since then have been aware of an even more emotional prejudicial feeling against the United States in Japan. The feeling in both countries had some manipulation for more purposes than one. In Japan it was undoubtedly to strengthen the military party. In the United States it had various inspirations, mostly of internationalistic source.

When Mr. Stimson was secretary of state Japan was given much reason to believe that the United States would do everything in its power to stop operations in Manchuria and China. Mr. Stimson could find an excuse in treaty obligations, but he put himself out as the spearhead of opposition to Japan, and the Japanese could attribute to his activity all the troubles which followed. Secretary Hull has done nothing to aggravate the situation Mr. Stimson created, and second thoughts have prevailed. Americans may not be able to see the far east with Japanese eyes, but they are not inclined to provoke a war to put the Japanese out of Manchuria or to protect the Chinese frontier.

Apparently there has been a shift of opinion in Japan, revealed in the resignation of the most extreme militarist, Gen. Araki, and in the pacifying speech made by the foreign minister. Some observers will attribute the shift to the influence of the new understanding between Russia and the United States. This understanding might have a larger meaning to the Japanese than it would have to the Americans. To Americans recognition of Russia might remain at least dubious, if not dangerous. To the Japanese it might mean a blunt statement that America and Russia had pooled interests against Japan.

The reasons which Hirota gives for friendship and peace are so sound and true that America will indulge the hope that they are also real in the minds of the Japanese statesmen. The continuance of peace may require a little toning down of high moral accents in the United States and a little tempering of emotionalism in Japan, but the object sought is worth the effort.

A TRIBUTE TO CHICAGO.

The chairman of the judiciary committee of the house, Congressman Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, took occasion the other day to describe the success which Chicago has had in ridding itself of gangsters. He had made it his business, he said, to visit Chicago last summer. He gave it as his considered opinion that "Chicago is making the most magnificent demonstration of the ability of its people to govern themselves to be found on this continent anywhere."

Chicago has done much to deserve this tribute and will do more. The city has made great progress against crime and against bankruptcy. The security of life and property has been increased at the same time that the costs of government have been lowered. Chicago has therefore laid the groundwork for its future growth. Here is a city which has something substantial to offer as an inducement to those who may be seeking to better themselves. Security of life and property, good government, and moderate taxation are now added to the cultural and commercial advantages of Chicago with which the world is familiar.

Chicago's progress impressed Representative Sumners as a striking contrast to the failure of Philadelphia to rid itself of gangsters and their political influence. He might better have cited New York as the horrible example, or Minneapolis, where the gang that tried to suppress the press is allied to a kidnaping ring.

Editorial of the Day

DECLINING EXPORTS OF COTTON.

[The Texas Weekly.]

A curious error seems to have been accepted as the truth by certain "experts" at Washington, including apparently some of the President's advisers, and that is that the gold purchase policy, which has been in effect since Oct. 21, has stimulated exports of American cotton. This statement has come out of Washington several times during the last two months, and on last Monday it seems that the President himself repeated it. Any one acquainted at all with the movement of cotton since Oct. 21 knows that precisely the opposite is what has happened, and in view of this such a statement coming from the White House raises a grave question as to the competency of those who have been providing the President with information on such matters. The census bureau's report on the stocks of American cotton as of Dec. 31 not only showed no material reduction of the stock of American cotton from that of the same date a year ago but it made clear that whereas both domestic consumption and foreign exports of American cotton had been running far ahead of the previous year for six months up to Oct. 21, when the gold purchase policy went into effect, they dropped behind during November and December. Here are the figures on foreign exports: Between May 1 and the end of October, 1933, exports of American cotton were 4,344,610 bales, as compared with 3,574,394 bales during the corresponding period in 1932. This was an increase of 770,216 bales. Then the gold purchase policy went into effect, and during November and December exports of American cotton were 1,735,402 bales, as compared with 2,052,206 bales during November and December, 1932, and 2,243,764 bales during November and December, 1931. This means that during last November and December, while the gold purchase policy was in effect, the total of exports of American cotton was 216,803 bales less than that for the months of November and December, 1932, and 508,361 bales less than that for the same months in 1931. In view of this it certainly is not true that during the period of the gold purchase policy "cotton has been moving out in large quantities and that a large part of the surplus of that commodity which has been overhanging the domestic market, has been eliminated."

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THE TAKING OFF of Mr. Capone's successor to his throne by other racket barons seems to prove that Mr. Capone was very wise in seeking the seclusion of a dungeon. "Stone walls do not a prison make," wrote Mr. Lovelace, "nor iron bars a cage." And in the case of the genial Mr. Capone stone walls make a nice sung little room where he can sleep soundly at night with no fears that a rival gangster will slip upon him and shoot him to death before he can get his own artillery unlimbered and begin firing. And by the time Mr. Capone is liberated from jail probably all of his old friends and merry companions will have shot each other gleefully to death. Mr. Capone should write some gay little jazz melody to carry a plaintive little song which, under the circumstances, he should have no difficulty in tossing off, "You may be a jail to others, but you're 'Home, Sweet Home' to me."

COLD HOUSE.

I've kept a truce for twenty years,
But now I put it by.
I go to war against my grief,
And only God knows why.

I wept for pain and wept for love,
But now I weep for none.
For after all a man's a man
When boyish days are done.

Sure, once I thought that play was all,
And said that work would keep.
Now little is the time for play,
And night was meant for sleep.

Yes, man, the night was meant for sleep,
Forgetting love and rhyme—
Now that my life has entered on
So white a winter time.

The eyes that fed on fantasy
Now sterner sights behold,
And see that love's too frail a girl
For one whose house is cold.

SHALL COCKTAILS AND WINES be served at the White House? That question is now agitating Washington. Not that Washington decides the matter, but at least it has the privilege of worrying about it. Americans are used to the quaint custom of stocking up before going to a dry dinner, but foreign diplomats think they will be given drinks at the dinner, as is the foreign custom, and so they present themselves at the White House without even having smelled of a cocktail. Their disappointment is intense, because it is not good form for people going to a White House dinner to carry anything on the hip. This country (especially at election time) is always so greatly agitated over what foreign diplomats are going to say about us that something should be done about this. Or else we should stop worrying about what foreign diplomats say about us. After all, it doesn't make such a great deal of difference. The only use of a foreign diplomat these days is to have him on hand so as to give him a swift kick in the pants if we decide to go to war with his country. But this is just an old Spanish custom. It would be just as easy to send the other country a postal card.

CLOUDS.

This is a dawn of loveliness and peace
When stars, and sun and moon are laid away
Within the jeweled vaults of paradise,
To rest from sparkling beauty human eyes,
And make of this an introspective day,

When sunlight flames above, how very far
The heavens seem to us! When skies are clear
The human heart becomes strangely aloof—
Only the clouds can lower this great roof . . .
And in one hour bring earth and heaven near!

You who are born to dream dreams and see visions—
All you whose fingers lay hold on the moon—
What does it earn you but scorns and derisions?
"You are a fool," they will tell you; but soon
Some, coming after, will follow your dreaming;
Some, coming after, will see what you see;
See it, and know it for truth and not seeming,
"He was no fool, but a wise man and free!"
So they will murmur. But will it avail you?

Yes! Though the world may belittle and fail you,

A TREATMENT FOR COLDS.

THE most popular drug in the treatment of the common cold is aspirin, known also as acetyl salicylic acid. This drug is a modification of the well known salicylic acid widely used for the relief of the discomforts of rheumatic disorders. Salicylic acid and the salicylates were so apt to cause nausea, loss of appetite, sometimes head noises and dizziness, and occasionally other unpleasant symptoms, that the chemists sought to find a substitute that could be more easily taken and would have less tendency to cause unpleasant after-effects—with the result that they offered aspirin. The drug, under one name or another, speedily became popular. In 1917 a government drug official gave it as his opinion that aspirin was more widely used than all other copyrighted drugs combined.

Whatever the source of discomfort, many people had the habit of taking a dose or two of aspirin. It seemed such a simple thing to do, the urge to take something was strong, and there were seldom any unpleasant after-effects. One of the common uses was in the treatment of the acute or febrile stage of the common cold.

A report of a clinical experiment made with the student body of the University of Minnesota during one winter by Dr. H. S. Diehl shows that acetyl salicylic acid in the treatment of the common cold is of no service. When given in competition with a placebo—sugar of milk—it was found to be no better and no worse than that useless substance. This result indicates that taking aspirin for the relief of the symptoms of an acute cold is something of a pastime, doing no good except as it satisfied the urge to do something.

Dr. Diehl's investigation of cures for colds extended to soda. He found that taking bicarbonate of soda for the relief of symptoms and for the cure of the cold accomplished nothing. The sufferers who used it did not get back to work any earlier than did those who took milk sugar.

He also investigated the efficacy of the fruit juice treatment. Of the three methods of treatment, that by fruit juice was the most pleasant. It appealed most to the palate, but that was about all that could be said in its favor. The students who used it got well no quicker, had no less of the tailings of days or weeks of mucopurulent discharge and aches and discomforts of the febrile stage of the disorder.

Dr. Diehl did not attempt to solve the age old question as to whether a cold was to be starved or fed. He was occupied with testing the curative action of Dover's powders, and had to reserve investigation of the hunger treatment for a later day.

CROSSED EYES.

K. K. writes: A friend of mine has a girl about nine years old who was born with a crossed eye. At the age of six she was operated on by a very prominent eye specialist to straighten it. About a week ago the parent took the child back to see about glasses she had been wearing for a number of years, and he told her he could not give her any better glasses than she is wearing, as she has partial optic atrophy, and she would have to sit as close as possible to the board at school. Also he said he could not help her with treatments. Is there any chance of the child going blind? If so, would it be wise to take her out of school?

REPLY.

Blindness is always a grave danger in optic atrophy. The degree of danger depends on the condition of the optic nerve. The opinion of the physician seeing her as to taking her from school and other points is better than mine.

From Across the Sea

BY HAROLD TATAM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES. — Economics are now the bane of the Argentine citizen's existence. He has seen his internal debt and his national mortgage bonds soaring above the three billion mark converted from a six per cent to a five per cent basis without any resulting cataclysm. And he hopes that his government's assurance that the slump in the peso will not hurt him much will turn out to be true.

Books professing to make the subject of economics clear even to the numskull are the best sellers in Buenos Aires, but in spite of all that he may have learned from them the average citizen's bewilderment is as great as ever. Newspaper editorials, arriving at a variety of conflicting conclusions, have added to his confusion of thought.

The orthodox free trader has drawn some "indisputable" deductions for his enlightenment, such as the fallacy of fostering artificial industries to the detriment of foreign demand for Argentina's main exports. As soon as he has assimilated this axiomatic truth the artificial industrialist points out to him that during the period in which Argentina increased purchases from foreign countries by 60,000,000 pesos the foreign countries so favored reduced their purchases from Argentina by 215,000,000 pesos. He also points out that the industrial workers of the country consume 70 per cent of the meat produced by the farmers who are at their wits' end on how to persuade foreign countries to buy the remaining 30 per cent.

The studious citizen cannot find anything in "Economics While You Wait" to assist him in the dilemma, although he has devoted many of his waking hours to its perusal.

And now the specter of a devouring farm board has come to disturb his sleep. More or less content—or resigned—to accept his government's word for the urgent necessity of assisting the farmer by means of a guaranteed price for his grain, provided that the cost should be defrayed by the government's profit in exchange operations, the troubled taxpayer now learns that the administration proposes to relinquish all control of exchange at the earliest possible opportunity.

This step in itself does not meet with his disapproval. But the thought of the mounting millions involved in paying the difference between the minimum and the market price of—say—500,000,000 bushels of wheat, maize, and linseed, plus the salaries of the enormous staff he imagines will be required to handle the business, has disturbed him.

THE FARMER AND INFLATION.

Ottawa, Ill., Jan. 20.—We are told that currency inflation will increase the price of farm products, make it easier for the farmer to pay off the debt on his farm, and increase his purchasing power of the products of industry. Inflationists tell us that the dollar has grown dearer in the last few years and that this is the reason for the present low prices of farm commodities. They call it a dishonest dollar and a rubber dollar, and say we must reduce its value to what it was when these farm debts were contracted.

If the low price of farm products was the result of an increase in the value of the dollar it should have affected the prices of other commodities in the same way, but every farmer knows that farm machinery, lumber, cement, hardware, harness, clothing, shoes, and almost everything he has to buy are as high in price or higher than they were before the drop in the price of farm products.

Theoretically, if we would reduce the value of the dollar one-half it should double the price of all commodities, both agricultural and others, but in practice it will not do so, and we believe it is more likely to advance the price of many things the farmer buys than of what he has to sell. We admit it should advance the prices of our major farm products, such as cereals, beef, pork, cotton, and tobacco where prices are fixed in the markets of the world on a gold basis, but recent experiments with gold purchases have not had that effect upon the prices of these commodities. Although the value of the dollar has been reduced to about 60 per cent of its former value yet there has been no corresponding increase in the prices of these commodities. This, we believe, is due to the fact that we now have in this country a burdensome surplus of these commodities and their prices are governed by local conditions. Before inflation can exert its normal influence on the prices of these commodities we must find some way to increase our exports of them.

Aside from the products above mentioned farmers produce many other things, such as milk, butterfat, eggs, fruits, vegetables, and the like. The prices of these things are always determined by home demand, and it is doubtful whether a change to a cheaper money standard would have any influence to change the prices people have been accustomed to receiving or paying for them. In the light of the above reasoning we believe the purchasing power of farmers would be decreased rather than increased by a change to a cheaper money standard.

Granting that in some cases it might be easier for a farmer to pay off his debt with cheaper money, what about the tenant farmer? Where does he come in for any benefit? I am not opposed to helping the farmer if it can be done without injuring any one else. I have lived on a farm most of my life. But what about the soldier's pension and the widow's and orphan's pension or the widow's and orphan's insurance money? How about savings accounts? During the last few years hundreds of thousands of persons with small savings accounts have lost them or part of them through bank failures or investments which they had supposed were perfectly safe; and now will we deliberately cut down the value of what they may have left by debasing our currency?

B. U. HIESTER.

IMPROVEMENTS NEEDED.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Why isn't something done about the 20th ward? It is one of the most deteriorated sections of the city of Chicago. I lived there a great part of my early life and practiced dentistry for 14 years on the corner of Taylor and Morgan streets. Although today my office is located elsewhere my heart still lies with the old neighborhood. I know the people that live there. They are my people. I know the conditions that exist.

Streets are torn up, unfit for vehicle traffic. Children play in the rubbish of filthy alleys for lack of playground facilities. Young boys congregate in street corner gangs for lack of something better to do. The Hull house and other centers are overcrowded. Is it any wonder you have such a large percentage of crime in this neighborhood?

A great deal can be accomplished. CWA workers can actually be put to work here reclaiming this lost district. Empty lots can be cleared off and used as recreational grounds. Alleys can be cleaned as a sanitary improvement. Small shrubs and trees can be planted along the barren streets. All this work will serve a twofold purpose. It will not only create employment for the unemployed, but at the same time will create a better environment for the future citizens of Chicago.

I raise my feeble voice expressing the sentiments of my people, hoping in all sincerity that it will be heard.

'Excess' Refund Reported to Congress.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Over fifty million dollars was turned back by the government in the last fiscal year to persons found to have paid too much taxes.

Reporting to congress the names of taxpayers receiving refunds of more than $500, the bureau of internal revenue revealed that a total of $51,484,845 in hard cash was returned during the fiscal year 1932-1933. Last year's refunds aggregated $80,583,504.

In addition to the refunds, which represent cash repayments of erroneously collected taxes, the bureau announced abatements and credits of tax assessments in the amount of $212,539,757, bringing the total amount of taxes either repaid outright to the taxpayer, written off the books, or credited against future assessments in the last fiscal year to $264,014,602. Interest on the refunds, it was said, amounted to eleven million dollars.

Largest Refund to Railroad.

At the same time, the house appropriations committee, in the 1935 treasury department appropriation bill brought out today, recommended an appropriation of forty millions for tax refunds in the next fiscal year.

The largest refund of the year, as revealed by a study of the lists supplied congress, was a payment of $774,251 to the Northern Pacific Railroad company, St. Paul, Minn.

Martin J. Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities magnate, received a refund of $2,553, the list disclosed. Among other persons prominent in various walks of life who received tax repayments were W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, $5,831; Gardner Cowles, Des Moines publisher and former RFC director, $647; Thomas Hewes, recently resigned assistant secretary of the treasury, $3,867; former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, $53,623; Arthur Curtis James, New York capitalist, $269,355; Robert Worth Bingham, ambassador to England, $13,184; Cyrus H. K. Curtis, late Philadelphia publisher, $11,893; Jacob Ruppert, New York brewer, $6,532; Thomas A. Edison, noted inventor, now deceased, $1,889.

Legislators Get Some Back.

Two members of congress received substantial refunds. One was Representative E. W. Marland [Dem., Okla.], $140,698; the other Representative Isabella Greenway [Dem., Ariz.], who received $12,990.

As usual, names familiar in Hollywood were included among those to receive tax refunds. John Barrymore got a refund of $5,028; others associated with the movie industry were James Cruze, well known director, $2,018; Jesse L. Lasky, $4,123; Irving Thalberg, director and husband of Norma Shearer, $7,259, and William Thalberg, $6,264.

Chicago Area Refunds.

Among refunds to taxpayers in the Chicago area, the largest, $293,805, was returned to the Butler Paper company; the second largest, $251,063, to Harry W. Dubinsky, and the next to the Grigsby-Grunow company. Other refunds to taxpayers in the metropolitan area included:

U. S. Drafts Plans to Increase Tax Rate on Small Incomes

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—An upward revision of the normal income tax rate on small incomes may be recommended to congress within the next week by the house ways and means committee in a tax bill which has the support of the treasury department, it was learned today.

Accompanying the proposal of an increase in the normal rate will be a recommendation that income tax payers be allowed a deduction for earned income, so that the net effect of the tax increase will be to emphasize the burden carried by unearned income such as dividends, interest, and investment profits.

Some revision of the income surtaxes may be suggested at the same time. It is probable that the plan will carry a recommendation putting the revised tax in effect on 1933 incomes, returns on which must be filed before March 15.

Aimed at Unearned Incomes.

The basic purpose being sought by the treasury and the ways and means committee is reported to be to make an allowance for earned income without reducing the revenue collections from the income tax. To do so the rates will have to be revised upward.

At present the normal income tax is 4 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income and 8 per cent on the remainder.

The new recommendations, it is reported, will be to combine these two rates into one which will be close to 8 per cent. This new rate will apply on all net income, with a deduction allowed for income earned from wages and legitimate business profits.

Excess Profits Tax Likely.

In addition the recommendations may involve an excess profits tax for industry, a restriction holding that investment losses can be deducted only from investment gains, and a similar restriction as to partnership losses.

The bill calling for these changes is now being drafted by experts of the ways and means committee and the treasury department. Reports today were that it would be ready for presentation to the house of representatives within a week.

Accompanying the bill will be a final report on the federal taxation situation by the ways and means committee.

At the treasury it was insisted that the aim of the income tax revision was not to raise increased revenues.

That the administration will not allow any reduction in the income tax yield is shown by the President's budget, which calls for income tax collections of 500 million dollars within the next six months, compared with 300 millions in the last six months. To keep this pace and still allow a deduction for earned income, rates will have to be increased, experts say.

How It Works Out.

The allowance for earned income, it is understood, will be that a certain percentage of a taxpayer's income derived from wages and similar sources may be deducted from his net income on which he figures his tax.

A taxpayer with a net income of $4,000 of which $3,000 came from wages would, if the allowance were 20 per cent of the earned income, be permitted to deduct $600 from the $4,000 net income figure and pay a tax on $3,400.

What the deduction will be was not disclosed. When similar plans have been discussed in the past, congressional committees have suggested that the allowance be 20 per cent.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., previously has urged the deduction of a certain percentage of earned income and also the combination of the two existing normal tax rates into one.

ILLINOIS FARM GROUP LOOKING TO BETTER TIMES

Favors Roosevelt's Money Plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Danville, Ill., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Two thousand Illinois farmers met today in the preliminary sessions of the nineteenth annual meeting of the Illinois Agricultural Association, largest state farmers organization in the nation. They reflected in speeches and in group discussions an optimism brought about by improving farm prices, the expectancy of funds from the government for reducing their production of wheat, corn and hogs, and the hopes that the new Roosevelt monetary policies will be of tangible aid to agriculturists.

Considerable interest was shown by the delegates in talks about the commodity dollar. One speaker, C. V. Gregory, farm paper editor, described the Roosevelt monetary policy as being largely that which the farm bureaus of the nation have been seeking for a decade.

In answer to queries of those who expressed disappointment in the failure of the "rubber dollar" methods of Prof. Warren of New York to have raised farm commodity prices, Gregory declared that the commodity dollar was intended to make such a rise possible. He said that farm prices would move upward only when the money being fed out into both cities and rural areas began to circulate.

LULL IN BATTLE BETWEEN COUNTY G.O.P. FACTIONS

Both camps of the Cook county Republicans, the Weber-Moore harmony group and the Crowe-Barrett-Pacelli insurgents, were idling last night, waiting until later to complete their slates. The slate making committee of the former faction, comprising the majority of the ward committeemen, is to meet today and try to put a county ticket before the county central committee tonight.

The other group yesterday had done little to write a county ticket of its own. Its members felt that they should not go so far as to present them from supporting the regulars' slate if it suited them. They are expected to know definitely this afternoon or tonight whether they will have an entire separate ticket at the April 10 primary or whether they will return to the harmony field.

The Democrats have named their nominating committee. This committee is expected to begin its work tomorrow and to complete a ticket by Sunday or Monday.

U. S. Orders Air Line to Return Job to Field Pilot

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—(AP)—The national labor board today ruled that David L. Behncke of Chicago, president of the Air Line Pilot's association, who had been discharged by United Air Lines, be reinstated immediately and be given back pay from Dec. 26, the date of discharge. The company had contended that Behncke exceeded leave granted him to represent the pilots before the NRA and the labor board, but the board found this argument unsatisfactory.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists. 15c, 30c and 60c.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

THAR'S GOLD IN THEM THAR SKIES, COLORADO SCIENTIST DISCLOSES

Denver, Colo., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Now they've "struck gold" in the skies. A 68 pound meteorite which Harvey H. Nininger, meteorologist of the Colorado Museum of Natural History, bought from a Melrose, N. M., farmer for a dollar has been found to contain the precious yellow metal, the scientist disclosed today.

"It's the first time," Nininger said, "that gold has ever been found in a meteorite, although some iron meteorites previously were discovered to contain platinum. Its principal significance, perhaps, is its indication that meteorites have the same origin as the earth."

Commercial "meteorite mining," however, would hardly pay. Nininger said the gold in his specimen assayed about $12 to the ton.

JUDGE INDICATES HE WON'T STOP BALLOT RECOUNT

Judge James J. Kelly indicated yesterday in the Superior court that he would refuse to interfere with the recount of all ballots cast in the general election of Nov. 8, 1932, ordered by County Judge Jarecki.

Judge Kelly will give a formal ruling this morning on the petition which Attorney Theodore Levin filed on behalf of Miss Belle Friedman, described as an unemployed school teacher. The petition asks a writ of prohibition against the recount and a writ of mandamus directing the board of election commissioners to sell the ballots for waste paper.

"What is the rush in seeking to have the ballots destroyed?" asked Judge Kelly. "They can be destroyed later just as well as now. The taxpayers won't suffer. In fact, with the accumulation of dirt during the recount they may weigh more as waste paper. Where will the damage be? The officeholder can't be hurt, since the time in which an election contest can be filed has passed."

"He may be stigmatized if fraud is uncovered," said Attorney Levin.

"If any one holds office by fraud, he should be stigmatized," said Judge Kelly. "We must have honest elections. I don't see how this court has any right to issue a writ of mandamus."

See Rift Over Invitation to Hitler Aid.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Abraham Lincoln's 125th birthday anniversary will not be formally observed this year at Springfield, the home town of the civil war President. Officials today did not comment on reports that the annual memorial services were abandoned because of protests over a speaking invitation extended to Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador.

The Midday Luncheon club, which for years has had charge of Lincoln programs featuring national and international speakers, recently announced that the services would not be held this year.

Diplomats on Program.

Previously it had been announced that the 1934 speakers would be Dr. Luther, Augusto Russo, the Italian ambassador, and Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas. The French ambassador had accepted tentatively.

It was understood that strong protests against the appearance of Dr. Luther, as a representative of the Hitler government, had been made. Rabbi H. E. Snyder was listed today as one of the objectors.

Reports were that Gov. Henry Horner had privately expressed displeasure at the Luther invitation.

To Recall Invitations.

Elmer Kneale, secretary of the club, who has made speaking arrangements for years, has taken steps to recall all invitations. U. S. District Judge Charles G. Briggle is president of the Midday club, which has sponsored the appearance in Springfield of scores of prominent figures.

There was no official comment today from the governor, who has been ill, and others who would have taken leading parts in the Lincoln ceremonies.

The Midday club recently attempted to replace its first group of speakers with President Roosevelt and Interior Secretary Ickes, but the President sent word that he could not leave Washington during February.

UNITED MINE WORKERS APPROVE REPORTS OF OFFICIALS AT MEETING

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Debate was brisk, but there was practically no opposition today as the 1,700 delegates at the convention of the United Mine Workers of America here approved reports submitted by international officers. Fewer than a dozen delegates stood when the negative vote was asked. They were greeted with boos and hisses.

The vote, officers decided, was an expression of confidence in the manner in which the affairs of the organization have been conducted by international officers since the last convention two years ago.

John L. Lewis, international president, announced that all resolutions pertaining to wage scales would be referred to a special wage scale committee.

Will "Wish-Thinking" Get Me Anywhere?

Yes—if along with your ability to wish for better things you have the capacity to make your dreams come true.

To get anywhere, you need vision and determination, of course.

But, also, you need a well-conceived plan for reaching your objective, and the capacity to "follow through" on your plan.

The type of training offered in the evening classes of a modern university will help you, not only to formulate your life plan intelligently, but also to carry it out effectively.

Northwestern University School of Commerce maintains evening courses on the downtown McKinlock Campus for those employed during the day. These courses have helped many to achieve their ambitions, to reach their goals.

ROOSEVELT ACTS TO FIGHT GRAFT; WILL CLOSE CWA

Hopkins Also Tells of Charges.

to Feb. 15, under a drastically retrenched program. The President said today he would ask for an additional 350 millions to run the program up to May 1.

Would End the CWA.

By that time, Mr. Roosevelt declared, he hopes that the public works program will be in such stride as to have taken up a large part of the slack resulting from dropping four million persons off the CWA rolls. He hopes also that private industry will have been stimulated to such an extent as to absorb many more of the unemployed.

While he indicated that some CWA work may continue, he gave the impression to some of his listeners that he is pretty well convinced that even he cannot keep politicians from slopping their fingers into the gravy of easy money.

By Feb. 15 half a billion dollars will have been spent for CWA projects. At first Mr. Hopkins estimated he could hire four million jobless at an average wage of $12 weekly. But in the week ending Jan. 6 the average had been stepped up, through hiring of so-called "skilled" workers, to $24.37 weekly. Last week the average was $15. The rate of spending is at 75 millions per week, of which 60 millions is donated by the federal government.

During the course of this spending charges were made that in some communities people had abandoned regular jobs and had gone to work on CWA projects, because of higher pay and easier tasks. In Kansas the pay was 45 cents an hour, higher than citizens could afford to pay for day labor.

In one midwestern city a man who because there were more men than jobs could not get a job as a newspaper man, was employed by the CWA to conduct a class teaching a dozen boys how to become reporters.

Farmers Make Complaint.

Farmers of Maryland complained they could hire no hands because all the available help had been taken up in the CWA program, and that the farm hands had even dropped their milk pails and gone over to CWA in large numbers. The NRA administrator, Gen. Johnson, complained that CWA rates of pay were higher than those fixed in some codes.

Mr. Hopkins laughed in the beginning when it was reported to him that CWA money was going for such purposes as the teaching of contract bridge, band playing in beer gardens, the payment of wages to Wisconsin residents for making repairs on their own homes, and to other Wisconsinites for working on private farms. His purpose was to get the money circulating, and as long as the reports did not imply crookedness or graft he was unworried.

Many Flock to Trough.

But the tolerance he showed had its effect in attracting the cupidity of local politicians to the hoppers of federal easy money, and from that point he began to struggle under floods of complaints.

Mr. Hopkins has given evidence in some of the more flagrant cases to Joseph B. Keenan, assistant attorney general, who had been in charge of the justice department's anti-kidnaping efforts. District Attorney Dwight Green at Chicago is conducting an inquiry into graft charges at Harvey, Ill. Two CWA supervisors were arrested in Washington today charged with soliciting bribes from CWA workers to get their ratings boosted.

Such a furor resulted from the statements made by the President and Administrator Hopkins that the latter late this afternoon sought to allay it somewhat by issuance of a tempering pronouncement.

Declaring there was "a misunderstanding" as to the extent of graft in the CWA, Mr. Hopkins said that "as a matter of fact it is of small proportions in terms of the number of persons employed on civil works and of the amount of money expended."

The administrator did not, however, attempt to give any estimates on the number of charges of graft that had been made, nor the amounts involved.

Col. Lindbergh Pays Visit to Secretary of Treasury

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh was a visitor today at the office of Secretary Morgenthau. Officials said the two had a brief social chat.

CWA Discharges 6 Workers from Sewer Project in Harvey

Six workers on the civil works administration storm sewer project at Harvey have been discharged because of other employment or political connections, Frank D. Chase, director of the CWA in Illinois, announced last night. Charges of fraud and political corruption uncovered in an investigation of the project are to be laid before the federal grand jury, Mr. Chase said.

The six discharged yesterday are:

THOMAS SCULLY, brother-in-law of Commissioner of Streets William Voss of Harvey. Voss had charge of a tile manufacturing plant for the project before Mr. Chase's original investigation. He has been supplanted.

WALTER HAINES, collector for Thornton township and brother of Arthur Haines, president of the Calumet union drainage district No. 1.

W. B. SWANZY, who is listed on the pay roll of the department of streets of Harvey.

W. GRAVES, nephew of Mayor Frank Bruggeman and his chauffeur. Mayor Bruggeman is in charge of the project.

MATT ROMER, bodyguard and chauffeur for Voss. His name also is on the department of streets pay roll.

C. L. DAVIDSON, who is listed on the pay roll of the department of streets in Harvey.

Following his original investigation of the project, three weeks ago, when he took over all purchases of materials and the operation of the tile plant, Mr. Chase ordered an inquiry into the pay roll. Twenty-three men were questioned and six were discharged. The other seventeen signed affidavits that they had no other employment. The affidavits are being investigated.

Among the seventeen is Donald Haines, son of Arthur Haines. The Haines family was reported to be well represented on the CWA pay roll, the list including Arthur, his brothers, Walter and Joseph and Donald.

Another public official to be dropped from the CWA pay roll, according to Mr. Chase, is Harry S. Mahood, president of Villa Park. Mahood was assistant engineer on a CWA highway project in Du Page county until it was learned that he was on two pay rolls, federal and village.

All possibility of favoritism in the hiring of trucks on CWA projects will be eliminated under the new central truck bureau set up yesterday at 1219 Washington street under J. E. Robinson, Mr. Chase said. This bureau, operating directly under CWA headquarters, will assign all trucks used on projects in Cook county.

Two business agents of the Chauffeurs' and Teamsters' union, an outlaw union formerly headed by racketeers, were arrested yesterday when they threatened truck drivers on a CWA project. The agents gave their names as James Clark, 30 years old, and James Cuba, 29 years old, both of 184 West Washington street. They were arrested when talking to truck drivers on a CWA project on the drainage canal.

KNOXVILLE WILL BUILD ITS OWN POWER PLANT

Offer of Private Firm to Cut Rates Rejected.

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Knoxville's city government is bent upon the construction and operation of a municipal electric system to distribute TVA power.

Although Tennessee Public Service company, the private power concern operating here, offered to cut its rates to the level contemplated for the municipal system, the city council has turned a deaf ear to the plea, which would save Knoxville a $3,225,000 expenditure in the municipal ownership experiment.

Ordered to Negotiate Contract.

Instead the legislative body governing the city's affairs instructed City Manager W. W. Mynatt to enter into negotiations with the Tennessee Valley authority for a contract to buy TVA power at wholesale rates.

An informal application has already been made to the authority and David E. Lilienthal, TVA member in charge of power, looks upon Knoxville as the missing link to complete his "yardstick" for power rates.

The private company on Monday offered to cut its charges to the rate structure proposed for the city plant and suggested as alternatives that the city buy its system or lease it with option to buy in order to avoid murderous competition.

Plans Fight to Finish.

"We haven't had time to consider it," Councilman W. A. Cockrum, chairman of the power committee, said at the meeting last night. "We think it best that the city manager be authorized to go ahead with plans for buying the power."

If the city builds its own distribution system Tennessee Public Service company has indicated it will fight tooth and nail to keep its business even if it is necessary to sustain losses for a protracted period.

Asks Injunction to Stop Violation of NRA Oil Code

United States Attorney Dwight H. Green appeared yesterday before Federal Judge John P. Barnes and petitioned for a temporary injunction to restrain the officials of the Suburban Motor service from violating the petroleum code of the NRA. The owners of the concern, David and Elias Kornblith, were named defendants in the action. The prosecutor charged that the Kornbliths were giving premiums in the form of glassware and household utensils to induce motorists to buy petroleum products at their gasoline stations at 5307 Cermak road and 2356 South Kedzie avenue.

NEW YORK JOBHOLDER ABSENT 303 DAYS IN YEAR; DRAWS $2,475

New York, Jan. 24. — [Special.] — Commissioner William F. Morgan Jr., in going over the records of his department of markets today, discovered what he believes to be the champion "stayer-away-from-work" in the entire previous Tammany administration —one John Murphy, a clerk under civil service. Murphy set an all time high in 1930 when he was absent 303 days, but was paid in full for his services at the rate of $2,475 a year.

The discovery was coincident with Mr. Morgan's announcement of a shakeup of 150 out of 175 of his inspectors in the department. The shakeup is the result of stories coming to the commissioner's ears of "shakedowns" being perpetrated upon peddlers.

Deputy Commissioner Michael Fiaschetti who conducted the survey of records for Mr. Morgan, said that, although Murphy was "tops" in the matter of absenting himself from work, other employes had been absent with pay for periods of from two to six months.

NEW YORK CWA BOARD GIVEN CHARGE OF GRAFT

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—The first specific charge of graft in the administration of the federal civil works program in New York state was laid before the state CWA board today.

The alleged irregularity was the "kick-back" racket, for years a thorn to labor. It is charged that nonunion carpenters, hired on a CWA project at Harbor island, near Mamaroneck, were given preference in return for payment of part of their earnings to persons connected with the project.

Spanish Train Leaps Rails Made Slick by Snow; 4 Die

SANTANDER, Spain, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Four persons were killed and 15 injured today when a train, sliding on rails made slippery by snow, jumped the track on a curve 44 miles from here. Those who died were the engineer and fireman, a member of the civil guard, and an unidentified passenger. First aid trains were rushed to the scene.

JAPAN PREPARES TO APPROACH U. S. ON NAVAL ISSUES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 24.—An official communication is being prepared for dispatch to the United States government, in an effort to effect a friendly solution of naval issues which will come to a head upon the expiration of the London treaty next year.

Japan has been insisting upon naval parity with the United States and Great Britain to replace the present 5-5-3 ratio. It is possible that the eclipse of the military domination of this country, as evidenced by the resignation of Lieut. Gen. Sadao Araki as minister of war this week, will cause this demand to be modified.

Ran War Scare Article.

It was also revealed today that Hirota's department is working closely with the departments of war, navy, and interior to stop the flow of "war scare" articles which has been spreading through Japanese magazines and newspapers.

The foreign office spokesman announced that an article scheduled to appear in the March issue of a popular magazine, written presumably by Lieutenant Commander Kyosuke Fukunaga, will be suppressed. Lieutenant Commander Fukunaga was the author of a sensational article on a "future war" between the United States and Japan which appeared recently in the magazine Hinode.

The spokesman expressed confidence that the government will succeed in muzzling other articles of this nature hereafter.

Premier Under Fire.

This announcement followed a conference of officials of the foreign, interior, navy and war departments yesterday, in which it was agreed to put a stop to stories likely to foment ill feeling.

The lower house of the diet today trained its guns on Premier Viscount Makoto Saito in a fight for return of party government. The premier, mercilessly heckled, was visibly embarrassed. Korekiyo Takahashi, finance minister, made a bid to emerge as the hero of the present session by coming to the aid of Saito time and again, even to the extent of answering interpellations specifically directed at Saito.

Hirota, replying to questions of representatives, said he hoped eventually to reach an agreement with Russia under which both nations would remove frontier fortifications from the border of Manchukuo.

Russia Censors Hirota Speech.

MOSCOW, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Principal newspapers published without comment today a digest of the speech of Foreign Minister Koki Hirota before the Japanese diet.

The version which appeared here contained no reference to the Japanese minister's expression of regret at soviet criticism of Japan nor of his denial that new Japanese military establishments have been placed on the soviet-Manchurian frontier. It emphasized instead Hirota's declaration that Japan wants peaceful relations with the soviet union.

The resignation of Gen. Sadao Araki as Japanese war minister also was given prominent display, but comment also was withheld on this subject.

Reports Resignation of Cabinet in Jugo-Slavia

VIENNA, Jan. 24.—(AP)—The Freie Press correspondent at Belgrade reported today that the cabinet of Premier Milan Srskitch resigned. No further details were given. Dr. Srskitch became premier of Jugo-Slavia July 2, 1932. The orginal cabinet which he formed resigned Nov. 2, 1932. Two days later he formed a new government which King Alexander accepted.

CARE OF JAPAN'S MOTHERS CALLED LESSON FOR U. S.

Low Maternal Death Rate Told.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The women of Japan, considered fragile by Americans, have a three to one better chance of surviving child birth than American women.

With this explanation Samuel A. Goldsmith, executive director of the Jewish Charities of Chicago, yesterday held up Japan's low maternal death rate as an example to the United States. He addressed the Infant Welfare society of Chicago at its annual luncheon meeting in the Blackstone hotel. Philip D. Armour, president of the society, presided.

Mr. Goldsmith said that the last available comparative figures show that the maternal mortality rate in Japan was only 2.7 per thousand births, as compared with 6.7 per thousand in the United States. Comparative figures have been available nearly 25 years, he said.

One Reason for Low Rate.

"While physicians and statisticians seem unable to give authoritative reason for Japan's low maternal death rate, it is thought to be due to the extreme cleanliness practiced by the Japanese, and their particular medical care," said Mr. Goldsmith. "This theory is borne out in Chicago, where the Infant Welfare society, which practices every care and precaution for the mother's health, had in 1932 a maternal death rate of 8.2 per thousand against the 6.7 per thousand for the United States.

"This high maternal death rate in the United States is a matter this country should be thoroughly ashamed of. Only one other country, Scotland, lags so far behind. Japan and Spain, on the other hand, have made notable progress in lessening the number of deaths among mothers at childbirth. The Metropolitan Life Insurance company and the United States bureau of census indicate that 65 per cent of these deaths could have been avoided if the mother had received better care. It is a further discredit to this country that so many accidents at childbirth are allowed."

Mr. Goldsmith praised the Infant Welfare society, describing it as a protector of the community in preventive work. By giving complete health service to the mother and child, he said, the society is determining the kind of city that may be found here 25 years hence.

Death Rate Held Down.

For the last two years the society has kept its infant mortality rate below ten deaths per thousand births, which was accomplished only in two other years, 1926 and 1927, Dr. Heyworth N. Sanford, medical director, reported. Last year the infant death rate was 9.4 per thousand births, an increase of 1.4 per thousand over 1932, which was the all time low since the society's founding in 1911.

Miss Jeannette Townsend, executive secretary, disclosed that the society during 1933 cared for 15,893 children and 1,978 expectant mothers who would not otherwise have received health supervision. This care was given in 18 stations throughout Chicago by a staff of 54 nurses and 37 physicians. The nurses also went into the homes, teaching mothers how to care for their children and instructing them in sanitary methods of housekeeping and cooking. A total of 13,124 pints of cod liver oil were given to children under the supervision of the Infant Welfare society.

JUDGE VACATES FORFEITURE OF BAULER'S BOND

Judge Harold P. O'Connell yesterday vacated the forfeiture of the $5,000 bond of Ald. Mathias Bauler [43d], who failed to appear Tuesday in the Felony court to answer a charge of assault with intent to kill. The charge was nol prossed when the alderman explained that he meant no discourtesy to the court and did not know what the Felony court charge would be heard after an indictment had been returned by the grand jury. The charge grew out of the shooting of Policeman John J. Ahearn in front of Bauler's saloon at 343 West North avenue on Dec. 19. Deputy Sheriff Frank Wright was wounded in the brawl.

Radio Singer Gains 8 Lbs. in Few Weeks! ...Finds New STRENGTH & ENERGY!

Posed by professional model

MISS ESTHER TAYLOR, Radio Singer, 123 West 13th St., New York City

"I had been underweight for years," says Miss Taylor. "Suffered with nervousness, indigestion and stomach trouble, and was bothered by frequent colds. Two packages of Kelp-a-Malt seem to make a new person of me. I have gained about 8 pounds, have filled out noticeably. No longer have headaches, gas pains and stomach distress, and I have never slept so well or awakened more refreshed. I am elated with Kelp-a-Malt."

Just one of the thousands of actual testimonials that are flooding in from all over the country telling how this newer form of food iodine is building firm flesh, strengthening the nerves, enriching the blood—nourishing vital glands and making weak, pale, nervous, underweight men and women look and feel years younger.

Scientists have recently discovered that the blood, liver and vital glands of the body contain definite quantities of iodine which heretofore has been difficult to obtain.

Modern foodstuffs, even fresh vegetables and similarly so-called "good" foods have recently been discovered to be lacking, not only in good iodine, but in all the other essential organic minerals, without which strength and health are impossible.

Kelp-a-Malt, only recently discovered, is an amazingly rich source of food iodine, along with practically every mineral essential to normal well-being. It is a sea vegetable concentrate taken from the Pacific Ocean and made available in palatable, pleasant-to-take tablet form. Six Kelp-a-Malt tablets provide more food iodine than 486 pounds of spinach, 1,458 pounds of beef, 2,387 pounds of lettuce. Three Kelp-a-Malt tablets contain more iron and copper for rich blood, vitality and strength than a pound of spinach, 7½ pounds of fresh tomatoes—more calcium than 6 eggs, more phosphorus than a pound and a half of carrots—sulphur, sodium potassium and other essential minerals. Contains no yeast—doesn't cause bloating.

Only when you get an adequate amount of these minerals can your food do you any good—you can nourish glands, add weight, strengthen your nerves, increase your vigor, vitality and endurance. Try Kelp-a-Malt for one week. Feel your appetite improve, stomach return, nerves grow stronger. You'll sleep better, add from 5 to 8 pounds in 12 days or it costs you nothing.

Collins-Graf Wedding Will Be Held Soon

Date Indefinite Because of Illness in Family.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MISS KATHRYN COLLINS and Robert J. Graf Jr. obtained a marriage license Tuesday afternoon, but they aren't sure yet when they will use it, although they expect to give it to Judge Francis Wilson tomorrow afternoon, for they hope to be married by him then at the residence of Miss Collins' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Collins of 1530 State parkway.

Mr. Graf's mother has been very ill for some months and that is why the marriage plans are so indefinite, but if the weather is nice tomorrow and she is able to motor from the Graf residence on Woodlawn avenue to the Collins' apartment it is probable that the ceremony will take place then. Only members of the immediate families will be present, and the wedding will be just as quiet as possible. Immediately after the ceremony young Mr. Graf and his bride will leave for Arizona to spend the rest of the winter there and in California.

The engagement of young Miss Collins and Mr. Graf, who recently received his master of arts degrees at the University of Chicago, was announced last October.

Both young people have numerous friends who will be disappointed to learn that the Collins-Graf wedding will not be a large affair, for they would have enjoyed witnessing the ceremony, but it is not likely that it would have been a large wedding even if Mrs. Graf weren't ill, for Miss Collins' older sister, Virginia, was married to Paul McNulty at a small affair. They were wedded on Nov. 30, 1932, in Our Lady of Mount Carmel church in the presence of only the immediate families with a dinner following at the residence of the bride's parents, who then lived at 3314 Lake Shore drive.

Mr. and Mrs. McNulty will be among the few, of course, who will be present at the marriage of Miss Collins and Mr. Graf tomorrow or whenever it takes place and among the other near relatives who will be there [in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Graf] are Mr. Graf, Miss Barbara Graf, and "Bud" Collins.

Mrs. Meeker Will Entertain Mr. Wilder.

Mrs. Arthur Meeker is giving a small luncheon today for Thornton Wilder, who is in town for a few days to deliver two lectures. The first was given yesterday before the Friends of American Writers after a luncheon at the Chicago Athletic association and the second will be given tonight to the Friends of the University of Chicago Library.

Mr. Wilder, who is such a favorite with all who know him in Chicago, is leaving tomorrow morning. The

Walska Charms with Costumes and Her Beauty

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

The audience that heard Ganna Walska give a song recital last night at the Auditorium theater made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in size. This glamorous Polish woman who charms one with her unusual beauty and her compelling personality even if one is not entirely pleased with the quality of her voice was encored again and again and after her second group of songs she received two beautiful bouquets of American Beauties.

The applause after each song was led by Harold F. McCormick, whose name she bore for several years, and who still is one of her stanch friends and admirers if one may judge by the events of the last two days. With John A. Chapman, who by the way was one of Mr. McCormick's box guests when Mme. Walska gave her other Chicago concert just five years ago almost to the day, Mr. McCormick sat in the center of the house and no one in the great theater seemed to enjoy the recital more than he did. It seemed to us that his applause was louder and longer when the soloist appeared for her last group of songs than at any other time, for then she was garbed in conventional evening clothes and not in the costumes of the Second Empire in which she had appeared earlier in the evening.

She was lovely all the time, in the hooped skirts and wigs and in her modern evening gown, but she seemed to appeal most to Mr. McCormick and the others of her audience in the severe black velvet evening gown that she wore last. With it she wore some of her famous pearls, which end in a beautiful diamond ornament, and pendant earrings of diamonds. Two detectives guarded the pearls on the trip to and from the Auditorium hotel.

Her hair, growing as it does to form a V on her forehead and pulled straight back just as she wore it when she first came to Chicago years ago, was much more becoming than the wigs she had worn earlier in the evening, and her white face, with no trace of rouge on it, looked more in keeping with this costume than with the more ornate ones of the Second Empire.

When Mme. Walska sang before it was in Orchestra hall, and that theater was crowded for the event, but the Auditorium proved to be too big for her recital this year, for only about ten of the fifty-six boxes and half of the main floor seats were occupied. Mrs. Howard Linn, who also was in the audience at Orchestra hall, was there last night, looking lovely as usual in a black velvet wrap with a gray fox collar that matched in color her distinctive curls. She was escorted by her brother, Seymour Blair.

Mme. Walska's countrymen, Titus Zbyszewski and Edouard Kulikowski, Polish consul general and vice consul, were there in a center box with Mrs. Edward A. Leight and Miss Mardi Burnham.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Adams sat during the first half well down in front, but for the last half they joined Mr. McCormick and Mr. Chapman a few rows back.

Louise Taylor Booth Is Bride

[TRIBUNE Photo.]
MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM C. WELLIS

Small Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wellis are pictured above just after their marriage yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock in the chapel of St. Chrysostom's church. The Rev. Dudley Stark officiated. Mrs. Wellis is the former Louise Taylor Booth, daughter of the late Lloyd B. Taylor of Chicago and sister of Mrs. Robert J. Dunham Jr. of Lake Forest. She has lived in Europe for the last four years, and before that, as Mrs. Frederick H. Booth, she lived in Canada.

Only her immediate family, a few friends, and the Danish consul general and Mrs. Baumann attended the ceremony and the luncheon that followed at the Churchill hotel. After a six weeks' trip in the south Mr. and Mrs. Wellis will return to the Churchill for a month before leaving for Europe, where they will live.

Mr. Wellis is a native of Denmark and is a member of one of Denmark's oldest and most respected families. He has not lived there for the last 25 years, however, although he has retained his nationality, for he has traveled extensively and often has visited this country. He lived for many years in Egypt and Greece, but for the last ten years he has made Paris his headquarters. When he lived in Greece he was decorated by the late King Constantine, and he was one of the youngest men to be decorated by the king of Sweden with the order of the Vasa.

OUR practically weekly taxicab story this time concerns a jubilant driver who had a $24 fare the other night. He picked up his fare at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the Palmer house, and was still taking him places at 6 o'clock the next morning. The driver was told to wait at each stop, and there were at least a dozen of them, all the brighter night life spots. The last stop, however, at 7 a. m., was at a grocery in the Wilson avenue district. The thoughtful occupant of the cab wanted to buy his wife a can of her favorite coffee for breakfast.

JOHN PAULDING BROWN shot a bear on a recent hunting trip. The trophy of his Wyoming vacation was sent to a taxidermist's to be mounted, with instructions to send it to his office on South La Salle street when it was ready. It happened that he was out of the city when the bear arrived. Playful office associates [in one of the most dignified of law firms] unpacked the bear, put it in Attorney Brown's office chair, put spectacles on its eyes, and opened a law book on the desk in front of it. When Mr. Brown arrived back in town he found it sitting there, obviously absorbed in a law case entitled "Brown vs. Bear."

IT was in front of the Clark street bookstore that is selling out. A ballyhooer was droning through the loud speaker, "Come on in folks—come on in and browse around. Browse around folks—you're all welcome to come in and just browse."

THE excitement over Ganna Walska's concert appearance last night brings to mind the occasion when she last sang in Chicago, on an afternoon some five years ago that happened to be the wedding day of a friend of ours. The wedding reception was much larger than the wedding, and most of the bride's friends, who had gone to see and hear the much discussed Polish singer, came down the reception line at the Casino and enthused to the bride—not over how she looked in her bridal satin but over how Ganna Walska looked in her classic white gown on the stage. She never has forgiven Mme. Walska for it.

Golden Voiced Schipa Stops Show at Opera

Ganna Walska Appears in Song Recital.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Between the first appearance this season of the golden voiced Tito Schipa with the opera and the picturesque song recital of Ganna Walska at the Auditorium, the seeker of musical entertainment last night might well have found himself in a quandary. The fact that the two entertainments were markedly, strikingly different in matter and manner did not in the least interfere with the fact that there was notable entertainment at both.

Mr. Schipa returned to his Chicago public in the role of Lionel in "Martha," appearing with Edith Mason as Lady Harriet, Irene Pavloska as Nancy, Giuseppe Interrante as Plumkett, and Vittorio Trevisan as Sir Tristan, a notable cast that brought back the glories of the tuneful Flotow opera quite in the manner of past years.

As a prelude to the performance Ruth Page and Harold Kreutzberg, together with some twenty lesser dancers, appeared in Miss Page's choreographic setting of the Ravel "Bolero." It is something well worth seeing without reference to any opera whatever, full of color and working up to quite as high a climax of excitement as the music itself. Wherefore there is pleasure in stating that it is announced for another performance on Friday night just before "La Boheme." Paul Kerby is the conductor.

The dance was finished and Gennaro Papi took the baton, to reveal once again that "Martha" is a work full of tunes that never die. The piece is close to being a century old, but its component parts are gifted with eternal youth. All it needs is singers of last night's order.

It may not be news, but it is nevertheless a pleasant item to report that Mr. Schipa, who seems to sing better as the years go on, stopped the performance when he sang "M'Apparl," that Mme. Mason did the same thing when she sang "The Last Rose of Summer," that there were many agreeable and tuneful things happening in the course of the performance, and that the Chicago Grand Opera company took on new vitality as a result thereof.

Transferring attention to the occurrences at the Auditorium, Mme. Walska made more of a fascinating drama out of her appearance than any singer has been able to do with a song recital in a number of years. That she caused the audience to call for a group of encores at the end is only part of it. That a good percentage of the audience paused in the lobby hoping to see her progress from theater to hotel was only another part. That she is strikingly improved as a singer over her last appearance in this city is even yet not all of it. She was a show.

Part of the time she filled a good portion of the stage with the incredibly inflated crinoline costume of the French second empire. The rest of the period she wore with good grace and fine taste a concert gown of the year 1934. Meanwhile and throughout the evening she sang lieder.

It cannot be said even now and with all her improvement as a singer that the other notable lieder singers of today need be in great anxiety over their laurels. Mme. Walska still has some little distance up the paths of Parnassus before her. She seems still not to have conquered a feeling of anxiety about her own performance. The sense of complete, poised assurance is still to be won, a sense which goes to quality of tone, at certain times to pitch, and to assured interpretation. At the same time she is a personality. She fills the eye and the ear, and she is an interesting figure of the stage.

Her accompanist, Stuart Ross, assisted with two groups of piano solos in which, particularly by his own arrangements of other music, he pleased the audience almost as much as the main attraction, Mme. Walska herself.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

If you're the kind of a woman who goes in for theatrical effects—and there's no reason why you shouldn't if you can get away with them—you'll be interested in the contents of a Paris cable we were permitted to read recently. One of our most famous beauty specialists was expensively telling all to the manager of her establishment here.

In Paris, says she, all is glitter. Jewels are all over the place and the person; heads are decked out in halos or clips of shiny fancies, fabrics are the glisteny kind—and a certain glitter is carried unto the very face.

How, asked we, could it be done? So we skipped into the salon to see.

The new makeup for the glittering mode is based on the artistic principles of highlights and shadows: First, a foundation cream in pearly tones to give a smooth, matlike effect to the entire face surface. Then come the highlights. First step: Judicious use of luminous iridescent eye shadow. Iridescent, mind you! Sounds crazy but looks grand. Blue, green, gray, violet and gold and silver. As gowns are flecked with brilliants so is eye shadow flecked with gold and silver. Then mascara, the satiny kind, and the lashes flicked against a finger laden with the eye shadow until the tips glitter in the light. And if you want to go into it largely you can even have a tiny speck of iridescent on the brows.

Shine is carried over to lips and cheeks with a vivid lipstick beneath a thin layer of tissue cream; for the cheeks, a cream rouge, in this case preferred to a dry because it gives a better shine. Then powder—just the right shade to give an opalescent effect.

And whoops! Step out like this in your lamé gown and see what happens. When we emerged from the salon we felt like Peggy Hopkins Joyce!

Joseph T. Ryerson Named Senior Warden of St. James' Church

Joseph T. Ryerson was elected senior warden at the annual parish meeting last night of historic St. James' Episcopal church, Wabash avenue and Huron street. Mr. Ryerson succeeds the late Henry Bullock and is the third generation of the Ryerson family to be elected to the lay leadership of the city's oldest Episcopal church.

Mr. Ryerson formerly was junior warden. He will be succeeded in that office by Col. Robert C. Peck. Other vestrymen elected were Dr. F. A. Chandler, Secor Cunningham, Dr. N. S. Davis III., Alan C. Dixon, Eames MacVeagh, William K. Otis, Edward L. Ryerson, O. J. Taylor, Patrick Valentine, Frank B. Mulford, and George A. Berg.

Plans for the celebration next fall of the centenary of the parish were launched at last night's meeting. Mr. Ryerson was named head of the centennial commission, which will be in charge of the event.

World's Fair Paintings by Grant Shown

Brilliant Color Features Exhibition Pieces.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

A brilliantly colorful exhibition of recent paintings by Frederic M. Grant has opened in the Anderson galleries, 536 South Michigan avenue. There are twenty-one canvases and each portrays in vivid manner some beauty that was in evidence last summer in the Century of Progress Exposition on the lake front. Those exotic, picturesque buildings caught the painter's imagination and these striking paintings are the result.

Mr. Grant has long been known for a colorist. It is to be doubted whether a more brilliant or varied palette than his is in use by any American painter today. He is well known for his decorative paintings, easel and mural.

Still life, flowers, landscapes, imaginative figure compositions, all of these have been grist to his mill, and with them all he has dealt in romantic and masterful style. Color and composition have been, where one asked, the two principles upon which he has built his art.

Last summer he was tremendously struck by the vitality of color and dynamic design of the Fair. He determined to paint the Exposition and he definitely has succeeded, getting views not only marvelous in themselves but each one typical of the inner spirit of the entire spectacle. Vibrant blues, reds, and brilliant yellows abound through these canvases. They pulse with life and beauty.

In a smaller gallery adjoining the main room some twenty of the small water color sketches which Grant made on the spot are hung. They are very charming. From these the artist developed his larger canvases.

Looking again at the first group one might consider that among the finest of them are "Inner Court, Hall of Science," "Yellow Façade, Communications Building," "Design in Orange and Blue, Terrace of Fortune," "Carillon Tower, Hall of Science," "A Quiet Place, Gardens of American Radiator-Standard Sanitary Building," and "Blue Panels, Hall of Science." The "A Century of Progress" is an abstract and gives in kaleidoscopic manner an impression of the Exposition as a whole. It is clever and effective.

The exhibition will continue into February and no one should miss it.

Beige Frocks Hold Place as Style Favorites

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Beige is a charming color that practically goes on forever . . . the knowledge of its flattering softness is always stored away in your fashion memory, but each time you see frocks, sleek, slim looking costumes of this delightful creamy color you are intrigued all over again.

There are some stunning new clothes of this color that have just been unpacked, ready for wear under all the many mink coats, and other spicy brown fur pelts that achieve an eye filling contrast with beige.

You will find some exciting new two piece dresses, all one color—beige—knockout models made with a demure three inch fine pleating around the hemline of the skirt, another width rippling around the normal waistline, and a third frilled around the high wide neckline, to be again repeated around the wrists of the long slender sleeves.

A soft crinkled crepe-y weave is used with quite a bit of yellow in the beige. It would be perfect under a nutria coat. Another beige "sheer" wool of two pieces features a fragile shaped deep yoke of embroidered white organdie, and at the top of the yoke is tied a coquettish bow of the beige wool. The sleeves are short, falling just below the elbow.

There are lots of beige corded silks, dull of texture, quantities of very individual wools, thin enough for comfort now under an enveloping fur coat and smart enough to be worn later as a street dress, contrasted with a fur scarf and deep brown accessories.

There are all kinds of extremely swanky checks, small checks flaunted against a creamy beige background. Swagger length coats with raglan shoulders made of this small checked pattern can go properly with deep brown suits or dresses or over light, one color beige costumes. The supply is better than ever.

THE WILD BIRD

By OWEN JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS.

Barbara Brawne, aged 22, is completely dominated by an adoring, though jealous father, who is against every modern idea and improvement. Lynwood, their home, is in the prim and proper village of Oxbridge, a place of intellectual sanctity. Barbara seems predestined to join the ranks of the village spinsters. She contemplates rebellion. Gregory Rance, popular novelist, is visiting her cousin, Laurie Chiswick. They are mutually attracted. Barbara overhears Rance asking Laurie about her. He says she is the sort of girl he'd want to marry. Laurie leaves and Barbara makes her presence known to Rance. She asks him to marry her.

INSTALLMENT X.

A PROSPECTIVE HUSBAND.

Barbara felt the flame which flashed through him without understanding the cause. She put out her hand and laid it over the twitching contraction of his.

"Father, dear. Don't keep my youth from me as you've done with your sisters!"

"What have you against me, your father, in particular?" he said in a hoarse voice, for the vision that tormented him was so acute that only in a certain brutality could he conceal what he was suffering.

She withdrew her hand, hurt and angry.

"I want you to admit my right to have a life of my own."

"Your right? You are twenty-two, you have your own income. You are free to desert me any day."

"Father—father!"

"Yes, any day. Can I stop you? Can I dictate to you? Influence you in the slightest?"

"When you can talk to me rationally ——"

He took out his handkerchief and sponged his forehead, drew a long breath, and stared at the floor.

"Is there any use in keeping up this conversation?" he said acidly. "You have informed me of your maidenly intention to hunt down a husband. Your ultimatum, in fact. And I have admitted that you are a free agent." All at once on the point of leaving the room he turned. "But after all this extraordinary conversation just what particular grievance have you against me? What crime have I committed?"

"Now for it," she said to herself. She did not mind his anger. He was at a disadvantage there. And she believed the more he whipped himself into a rage the quicker he would react. To come down to facts now.

"Yes, there are many things that have hurt me."

"As for instance?"

"You have kept men away from the house."

"I? I have kept ——"

"Yes, deliberately. Look at my position now. How am I to meet the sort of men I want to meet, except by going out of my own home?"

"Barbara, that is not true! You have been perfectly free to invite whom you please."

"To invite them? Yes. Once, twice. And then? Then you made them see you resented them—made fun of them. And they left and they didn't come any more. It's true. It's true!" Despite all that she had resolved, her emotion overpowered her, at the thought of past humiliations. But she mastered her anger and said, "I want the right to come and go as I please. I want the right to have my men friends to dinner, to visit me week-ends, like other girls, and when they come I don't want you to criticize and ridicule them, so that they go away and never come back."

"Barbara, you forget yourself!"

She did not waver under his angry glance.

"Father, I won't be put off. Can't we talk without getting angry at each other?"

He stood heels together, hands twitching along his coat.

"I cannot imagine that there is possibly anything more you have forgotten to say."

"Father, you must listen to me."

"The incident is closed."

He marched out and down the stairs.

She dressed in her riding habit and went down to breakfast. Her father did not address a word to her, but his eyes never left her. He looked old and agitated, with that quality of suffering that made him as difficult to contend with as a child. She could not repress a moment of compassion.

"He will work himself into a nervous wreck," she thought, watching him covertly. After all, he adored her and she was going to make him suffer horribly. It would be hard on him when she went out of the home. Still, any sign of yielding would be misinterpreted. She repressed an impulse to pat her arms about him and went out to the block, where Peter had Mascot were ready for her.

The temptation to ride through the village on the chance of meeting Rance was strong, but she turned her horse's head toward the hills, and, avoiding the highways, sought the woods. She let the reins fall loose, trusting to Mascot to pick his way along familiar paths and began to consider her problems. When she thought of her father her mind was clear and active. She knew what she had to do, and the new power of decision in her was so vibrant that she wondered why, in all these years, she had hesitated to assert her independence.

She had stood up to him for the first time. That was a great deal to have accomplished. He would bluster and rage. Such scenes she was prepared for. When he fell back on his weakness, his need of her, the hard moments would come. She must never for a moment let him suspect that a greater love had swept over her—that was one thing he would never forgive. She would deliberately deceive him—for his own sake. Her first instinct was right. Her marriage must be presented to him as a sympathetic companionship. He must get to know Rance and like him before any feeling of jealousy was aroused. Difficult, but possible. Rance would have to help her. Once married her father would reconcile himself to changed conditions, be proud of her husband's achievements, be happy in her happiness.

But when her thoughts turned to Gregory Rance they became confused and troubled, and she was seized with a sudden fear that left her shaken in her confidence and a prey to all the weak inhibitions of her nature. All that she had said and done the night before, which had seemed to be so simple and comprehensible to one of his understanding, now appeared to her necessary of elaborate explanations.

When she came down for lunch Mr. Disbrough [John Rossiter] her father's junior partner, was in the drawing room. He was a little spotless man of thirty-odd, soft spoken, unhurried, and keen, a young man without enthusiasms or angers, who, without defeat, was moving irresistibly to a career at the bar and in politics.

At her entrance he rose and advanced, formal, immaculate, and detached.

"And how are you, Miss Barbara?"

"Very well, thank you."

He returned to his seat and his conversation with Mr. Brawne. That and nothing more. In the ten years she had known him there had never been a personal interest in his eyes, or a tribute in his voice. She sat down and watched him, a curious thought in her mind. Her father had never resented or criticised him. Was that the reason of Disbrough's indifference? He was a man who made no mistakes, a man of calculated patience. She herself had never been aware of his coming or going. Yet he was personally not unattractive, in a dark, clean cut way. He had a good forehead, fine eyebrows, a resonant voice, a thin aquiline nose, and the wide chiseled mouth of a natural orator. He was not intruding his opinions, but what he said was to the point. A smooth functioning brain, never at a loss for a word. Sound, balanced, inspiring confidence in his judgment and in his future. Excellent family, if poor—a Disbrough of Virginia. Judicial, impeccable, a man who aroused no irritations and listened sympathetically to opinions with which he did not agree. She wondered. If her father really had any intentions of seeing her married it would be some one like Disbrough of course. She smiled.

"What amuses you, Barbara?" said her father instantly.

She met his eyes and smiled again.

"Funny how you read my thoughts," she said, turning and going to the window. "And how I read yours," she added to herself. So that was it. He was keeping Disbrough in the background. She could afford to be amused.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a weekly radio feature—will be presented tomorrow by Mary Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 2 o'clock for Miss Meade's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

"——of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax, of cabbages——"

But, though at the peril of being accused of always belittlin', let's talk, not about the whopping big cabbages this time, but about their baby cabbage cousins, Brussels sprouts.

I wonder, by the way, if you've ever pictured to yourself how they grow? They're really a variety of cabbage, and they push forth on the lower axils of the upright stem of their plant, looking for all the world like very junior cabbages. Nutritionally they're proud of many of the same good points boasted by the big fellows. They're low in calories and high in such important items as minerals and vitamins.

So to market. In shopping for these tiny cabbages here's a tip. Good Brussels sprouts should be green, not yellowish. The yellow nubbins are almost sure to be too mature, and so more strident in flavor. Or maybe they were just kept too long, but that isn't good, either. Also, keep that eagle eye peeled for wiggles and worm holes. Sprouts are seventh heaven for all sorts of public enemies, and a wary eye is needed in the picking. One can't be utterly sure, but if a stray undesirable or two has wandered in, the advised twenty minutes of soaking, in slightly salted water, before cooking will float him out.

Sometimes we find sprouts sold by weight, about 50 to 60 small sprouts to the pound. Or they may turn up in quart boxes, each box holding in the neighborhood of 1¼ pounds. As a rule we count upon one pound, when trimmed and cooked, to supply 3 cups of sprouts and satisfy 4 or 6 folks.

So, to the cookery job. And here is a tabloid of the method:

BRUSSELS SPROUTS.

The sprouts selected are even in size, light green, and compact. No-where is there a worm hole in sight. Strip off any outer leaves which are wilted or discolored, and trim the stem ends with a knife. Now soak the sprouts in cold, salted water for 20 minutes. Drain and plunge them into boiling water. Cook without a lid and in plenty of water for 20 minutes, adding salt to season during the last 10 minutes. They should be just tender; mushiness is taboo. Drain off the juices [if you have a soup pot save them]. Now serve up the sprouts in any of the following fashions:

SPROUTS IN BUTTER OR CREAM SAUCE.

Freshly cooked, spanking hot Brussels sprouts are excellent served simply with melted butter and dashes of salt and pepper, or offered up with cream or a flavorful white sauce. Hollandaise over their hot sides is something else to joy over. Or Minnesota arrives with a new wrinkle:

BRUSSELS SPROUTS WITH SAVORY SAUCE.

1 quart sprouts
1 tablespoon flour
2 tablespoons shortening
½ cup meat stock
1 lemon
Salt and pepper to season.

Prepare and cook the sprouts as already discussed and, just before draining them, blend the flour and fat in a hot frying pan, then carefully stir in the broth, juice of the lemon, and the seasoning. Let the sauce cook slowly until smooth and thickened, then pour it over the hot, drained sprouts and serve at top speed.

So for one last treat of sprouts. Have you ever tasted the rare combination of chestnuts and cabbage? The flavor thrill is much the same when sprouts are the vegetable, and the result is verily a kitchen epic. The recipe is:

BRUSSELS SPROUTS WITH CHESTNUTS.

Shell, skin, and boil 1½ cups of chestnuts until tender. Cook them until brown in 4 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons sugar. Have already prepared 1 quart of boiled Brussels sprouts and place a layer of them in the bottom of a buttered baking dish. Dot with butter. Add a layer of the chestnuts and sirup, and continue alternating the layers until all are used. Pour over the top ½ cup of richly seasoned brown meat stock, dot with butter, and heat in the oven before serving.

Friends of the University of Chicago Library is a fairly young and so not nearly so large an organization as the one after which it is patterned, the Friends of Princeton Library, that rich and powerful association which last May gave an enormous dinner in New York for all those who have won Pulitzer prizes. The members of both organizations do exactly what the titles imply, befriend the libraries by paying dues which enable the libraries to have ready cash with which to purchase rare books whenever they are obtainable.

Many friends of the late George Lytton will be going to the Civic Opera house Sunday morning to hear the memorial services that three musical organizations with which he was closely associated are holding for him at 11 o'clock. The Chicago Business Men's orchestra, which was founded by Mr. Lytton in 1921; the Bohemians of Chicago, and the Chicago Grand Opera company are combining to give the program. The doors will be open at 10:30 o'clock and reserved seats will be held until 10:50 o'clock.

Swifts Will Give Tea for Dancers.

At the cocktail hour this afternoon Miss Lydia Swift and her sister, Miss Narcissa Swift, are entertaining for the dance team, Ruth Page [Mrs. Thomas H. Fisher] and Harold Kreutzberg who are dancing the afternoon of Feb. 4 in Orchestra hall for the benefit of Emerson house. The party today will be at the home of these two popular post-debs' parents, the Alden B. Swifts at 209 Lake Shore drive.

Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne of 1544 State parkway also will be a tea hostess this afternoon, for she is entertaining for Mme. Edith Mason, who is leaving tomorrow to return to her home in Italy.

Mrs. Eames MacVeagh is entertaining the members of the Woman's aid of the Passavant hospital at tea tomorrow afternoon to hear Mme. Ludmila Speransesa, a member of the old Russian Imperial ballet, talk about the Monte Carlo ballet which will give a benefit for the hospital on Feb. 16 at the Auditorium theater. The tea will be at Mrs. MacVeagh's apartment at 900 North Michigan avenue at 4:30 o'clock.

Giovanni Cardellis Have Daughter.

In Paris Mr. and Mrs. Giovanni Cardelli are being congratulated on the birth of a daughter on Monday, and sharing in the congratulations with them is Mr. Cardelli's mother, Mme. Giovanni Cardelli, who is the former Ruth Lamson of Chicago. Her sister, Mrs. Harry H. Lobdell, received the news in a cable.

After Feb. 9 Chicagoans will be getting first hand news of the new baby, for her grandmother will be in town to open up her apartment on Lake Shore drive. However, Mme. Cardelli will have to send the interesting details to the Lobdells by letter, for Mr. and Mrs. Lobdell are leaving next Tuesday for Florida to visit the Warren Wrights until March 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Douglas Flood are leaving Kenilworth next Sunday for Buenos Aires to visit their son, Samuel Douglas Flood Jr., who is stationed in the diplomatic service there. They will return in two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. George Marcy, Mrs. Robert T. Newberry, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson, and Mrs. Theis J. Lefens with her daughter, Miss Katherine Lefens, are a few of the Chicagoans who have augmented the winter colony at Huntington in Pasadena. In another two or three weeks Mrs. Lefens and Miss Lefens will move into the new house they have built in Pasadena.

Mrs. Percy Hollins Visiting Her Mother.

Mrs. Lawrence Hallberg of the Webster hotel has as her guest her daughter, Mrs. Percy Hollins of London. Mrs. Hollins will return to England in a month.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Primley of Hubbard Woods and their niece, Betty, have returned home after a six weeks' absence. They spent the holidays in Montreal, where they used to live, as the guests of Mrs. R. Alan Loveland, and then they went to New York, where they divided their time between relatives, Mrs. Cornelius Tiers and Mrs. Eliphalet N. Potter.

Because they are each equally good friends of the well known composer Sibelius, Carleton Smith is having a dinner party at the Tavern Saturday evening for the distinguished conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, Leopold Stokowski. Mr. Stokowski arrives in Chicago at 5:30 Saturday en route to the west coast, where he is going to experiment with some cinema shorts in Hollywood.

In yesterday's mail was an invitation from the Chicago Drama league to the second of a series of candlelight salons featuring Chicago personalities, on Sunday at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Sidney S. Gorham Jr., 2030 Lake Shore drive. Miss Mary Cameron will talk "In Lighter Vein."

Alliance Juniors Visit Planetarium.

Twenty-five junior members of the Alliance Française were the guests of Miss Jean Wilhelm, president of the Juniors, and Miss Louise Dewey, vice president, yesterday at the Planetarium and later at tea in the directors' lounge of the Administration building at A Century of Progress.

It was the first visit to the Planetarium for many of the girls. The hostesses greeted their guests at the entrance to the building, both coated and gowned in black, Miss Wilhelm wearing a smart brimmed tweed "chapeau" and Miss Dewey in a most becoming off the face hat. Miss Josephine Templeton, Miss Lucy Harrison, Miss Myrtle Lampert, and Miss Laura Thorne were among the first to arrive.

"Ulysses," Under Ban for Years, on Sale Today

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Ulysses," by James Joyce. [Random House.] Published today.

As the result of the famous decision of Judge John M. Woolsey of the United States District court of New York, the most discussed and the least read book of modern English fiction, is made available, complete and unexpurgated today to any reader in the United States.

Published in Paris [in English] in 1922 and banned by both England and the United States as "obscene," declared by leading critics of both countries as one of the greatest of all modern novels, "bootlegged" by returning tourists, pirated by undercover publishers who changed their firm names as soon as they were sought for photostating the Paris edition, "Ulysses" has been like the work of Gertrude Stein before "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas"—something everybody talked about and practically nobody had read.

Critical volumes and articles were written about it . . . the public, unable to read the original of the criticisms either accepted the critics' judgments unquestioned or declared for the "pure book" laws, and praised a censorship which had preserved them from reading a very long book which they probably would never have struggled through anyway . . . for, as the court declares, "'Ulysses' is not an easy book to read or to understand."

The legal labeling of "Ulysses" as NOT obscene is declared by those who know the intricacies of such things as the greatest blow ever dealt against censorship in the Comstockian manifestation. And the decision of Judge Woolsey is obviously not only a triumphal decision, but in itself a great piece of literary criticism and one which, of all the writings about Mr. Joyce's masterpiece, most simply states the purposes and fulfillments of the book. It will go down in literary history. Parts of it follow:

"In writing 'Ulysses'," decided Judge Woolsey, "Joyce sought to make a serious experiment in a new, if not wholly novel, literary genre. He takes persons of the lower middle class living in Dublin in 1904 and seeks not only to describe what they did on a certain day early in June of that year as they went about the city bent on their usual occupations, but also to tell what many of them thought about the while.

"Joyce has attempted—it seems to me, with astonishing success—to show how the screen of consciousness with its ever shifting kaleidoscopic impressions carries, as it were, on a plastic palimpsest, not only what is in the focus of each man's observation of the actual things about him but also in a penumbral zone residua of past impressions, some recent and some drawn up by association from the domain of the subconscious. . . .

"What he seeks to get is not unlike the result of a double, or if that is possible, a multiple exposure on a cinema film which would give a clear foreground, with a background visible but somewhat blurred and out of focus in varying degrees.

"To convey by words an effect which obviously lends itself more appropriately to a graphic technique, accounts, it seems to me, for much of the obscurity which meets a reader of 'Ulysses.' And it also explains another aspect of the book, which I have further to consider, namely, Joyce's sincerity and his honest effort to show exactly how the minds of his characters operate. . . .

"It is because Joyce has been loyal to his technique and has not funked its necessary implications, but has honestly attempted to tell fully what his characters think about, that he has been the subject of so many attacks and that his purpose has been so often misunderstood and misinterpreted. . . .

"'Ulysses' is an amazing tour de force when one considers the success which has been in the main achieved with such a difficult objective as Joyce set for himself. . . . 'Ulysses' is not an easy book to read. It is brilliant and dull, intelligible and obscure by turns. In many places it seems to me to be disgusting, but, although it contains . . . many words usually considered dirty, I have not found anything that I consider dirt for dirt's sake. Each word of the book contributes like a bit of mosaic to the detail of the picture which Joyce is seeking to construct for his readers. . . .

"When such a real artist in words, as Joyce undoubtedly is, seeks to draw a true picture of the lower middle class in a European city, ought it to be impossible for the American public legally to see that picture?"

Through Judge Woolsey's decision, legally, from this day forevermore, "Ulysses," like other high distillations, may be purchased over the counters. And already volumes explaining it are springing up. Today is also republished "A Key to the Ulysses of James Joyce," by Paul Jordan Smith (Covici-Friede) (originally published in 1927), in which the interpreter compares the modern to the ancient "Odyssey." Mr. Smith declares "Ulysses" can have no universal appeal: its reading is too formidable a task for that, but, as a writer's source book, it is an inexhaustible mine of strange treasures, a veritable encyclopedia of the human soul and a song of ecstasy.

"James Joyce's 'Ulysses,' a Study," by Stuart Gilbert (Knopf, 1930), and "James Joyce, His First Forty Years," by Herbert S. Gorman (Viking, 1924), are available, as is Louis Golding's "James Joyce," published in December in England. And for Feb. 26 is promised Frank Bugden's "James Joyce and the Making of Ulysses" (Smith-Haas), an interpretation of the man as well as of his work.

Honesty About Sex Makes Boy Clean Minded

One Mother Attests to Value of Frankness.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Today's letter is so well worth reading that I will step aside to give it full space:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: A few years ago, not long after you started your column, I wrote you for the sex information booklet. The information you gave me and the booklets you were kind enough to recommend were just what I needed.

"I wish all children could have the clean, wholesome unconsciousness of sex, that our son now ten has. Tell parents, again and again, Mrs. Bevans, that it's simply impossible to harm a child's mind by facts. I know because my parents were of the old order.

"Of course, now and then we discuss things that would make my mother raise her hands in horror. But John never hesitates to ask me anything he wants to know. Now that he has reached the age where so many children are rather nasty minded, his utter disregard and disinterestedness is rather startling. His teacher, an elderly lady, tells me that in all her years of teaching boys of ten, eleven, and twelve she can recall clearly to mind the ones who by their cleanliness of mind had what she felt was proper sex education at home.

"Two years ago the baby sister joined the family. When I told him the baby was coming he was so pleased. And when I began making baby clothes its hard to tell who of us, sonny, daddy, or I spent the most time admiring them.

"Late one evening the baby arrived and the next morning John came to the hospital with daddy to make her acquaintance. He was sitting with his back to the door when nurse brought the baby in so she leaned over and laid the baby in his arms before he realized she was there. I wish you could have seen him. For a second I held my breath. After all, for over nine years he had held perhaps more than his share of the spotlight and he might not be willing to share. But I needn't have worried. All the planning and saving and sacrificing to get the baby were more than repaid in the next few minutes.

"He gave the nurse the most dazzling, most grateful smile when he realized who he was holding and then for minutes he was lost to us and the world. He rubbed his cheek against her little fuzzy head, he patted her, he cuddled her, he held up one of her tiny little hands and examined it front and back and each tiny nail, he traced her eyebrows with the gentlest fingertip, he looked at her ears and all the time he kept talking to her a crooning. 'My baby sister! My tiny baby sister. My own baby sister. Brother loves you. Brother'll take care of you. Brother's own little girl.' Until that minute I had never realized the actual need of one child for another in the family.

"And how we have all enjoyed the baby sister. And John surely has loved her. It's a constant surprise to me that he cares so much for a sister. I rather hoped for a baby boy because I thought John would care more for a brother. Of course he loses patience when he finds some cherished toy or game out of place or mussed up or a treasured book torn or marked from little soiled fingers. That's only natural.

"So for both of their sakes as well as my own I hope you'll send me the booklet 'Make Patience Your Handmaiden' and the 'Don't Touch' booklet. I know my nerves are in a terrible state, due to a recent illness and if anything you have to help the constant 'Don'ts' and 'Stops' I find myself saying, I hope you'll let me know so I can send for it."

We have and they were sent.

Nagging Wife Makes Nervous Wreck of Man

Fiendish Dispositions Ruin Many Marriages.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

They've been married only four years. There's a baby, too. The father loves the child dearly. After work his one anxiety is to get home quickly and play with the child. But that nagging, nagging, sour disposition of his wife is more than he can stand. Time and again he has decided to stay on and work overtime rather than go home and face the woman. His father has been out of work for a couple of years; his own income not what it used to be, and the nagging wife, who nags for no reason at all, is a combination of troubles that is getting the man.

"I realize she has enough work to do taking care of the house and baby, and I ask no special consideration. Ordinarily I act like a man and feel like one, but sometimes I am afraid to open my mouth, especially when we have company. It is then that she likes to show her nasty disposition at my expense. If this keeps up, God knows what may happen. I am afraid something terrible will happen. My nerves are shot!"

And that's a picture of what a nagging woman can do to a man!

There are plenty of them in existence, these women who can't see beyond their own noses, grouching, whining, working themselves up into a lather of discontent for no cause on earth, venting their spleen on the poor devil of a husband immediately he hoves in sight at night, though his main concern in life is to try to please the abominable creature.

A woman with one child to look after has a perfect sinecure of a job compared to the lot of many women. She is not due for any special consideration. Her duties make her no object of pity. It's the very least a woman can do in return for her support and the devotion of a willing husband, and to do it cheerfully and gratefully!

Those old Pilgrim fathers had the right idea about handling a common scold. The average man is utterly helpless in the hands of one of her kind. That's why she gets away with her nagging so long. But the revenge on her is that she is the despised one, not the man she nags and belittles before company. Other women are not fooled about her "grievances." They know when a woman is well treated and when it's a fiendish disposition that is manufacturing troubles.

Colorful Quilt Owes Origin to Colonial Economy

Annapolis Patch.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Economic stress often figured in the old quilt patterns created in the Virginias, Carolinas, and Maryland. The makers had only so much material, and the patterns, in consequence, were cut to fit the quilt. This frequently accounts for the varicolored pieced blocks, and not infrequently led to an unusually artistic creation.

For a quilt pattern in this design send 5 cents in coin or stamps to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

Colleen Moore Will Reside in New York City

Will Journey to Hollywood for Film Roles.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Colleen Moore, who since long before the close of the silent film era has represented feminine kindliness, helpfulness and hard work among the higher paid stars, slipped quietly out of Hollywood without most of the movie colony realising that something genuine and unusual was departing permanently.

In future Colleen will "live in New York because Al [Al Scott, her broker-husband] has to live there because of his business and while I will continue to make motion pictures I will not reside in California. We will take a New York apartment for the winter. I determined not to be kept away from Al for such long periods any more."

Colleen holds a contract with Radio-RKO which provides the studio may use her for more films, but will have to notify her in New York thirty days before she is supposed to step on the set here. She is leasing her estate at Bel-Air with the swimming pool, kennels, terraced gardens, etc., probably to Marlene Dietrich.

Colleen is taking two Japanese maid servants with her. "I always will have Japanese about me and only Japanese," she says. "They are so loyal, considerate, courteous, and willing."

She is leaving her dogs, her bedroom furnishings and some of her Japanese staff with her mother, Mrs. C. R. Morrison, on Arden drive, Beverly Hills. Her father and her brother, Cleve Morrison, who at one time was a film juvenile under the name of Cleve Moore, are partners in operating a commercial laboratory in Glendale, Cal. Ruth Abbott, young actress wife of Colleen's brother, has arrived in Hollywood to get a start in films just as Colleen leaves. Miss Abbott played in "Dinner at Eight" in Chicago last year.

Marriage has given Joseph Schildkraut some feminist leanings. On the set of "Sisters Under the Skin" at Columbia some one asked: "Can you trust a woman?" And Joe fairly shouted: "Yes. No woman ever does anything to a man he hasn't richly deserved." Schildkraut recently married the former Mary Mackey of London while abroad.

Mitzi Green, who at 14 is a beautiful film ingenue, was one of a consignment of Radio-RKO stars arriving from New York today for the activity following Producer Merian Cooper's revived grasp at that plant. Mitzi goes into "Finishing School" with Billie Burke, Frances Dee, and Ginger Rogers.

On the same train with her from the east came Dolores Del Rio, back from a clothes buying spree, and Dr. Francis Griffin of New York, Irene Dunne's husband. Dr. Griffin will spend a couple weeks with his wife while she appears in "Stingaree" with Richard Dix. When the Dix film is completed the actress will accompany her husband to New York and stay there until time for her next starring picture here.

Carole Lombard gets the lead opposite John Barrymore in Columbia's "Twentieth Century," her rôle being a fiery, but slightly passé, stage star. This studio has built all the outside and inside replicas of a railroad flyer, but two entire stages are required for the effects. Barrymore is due from his west Mexican coast yacht trip with Dolores Costello and the two children Feb. 1 to start work.

Miss Lombard has been kept very busy despite recent relapses from illness having just finished "Bolero" with George Raft at Paramount and now winding up "We're Not Dressing" at the same studio.

Masculine Taste in Perfume Warrants Milady's Research

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

For a long time now, the argument about whether women dress for their own sex or for the opposite has not been heard from. But a new one presents itself in the matter of perfumes. For whom does the lady buy her perfume? For herself or for its effect on the other sex?

We're not talking about Xmas bottles, found in your stocking, in whose purchase you had no voice. But what's in your mind, or who, when you go sniffing and prowling around the perfume counter?

Believe Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, who writes in a current periodical, that "all men, like all male animals, are sensitive to perfumes and stimulated by them."

Being so, then, perhaps the male nasal taste might better be interviewed more often on this subject of scents. Man's criticism about perfumes is not so often reviled. One consideration, in this respect, is that the best perfume manufacturers are men, so they must know something about the game. In fact, it is difficult to think of any woman manufacturer along this line, excepting a noted French dressmaker or two.

Whether a man is to be believed who expresses a distaste for perfumes in general is a debatable question. Some men object violently to its use by their wives. Psychiatrists hint that this springs rather from the male peculiarity of wanting to completely dissociate the women they marry from the women they don't. Their noses know better, as the psychiatrists might say! Furthermore, psychiatrists do hold that men may be stimulated into wayward expression of love in an office, say, by a perfume that has no business in a business office.

If the boss talks out of turn, then girls, better look into that perfume bottle of yours for the answer. It may not be he or you at all. Anyway, it is claimed for the wayward ones by one of their sex that their amatory advances may easily be ascribed to just that kind of scent; also, that a man who says he hates perfumes has had his nose affronted by the wrong kind, or too much of one kind.

Lelong Achieves a Paradox in Design: Full Skirts That Make Ladies Look Slim

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—To play at being a mermaid is all very well if you have the curves for the rôle, but a skirt that fits like a fish tail is something that takes a lot of wearing. This silhouette, while it's the smartest line for evening in Paris, is being ameliorated in the interests of the mature woman who has lost her crescent moon curves.

Lucien Lelong is making wide skirted evening frocks for some of his most fashionable mature clients, but setting the fullness in in such a way that it looks quite slim. You are referred to our sketch for the way he does this. The model shown was created for Princess Dimitri, and is made of black chiffon and trimmed with bands of black lace that are encrusted with silver spangles.

The skirt is widened by three full godets that are accordion plaited to lie in slim V's between the plain gores of chiffon. There is one in front and two shorter godets at the back. The hem of the skirt has three bands of spangled lace. Three more strips, sewed together, are fastened into the right under arm seam, brought across the back of the bodice and draped up in front to the right shoulder to meet a bertha of the same lace that ends on the right arm. There is a chiffon sash held by a rhinestone buckle.

SURVEY BARES BIG MARKET FOR U. S. GOODS IN BRITAIN

Many Products Free of Import Duties.

Here is the second of two articles by Mr. Steele on opportunities of the United States to expand its trade in Great Britain and the problems connected with such expansion.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 24.—What can the United States export to Great Britain that it is not exporting now? The answer seems to be little in kind but a lot in quantity. In other words, the United States is exporting something of everything that is exportable, but it could export a lot more of most things if a vigorous export policy, backed up by government assistance, were adopted. Even without government assistance there is a lot that can be done.

At present the big market in Britain among American products is for specialized machinery such as printing, packaging, and machines for special processes. These are all free of duty in Britain and therefore nothing is needed but vigorous selling. In fact, a large trade in such machinery is done now, but it could be increased.

Long Delay in Marketing.

Many of the most useful machines do not appear in the British market until two or three years after they have been in common use in the United States. Frequently the American Chamber of Commerce and other organizations receive inquiries about machines for certain purposes which are well known in America but unknown in England.

Small novelties, patents, and mechanical toys are other lines in which the United States excels and which could be sold here with vigorous pushing. One American factory in London has made a success with mechanical toys which are made from the dies used the year before in America. Why should the employment in making them go to Britons when the toys could just as well be made in the United States and shipped to England?

To some extent the "Buy British" campaign of a couple of years ago may have encouraged this rush to manufacture in England, but that has died down and is seldom heard of now. The British discovered that it cut both ways and the government is not nearly as enthusiastic over an uncontrolled campaign to influence public opinion as it was. It has much better and more controllable weapons in fariffs and quotas and these can be dealt with by governmental negotiation and trading.

Prospect for Auto Sales.

Automobiles also are an American article the sale of which could be greatly increased in Britain by vigorous salesmanship. For a few years after the war the American automobile dominated the British roads. In 1928 Britain imported 15,474 automobiles, nearly all from the United States. In 1932 Britain imported only 2,888 automobiles and an undue proportion of these were luxury and racing cars from France and Italy.

The British manufacturers recaptured the trade in cheap and medium priced cars by a vigorous sales policy and were helped by the system of taxation on horsepower, which gave the small British engine an advantage over the big American engine.

Gradually, however, the British motorist is learning the delights of ample horsepower and that a $25 or $30 tax does not mean so much in the cost of running his car for a year. This has been demonstrated by Ford, whose British manufactured car is the best seller in spite of its big engine and consequent high taxation.

Market Is Neglected.

Very little salesmanship should be needed now to convince the British middle class purchaser that he gets a lot more car for his money when he buys an American automobile than when he buys a British baby car at a corresponding price. Already some American manufacturers are beginning to realize this and are coming back into a market which they have neglected for some years.

Of course, it is too much to expect that the manufacturers of small lines can send over American salesmen or appoint American representatives to handle their goods exclusively, but there is no reason why a number of firms in allied but noncompetitive lines should not combine to appoint agents or their own representatives fo rthis important market.

This matter of agency versus direct selling is also an important one. There are very few American manufacturers who know anything about export trade and because of that fact they have lost opportunities in the past and will continue to lose them in the future unless they improve their methods and appoint agents who know their business.

Points Out U. S. Mistakes.

This does not apply of course to great firms like the packers, typewriter manufacturers, automobile makers and others who have large and well organized export departments, but to the comparatively small men who in the past have sold occasional orders abroad and perhaps wonder why they have not secured repeat orders. In many cases it is their own fault.

A shipping clerk, however much he may know about routing goods on the railways, rivers and lakes of the United States, often does not know much about ocean transport and less about customs formalities abroad. I have heard of goods being held in the British customs for over a month and then returned in disgust because the shipper did not know the British law required three invoices and took his time about writing by mail in reply to frantic cabled inquiries from his customer.

Packing for export is also different from packing for a short rail journey at home and goods often arrive damaged or spoiled because they were improperly packed.

Another and more serious complaint is that some American firms are inclined to regard an export order as an opportunity for working off old and unsalable goods on the foreign customer who is "too far away to kick and doesn't know any better anyhow." He generally does know better and if it isn't worth his while to start a trans-Atlantic lawsuit, at least he need not order again.

ITALY BOOSTS DUTY ON AMERICAN CARS BY SIXTY PER CENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Jan. 24.—American trade authorities today said Italy's augmented tariff schedules, announced in yesterday's official gazette, would raise the present import taxes on automobiles 60 per cent.

The United States leads as an exporter of automobiles to Italy, although the number is small. Last year about 600 cars were imported and the previous year 412 were imported. Other American imports hit by the new tariffs are shoes and rubber overshoes, in which line the United States and Czechoslovakia are the leading exporters.

Italian trade authorities today explained that the boosted auto rate is to protect Italy's home industries and is not intended as a new trade war. It is pointed out that until 1930, when Italy levied an almost prohibitive tariff on auto imports, the United States sold annually between 600 and 1,000 cars, or about 90 per cent of all foreign cars imported into Italy.

This 60 per cent rise in the tariff on cars comes at a moment when negotiations are going on in Washington to raise the quota on the Italian wine import into America.

FRANCE PLANS NAVY SUPERIOR TO TWO RIVALS

Proposes Building of New Man of War.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Naval Minister Albert Sarraut answered Chancellor Hitler's inquiry as to where France stood on the navy question today by advocating a French fleet stronger than those of Germany and Italy together.

During a secret session of the chamber of deputies' naval committee the former premier urged the speedy building of another Dunkirk to balance Germany's three Deutschlands.

The proud French Dunkirk, a man of war of 26,000 tons and with 320 mm. guns and a speed of 29 knots, according to specifications, was rushed to the stocks after Germany brought out its 10,000 ton "pocket battleships" of the Deutschland type.

Says French Navy Is "Inferior."

Sarraut said the French tonnage is now greater than the German and Italian combined, but inferior in quality because of the new Deutschland vessels.

He emphasized the need for superiority by proposing, as his own idea—not yet submitted to the French cabinet—an additional 250,000,000 franc (currently about $15,000,000) two year program of building floating airplane bases for the protection of Pacific possessions, Madagascar and Indo-China.

This would be in addition, he said, to a naval budget of 2,742,000,000 francs (about $164,520,000) already under consideration. Of this 880,000,000 francs would be for new construction.

Lists Tonnage of Powers.

The French navy, he said further, would be reinforced by a better coordination of surface, submarine, and air craft.

Sarraut gave this ranking of tonnage of the various powers:

Great Britain, 1,200,000.
The United States, 1,100,000.
Japan, 800,000.
France, 666,000.
Italy, 500,000.

He offered no figures for Germany, except to say the French tonnage exceeded that of Germany and Italy.

Britain to Mediate.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Franco-German arms dispute came up for consideration at today's meeting of the cabinet. It was decided that Great Britain shall act as mediator in an attempt to solve the deadlock between the two countries. Italian collaboration with the British efforts was believed virtually assured.

HUNDREDS DROWN IN SUDDEN FLOOD OF YELLOW RIVER

SHANGHAI, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Several hundred persons were drowned and an estimated 4,000 were made homeless by a sudden rise of the Yellow river in southern Hopei province, the stricken area reported today.

The flood came without warning. Thousands climbed housetops and trees in a frantic effort to escape the cold, swirling waters, choked with ice cakes.

An earthquake shook the provinces of Shansi and Suiyuan, destroying buildings and burying persons in the debris, said semi-official reports reaching here. It was believed that loss of life was small. The two provinces are in central and northern China.

FRENCH DEPUTY DUELS EDITOR ON SCANDAL TODAY

Take Row Over Stavisky Fraud to Field of Honor.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 24.—After much challenging but no fireworks other than exchanges of insults as a result of the $60,000,000 Stavisky bond scandal, it was confirmed today that one of the threatened duels is actually going to come off tomorrow.

The combatants will be Andre Hesse, Radical deputy and former vice president of the chamber of deputies, and Joseph Beiniex, editor of Paris Midi and a lawyer. It will be pistols and the field of honor will be a private estate near Paris—exactly where is being kept a secret, for dueling is illegal in France.

Was Stavisky Lawyer.

Hesse, who was once a lawyer for Serge Stavisky, promotor of the Bayonne pawnship frauds, considers his honor was besmirched by an article written by Beiniex in which the latter attacked him for accepting fees as a lawyer, especially from Stavisky, while serving as a deputy and official of the chamber.

The financial structure of France was subjected to a further strain today with the disclosure by investigators that a number of small provincial banks are near collapse. This followed the arrest of George Alexandre, said by police to have been a former associate of Stavisky.

$16,000,000 Involved.

A private bank promoted by Alexandre is among nine corporations now being probed by police. His operations are reported to have involved about $16,000,000.

As the probe proceeded today, Francois Marsal, premier and finance minister in 1924, was charged with violation of the corporation law in connection with the activities of the Railroad and Electric Line Equipment company. He was a director of the company. Another official of the company, Rene Gerard, was accused of a similar violation.

Meanwhile Royalists, who yesterday staged another of their frequent riots near the chamber to promote the downfall of the republican government, went inside today. They sounded their cries of "Down with the Chautemps government" in a demonstration in the halls of the Palais de Justice.

AUSTRIA SPURS DRIVE TO SILENCE FOES IN CHURCH

VIENNA, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Protestant clergymen and municipal officials today began to feel the spurs of Chancellor Dollfuss' anti-Nazi drive anew. In Innsbruck, an evangelical pastor was arrested and fined $198 for anti-government sermon. At the same time, Walter Pembaur, vice burgomaster of Innsbruck, and Vice Burgomaster Woellerd of Landeck were jailed.

More than 100 officials and former officials of Austrian towns have been jailed for Nazi activities within the last few months. Thousands of physicians, lawyers, and teachers have been fined or imprisoned.

The government unexpectedly resumed raids on socialist secret arsenals today and confiscated three machine guns, 60 rifles, 200 hand grenades and 20,000 rounds of infantry ammunition. Thirty Socialists were arrested. The munitions were stored in a municipal bath house at Schwechat, a Socialist center just outside Vienna.

Plan Vehicular Tunnel Under Delaware River

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Plans for building a $15,000,000 vehicular tunnel under the Delaware river near here were revealed today when application for a permit was made. The tunnel would be constructed from a point in the vicinity of Eddystone, Pa., to some point in Gloucester county, N. J.

ANTI-HITLERITE CHURCH LEADER BEATEN BY GANG

Hundreds of Pastors Desert Nazi Creed.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—The bitter feud over the attempt of Chancellor Hitler's followers to seize control of the Protestant church in Germany and Nazify the Christian creed reached the slugging stage today.

Seven men invaded the study in the home of the Rev. Gerhard Jacobi, a leader of the Pastors' Emergency league, chief opponent of Nazi control of the church. The clergyman was beaten. The assailants escaped. The Rev. Mr. Jacobi said he was only slightly injured and denied his assailants wore storm troopers' uniforms.

The slugging occurred several hours after several hundred pastors allied with the Nazi German Christians had issued a manifesto announcing their secession from the ranks of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller. The manifesto declared their allegiance to the traditional creed, condemned the "wrong leadership" of the Nazi wing, and appealed to all Protestants to join in forming a new united Evangelical church.

Leaders of Movement.

Leaders of the new movement include the Rev. Mr. Dannemann of Berlin [who has coöperated with the Y. M. C. A.], the Rev. Mr. Aust of Breslau, the Rev. Mr. Heck of Danzig, the Rev. Mr. Zikmann of Essen, and the Rev. Mr. Phillips of Berlin.

Many observers believe that a group of moderates, uncompromised by the recent mutual recriminations, would have a chance to revive the united Protestant church in Germany. Many members of the Pastors' Emergency league would welcome a compromise if it could be achieved on the basis of "providing absolute safety for freedom of the creed."

Three Catholic priests were sentenced by a Munich court today to from three to five months in jail for "spreading false reports on concentration camps." They are the Rev. Father Emil Muhler, the Rev. Father Hans Sollacher, and the Rev. Father Oscar Thaler.

In Stuttgart Prof. Karl Adam of Tuebingen university was dismissed. He may be summoned to court when a police investigation of clashes between Catholics and police last Sunday is completed. Prof. Adam, an instructor in the theological department, attacked the Nazi regime and upheld the Jews in a speech Sunday to Catholic Youth groups.

Renew Attack on Monarchists.

Nazi leaders today, the 222d anniversary of the birth of Frederick the Great, renewed their attacks on monarchists and reactionaries. The Nazis branded plans for a restoration of the former kaiser as "criminal."

Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior, in a speech at Weimar said "Hitler and his coöperators would defend the position given them by Providence to the last breath."

Berlin's main thoroughfare, Unter den Linden, resembled the days of the kaiser as 200 Knights of the Pour le Merite—the highest German war decoration, founded by Frederick the Great—paraded from the national war memorial to the monument of Frederick the Great, where they deposited wreaths.

A Militaristic Scene.

Spiked helmets and broad red stripes on the field gray trousers of generals prevailed in the procession, while color was added by the brown uniforms of storm troopers and the black and silver tunics of Hitler guards. War aces wore the smart bluish gray uniforms introduced for airmen by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia and reichsminister.

While dense crowds lined the street, Maj. von Gaza, an old member of the Nazi party, declared at the foot of the monument to Frederick the Great that "reaction in any shape is a crime against the German people and the Fatherland." Claiming that German youth is now filled with the same spirit as were the "incomparable" troops in the war, the major said: "For this achievement the German people is solely indebted to President von Hindenburg and Hitler. The whole nation must follow these two men on the way to a new future."

ROSS WHIPS PETROLLE IN NON-TITLE BOUT

RACE FANS CAN BUY TICKETS ON U. S. AGENTS NOW

Officials Cheer Drive on Dope Rings.

BY FRENCH LANE.

All the cheers the racegoers are letting loose these days are not for the winning horses on our active tracks. Sharing honors with the horses, and sometimes far exceeding them in their efforts to draw cheers, are the federal narcotic agents who almost daily are running down some culprit who endeavors to make his horse run faster by administering "dope."

A half dozen such cases have come to light within the last few days and the race track officials have acted with such alacrity that it looks as if a fellow can wager two dollars on a steed by the time they start running at the metropolitan centers next spring and be assured of a good honest run for his money.

Will Change Alibi.

If he loses the two dollars it should be an indication to him that his judgment of horse flesh is a trifle at fault. That old alibi "they ran my horse cold today" will be out.

The people who are being caught in the traps of the narcotic agents, with but one or two exceptions, are just the ones everybody suspected had been playing fast and loose with the code of racing. A small clique had come to be known as "dynamiters." Sometimes they seemed to be working together and at other times it looked like each was playing a lone hand. Yet they continually aroused suspicion by the eccentric races run by their horses and by the betting "killings" they were reported to have made.

The narcotic agents, after months of work, made their first big haul in Chicago at the end of the Arlington Park season last July. They have been busy at their work, going from one track to another, since then.

Convict Prominent Horsemen.

They have dug up evidence which has brought either a conviction, a grand jury indictment or a banishment from the turf against such widely known horsemen as Jack Howard, A. A. Baroni, Ivan Parke, Ben Creech, Harry Cooper, Edward Haughton, and others.

These persons invariably were associated with the "dynamiters"—a coterie which many honest turfmen came to regard as one of the most merciless that ever gained prominence in American racing. Their manipulations have caused great crowds at the race tracks to gasp, but until the government stepped in and brought the arm of the law down upon them they flourished unmolested from one end of the country to the other.

Some of them still flourish despite a United States indictment against them. They have convinced some racing officials that they are innocent until they are proved guilty.

Politics Held Sway.

Until the last few years, during which time millions of dollars have been invested in race track property, in thoroughbred breeding stock and in breeding farms, the sport of racing has been more or less at the mercy of politics and politicians. Because of this earlier condition, race track officials probably hesitated stirring up a scandal, thus attracting the political eye.

With Uncle Sam taking the lead, however, righteousness has become so much the vogue that even at the winter tracks, where laxity has heretofore been openly countenanced, the officials are ruling miscreants off the turf right and left at the slightest provocation. As far as most race fans are concerned the officials so far have made few mistakes.

New Attitude to Continue.

If this chastisement goes on at the winter tracks everybody may look forward to the "holier than thou" attitude which will settle down next season over the great tracks in Chicago, New York, Maryland, and Kentucky, tracks which have always prided themselves on having and enforcing the highest racing code in the country.

Should a stable boy be caught on the premises of one of them with as much as a plug of "chawin'" tobacco in his hip pocket the chances are the offense will call for punishment by the guillotine.

The persistence with which Uncle Sam's men are running down the turf "dynamiters" probably will relieve the various turf governing bodies of a lot of embarrassment in years to come. It surely will keep racing in the good graces of a lenient public for a much longer period of time.

Duped Honest Owners.

The doping of horses had become such a widespread practice that even a scrupulous owner often was unaware that his trainer or some other person employed in his stable was practicing it and he did not know his horses were "doped" when they ran their best races.

A case in point is that of a Chicago owner who was not overly scrupulous a few seasons back when he decided that the only way to get the better of the "dynamiters" was to use their implements of warfare. This Chicagoan tells the story himself and laughs about it because he wasn't caught "in the act" and because he became convinced that a horse was just as apt to run an unaccountable race when full of "dope" as he was when there

THE GUMPS—THE CHILD BIM CAN'T FORGET

I WAS JUST THINKING, MILLIE— I HAVE A LARGE CONSERVATORY AND GARDENS BACK ON MY ESTATE IN AUSTRALIA— WHY NOT TURN THAT INTO A BIG PLAY GROUND FOR OUR CHILDREN— AND MAKE OUR HOME A CHILD'S PARADISE—
A PLAYGROUND— WHY NOT LET THE CHILDREN GO OUT IN THE PARK WITH THE MAID?

NO! NO! I'D WANT TO GIVE MY CHILDREN EVERY HAPPINESS THAT MONEY OR POWER COULD BUY— CHILDHOOD IS THE ONE GIFT THAT IS GIVEN FREELY TO US ALL— AND WE LOSE IT SO QUICKLY— CHILDHOOD IS THE ONLY AGE IN A MAN'S LIFE WHEN HE CAN KNOW TRUE HAPPINESS—
IT IS THE SACRED DUTY OF EVERY PARENT TO GIVE TO HIS CHILDREN THE LITTLE JOYS— THE TINSEL BAUBLES THAT COST US SO LITTLE YET FLASH AND GLITTER WITH A RADIANCE GREATER THAN THAT OF GOLD AND DIAMONDS IN THE THRILLED WONDERING EYES OF CHILDREN— THEN I THINK OF THE ONE CHILD ABOVE ALL OTHERS THAT DESERVES HAPPINESS— POOR LITTLE NELL— LIVING IN THE MISERY AND POVERTY THAT I MIGHT HAVE SAVED HER FROM—

In the WAKE of the NEWS

WAKE LETTER BOX.

DEAR WAKE: Recently I listened on the radio to a broadcast interview with Gus Dorais, University of Detroit coach. Dorais called Jim Thorpe the greatest football player he had ever seen and spoke of a professional game at Massillon, O., in which sixteen or seventeen All-Americans participated.

JIM THORPE.

Jim Thorpe stood out among those players like a collegian among a bunch of kids. I lived at Massillon at the time. In the Canton back field were three former Carlisle Indians—Thorpe, Guyon, and Calac — and Dunn of Dickinson. Guyon had played at Georgia Tech and Calac at West Virginia Wesleyan after leaving Carlisle.

On the Massillon team were Knute Rockne, Dorais and Cofall of Notre Dame; Sutherland, Thornhill, and Peck of Pitt; Shorty Miller of Penn State; Bob Nash of Rutgers, McLaughry of Westminster; Doc Spears of Dartmouth; Heyman, Fleming, and Wesbecher of W. & J. All of these men either were all-American or mentioned for the honor. Just look how many are prominent now in the coaching profession.

Walter S. Wagoner, W. & J., '16.

Probably no prep school the size of Lake Forest academy has so many graduates playing on college football elevens. During 1933 former Lake Forest preps acting as varsity captains were Stan Fay of Michigan, Harold Smith of Wisconsin, and Charles Schiele of Missouri. Letter men were Jack Heston of Michigan, John Smithies and Jack Bales of Princeton, Ted Hutchinson and Frank Irving of Cornell, Eli Patterson of Chicago, Jerry Foster of Iowa, Sam Oakleaf of Augustana, and Uno Lake of Lake Forest.

Graduates who won freshman numerals were Joe Ellis, Bob Amfine, and Bob Graper of Michigan; Russ Buddington and Tim Smithies of Princeton; Bill Mole of Northwestern, Bob Duer (captain) of Lafayette, and Ted Johnson of Dennison.

A Rose.

[With apologies to Wayne King's theme song]

It was only a rose that you gave me,
Just a flower of the tenderest hue;
In its petals I read Love's sweet story,
In its perfume my dreams all came true.
It was plucked by you from the roadside,
Where my thoughts and my hopes I renew;
Yes, 'twas only a rose that you gave me,
But it kindled my love, dear, for you.

Monetary Standards.

Going down town on the "L," Jack Riley, former Northwestern tackle, heard two passengers discussing the monetary standard. One said: "Well, I see by the paper the President again has called upon all hoarders of over $100 to surrender their gold; then he's going to devalue the dollar." Replied the other: "Well, it doesn't affect me so long as they don't change the value of buffalo nickels."

WANDERING IOWA BASKET STARS ARRIVE AT U. S. C.

Deny They Were Invited by Coast School.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Two adventurous young athletes recently of the University of Iowa, Duane Swanson and Bud Froning, made an informal visit to the University of Southern California campus today to find that fame had come before them.

Through a two day beard and the grime of travel, the tall, sturdy looking youths showed surprise that they were supposed to have been invited to the Trojan institution and promptly denied statements of Rollie Williams, Iowa basketball coach, that they had been influenced in answering the call of the west.

Always Wanted to Go.

"We simply decided we wanted to go to school in California," said Swanson.

"We've always wanted to go to California. Naturally we'd heard of Coach Sam Barry [Trojan basketball coach] and the University of Southern California, so that's where we decided to go.

"And whether we get to go to school here or not, we're positively not going back!" Froning seconded that motion.

The first Trojan official the athletes saw was Prof. Hugh C. Willett, faculty athletic adviser and chairman of the Pacific coast conference faculty athletic committee.

"I would advise you most emphatically to go back to Iowa," was Prof. Willett's introductory statement.

As emphatically, the boys said they would never attend the University of Iowa again. Then they were ushered in to see Willis O. Hunter, athletic director.

Hunter Admires Nerve.

"While it puts us in a compromising position," Hunter told them, "I frankly admire your nerve to make a long trip across the country without funds in the dead of winter."

The players were treated with every hospitality on arrival. Gordon Clark, football star, took them to his fraternity house to clean up; accompanied them to the railroad station to get their baggage, and saw to it that they had luncheon.

"I guess it was a dumb thing to do," said Swanson, "but we didn't know of any one else out here, so we just checked our baggage to Coach Barry.

"We never had met Barry and no one approached us on the subject of coming west. We did meet Forest Twogood [assistant basketball coach at U. S. C.] but I don't think he remembered us. All he ever said to us was 'hello' one night at his fraternity house when he was in Iowa City last fall.

They Like Williams.

"Personally, we like Williams, but how he could accuse Barry or Twogood of talking us into coming out here I don't know.

"Coach Ossie Solem, our football coach, was at the station the night we took a freight train out of town. He was with a Des Moines sports editor at the time.

"Ossie asked us where we were going and we told him. He was nice about it and tried to influence us to stay, but we had made up our minds. I guess every athlete in the middle west would like to go to school in California if he could."

The boys arrived shortly before noon today, clad in two pairs of trousers, sweaters, and leather jackets.

"Those box cars were pretty cold," Froning admitted. "We didn't read the papers, so all this squabble was news to us."

Learn Eligibility Rules.

Prof. Willett told the boys that under the Pacific coast conference rules, they would have to get a clearance of their high school credits from Iowa; obtain an honorable discharge from that school, and show credits above a "C" average.

Stephenson and Hack Sign; 14 Cubs Now Under Contract

BY EDWARD BURNS.

President William Walker yesterday received Jackson Riggs Stephenson's eighth Cub and fourteenth major league contract. Had Stevie's come in alone he would have gone down on the list as the thirteenth to sign, which would have been disconcerting to him. Fortunately, however, Stanley Hack's contract came in on the same mail, so Prexy Walker shooed away superstition by announcing that Stevie and Stan both were the fourteenth Cubs to sign.

Since Stevie is the perennial leader of the Cub batting forces and Hack is looked upon as the most promising youngster possessed by the team, President Walker spent the day beaming over the eagerness of the two gents to get on the dotted line, rather than in frowning about the reports of Babe Herman's holdout plans.

Confirms Herman Reduction.

In connection with the Herman case Mr. Walker said that Babe's proposed stipend had been slashed and that his earlier statements that no contracts had been revised downward had been made through an oversight. He insisted the Babe's unsigned contract had not bounced into his office and added that he had not heard from Herman directly since the end of the city series last October.

It was intimated at Cub headquarters that Babe's order to have his phone disconnected to obviate the possibility of being cajoled by long distance from Chicago was entirely unnecessary. It was said that the Cub throne room is satisfied with the efficacy of the mails in the matter of adjusting things with the Babe.

Third in Hitting.

Stephenson last year finished third to Chuck Klein and Spud Davis among the National league's regulars with a mark of .326. During the thirteen years of his major league career, with Cleveland and the Cubs, Stevie has made 1,495 hits in 4,425 times at bat for a grand average of .335. Stevie's highest marks with the Cubs were .362 in 1929 and .367 in 1930. He never batted under .319, acquiring that mark in 1931, when sickness held the number of his appearances to 80 games. He batted .316 in the 1929 world series and .444 in the 1932 world series.

Hack returned to the Cubs late last season after having been farmed to Albany and was going like wildfire when his wrist was broken by a pitched ball. He was at bat 80 times, made 21 hits, including three doubles and a triple, for a .350 percentage. Mr. Walker talked with the young man by telephone at Sacramento, Cal., Tuesday and Stan informed him that the injured wrist, which had shown a tendency to act up in the knitting process, had decided to behave itself and that he was confident he would be in tiptop shape with the opening of the Cub training camp on March 4.

Dozen Players Unsigned.

Twelve players, including Babe Herman, are to be heard from in the matter of signed contracts. These include Rookie Pitchers Ward, Joiner and Lee; Vets Pat Malone, Charley Root, and Lon Warneke; Bill Herman, Augie Galan, George Stainback, Adolfo Camilli and Bill Jurges.

It is expected that about half of the Cub squad will entrain on the Cub special which is scheduled to leave Chicago on March 1. Players whose routes do not normally chart them through Chicago have been given permission to go direct to the training camp. Stevie, for instance, asked for permission to do a bit of honeymooning through the south en route to Catalina. During his bachelor days Stevie always took off from Chicago.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Len Kenney of Chicago defeated Charles McCourt, Cleveland, today to win second place in the national three cushion billiard tournament. The score was 50 to 34 in 58 innings. The victory also qualified Kenney for the world's championship tournament which will start in New York next month.

NOTRE DAME IS 37 TO 26 VICTOR OVER MAROONS

Irish Score 14th Home Triumph in Row.

Notre Dame, Ind., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Notre Dame won its fourteenth consecutive home game here tonight, defeating the University of Chicago 37 to 26. A crowd of 3,500 saw the game.

The lead seesawed through the first half, during which Bill Haarlow and Bill Lang, Chicago forward and guard, did all the Maroon scoring.

Haarlow, displaying the form which made him one of the greatest players in Chicago prep history at Bowen High school, sank the first four baskets Chicago got. Lang made three long shots, one of them coming within 45 seconds and the other within 5 seconds remaining to play in the first period. His efforts left Chicago trailing by only 17 to 14 at the half.

Peters Leads Rally.

Here Notre Dame made a rally which sent the Irish score zooming to 31 while the Maroons made only four points. Baskets by Marty Peters, Capt. Ed Krause, and Leo Crowe featured the spurt. Peters, a 6 foot 3 inch sophomore forward, made ten points, eight of which came in the second half.

Crowe led both teams in scoring with 11 points, making six in the first half to offset an off night by Krause and to keep Notre Dame in the running.

Notre Dame appeared considerably relaxed, now that its 22 game winning streak has been broken. The Irish lost to Pitt last Saturday at Pittsburgh. Chicago appeared considerably improved over its early season appearances.

SAVOLDI BANNED IN CALIFORNIA FOR RUNNING OUT

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 24.—(AP)—Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football player, has been indefinitely suspended by the California athletic commission until he meets Sammy Stein or another wrestling opponent named for him at the Coliseum Athletic club here. Dr. Harry W. Martin, chairman of the commission, ordered the suspension.

Savoldi, who failed to appear for a match with Stein a week ago last night, had been scheduled to wrestle the Jewish heavyweight next Tuesday. He evaded that engagement on the grounds he was signed more than a month ago to meet Jim Londos in Chicago Jan. 31.

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

THE major league schedules, which will be released soon, provide an open date on July 9, the day before the all-star game in New York. . . . Last year it was necessary to postpone all games scheduled the day before the contest at Comiskey park because it was arranged after the 1933 charts had been published. . . . Connie Mack again will be named manager of the American league team, according to present plans of William Harridge, president of the organization. . . . Bob O'Farrell of the Reds is the third catcher to be appointed manager of a major league club this year. . . . University of Iowa predicts a season's basketball attendance of 150,000. . . . That is more than some of the conference schools draw in football. . . . Joe E. Brown, Ty Cobb and Bill Ingram sat on the Bears' bench at San Francisco Sunday. . . .

CONNIE MACK.

Gil Berry, former Illinois football captain who spurned the professional gridiron for a movie career, is on location with Richard Arlen, Monte Blue, Roscoe Karns, Fuzzy Knight, Grace Bradley and Ida Lupino in "Come on Marines." . . . He will spend the next three weeks in synthetic tropical jungles on the Paramount ranch at Sherwood forest and in the Malibu lake region. . . . Mrs. Berry, whom he married at Illinois, uses the film name, Winnie Flint . . . She has another part coming up soon to make the family's progress a joint performance. . . . Vice President John O. Seys of the Cubs, a baseball enthusiast these many years but once a professional turf expert, still is a horse expert of parts. . . . He marks up his programs with red, blue and black pencils and only hoss men do that. . . . He also totes binoculars . . .

Indiana's basketball squad will have three valuable additions after Feb. 1. . . . Besides Fred Fechtman, 6 foot 8 inch center who rounds out his freshman year at the start of next semester, Edward Wells, forward, and Charles Scott, guard, have overcome eligibility difficulties. . . . They were stars on brilliant high school teams at Alexandria and Jeffersonville, respectively, a few years ago. . . . Herbert E. Bradley, African big game hunter, has begun his second year as president of the Campfire club of Chicago. . . . Only hunters, fishermen and explorers belong. . . . George E. Scott, a member of the executive board of the Izaak Walton league, wowed 'em with his talk at the last meeting of the group, held at the University club last week. . . . Chuck Gardiner of the Blackhawks is the only goalie in the National Hockey league who holds his hockey stick in the left hand. . . .

Nelson Culver, co-captain of the Northwestern basketball team, delivers meat for an Evanston market to earn his way through school. . . . Members of the Chicago Bears think Aaron Rosenberg, Southern California guard who played against them at Los Angeles and San Francisco, would make good in pro football. . . . He had a tendency to pull out of his position to join the secondary defense against the Bears which gave Grange, Manders, and Battles unexpected openings. . . . He was smart enough to observe his tactical mistakes and improved in the second game. . . . Donald Gray, physical director at the Kankakee Y. M. C. A., is a former University of Chicago football player. . . . Five of the eight American league managers—Hornsby, Cronin, Fonseca, Harris and McCarthy—are or were infielders. . . . Walter Johnson is the only leader who was a pitcher.

Frank Lane of Cincinnati, Big Ten football and basketball official, has traveled more than 6,000 miles since the holidays. . . . He was referee of the Tampa-Haskell football game in Tampa on Christmas day and since then he has been as far north as Minneapolis and as far east as Philadelphia. . . . Notre Dame has three basketball players—Krause, Elser, and Peters—who are 6 feet 3 inches tall and weigh more than 200 pounds.

Ten Years Ago Today—A group of Chicago business men, headed by Racing Judge Joseph A. Murphy, were planning to buy controlling interest in the Hawthorne race track. . . . William Veeck announced that all the Cubs were signed with the exception of four. . . . Harold Osborne broke one world's record and tied another in the seventh annual indoor track and field meet of the I. A. C. at the Broadway armory.

CHAMP TAKES EVERY ROUND FROM SLUGGER

11,617 See Veteran Lose Last Fight.

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Barney Ross, world's lightweight champion, hammered Billy Petrolle, Fargo, N. D., welterweight, pitilessly and tirelessly through 10 rounds of bitter fighting at the Coliseum tonight and sent the veteran into defeat and retirement.

After the former Chicago Golden Glove champion, who won the 135 pound title from Tony Canzoneri last year, got through punching and pounding Petrolle, the veteran's manager, Jack Hurley, announced it was Petrolle's last fight.

"He's getting too old now, and I don't want him punched about by these fresh, strong youngsters," said Hurley.

No Excuse, No Regrets.

"I have no excuses to offer and neither has Petrolle. He never has," Hurley continued. "Ross was just too fast and young and active for him. Billy was as good as he could be, but is not the old Petrolle, and I don't intend to send him into any more fights."

A crowd of 11,617 saw Petrolle's last stand and left the Bronx arena with memories of a plodding old warrior who fought his hardest in a futile struggle. He battled heroically against a great champion, but after the final bell the unanimous decision of Judges William P. Dunn and Charlie Draycott went to Ross amid a roar of approval from the crowd.

The 11,617 were only a portion of the crowd that journeyed to the Bronx. Thousands were turned away when all available tickets were exhausted an hour before the fight. The receipts were $33,312 net.

Ross Proves Greatness.

Awarding of the decision was a mere formality. Every one, including Petrolle and Hurley, knew Ross had won. Ross proved ownership of every essential for a great title holder. Many who wondered how he had conquered Petrolle last year and twice beat Tony Canzoneri found their answer in his masterful exhibition tonight.

Ross' title was not at stake, because the match was fought at catchweights, 142 pounds. He came in at 136¾ pounds. Ross was at his best and so was Petrolle, who tipped 141½ pounds. The champion pounded and hammered the stouthearted Petrolle, through each of the ten rounds.

He entered the ring a favorite in the betting at odds of 14 to 5, and he won as a champion and such a prohibitive favorite should. He took every round and did everything but knock out Petrolle. Petrolle escaped this humiliation only because his jaw is as strong as his fighting heart.

Barney Slugs It Out.

Through every round Ross forced the issue with a systematic exhibition of boxing and fighting. He made Petrolle, a reputed slugger, break ground, fought him toe to toe, and punch for punch in frequent exchanges, in which Petrolle always ran a poor second. As early as the first round Ross sent Petrolle reeling backward with rights to the jaw, and drove the veteran to the ropes.

Petrolle placed his faith in a roundhouse right swing for the jaw that never landed, or he led with left hooks to the body which were wasted on Ross' protecting right elbow. He missed frequently and in the fourth round was cautioned three times for punching low.

Petrolle Senses Defeat.

Stung by Ross' blows, Petrolle began to break ground in the fifth round and was thoroughly beaten thereafter. He must have sensed he was making a losing fight, for starting with the sixth he began throwing a desperate overhand right for the jaw with the beginning of each round, quite obviously with the hope that one blow would win for him.

At the finish Petrolle's eyes were swollen and his lips were bruised and bleeding. But he ended the battle facing the foe and swinging fiercely although wildly.

Johnny Bonito of Bronx won the decision from Johnny Gaito of Yonkers in the six round bout that closed the program. Mike Belloise, Yorkville featherweight, defeated Al Roth of the Bronx in six rounds. Patsy Larocco of Harlem was awarded the decision over Lou Fox, east side lightweight, in six rounds.

REVIVE REGATTA AT POUGHKEEPSIE NEXT JUNE 16TH

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—A major event returns to the calendar of sports this year with the resumption of the Poughkeepsie boat race. On June 16, if that date is found to be agreeable to the committee of Poughkeepsie and the railroad handling the observation train, the regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing association, abandoned last year, will be held this spring. This was settled today at the annual meeting of the board of stewards in New York, attended by representatives of all five member colleges.

"FIRST ROBIN" OF 1934 IS JUST A 1933 HOLDOVER

Woodpeckers, Bluebirds Also Stay in North.

BY BOB BECKER.

The report of the "first early robin" having been recorded in a downstate newspaper, bird fans in Illinois can take a hike through the country and enjoy the sport of finding a number of these birds. Of course, robins observed in January are not "early birds."

The point is that a number of robins stay with us all winter, just as we have cardinals, red headed woodpeckers, an occasional meadowlark and other song birds which ordinarily are supposed to strike out for the south every fall. So these so-called "first robins" are really winter residents.

Woodpecker Likes Chicago.

In our neighborhood there is a red headed woodpecker which has every reason to be annoyed by bird fans who get excited over the "first robin" business. This woodpecker [we see him nearly every morning] really should have been hailed as the first woodpecker of 1934. As a matter of fact, he wins honors by being the "last bird" to refuse to migrate from our neighborhood and the first one up every morning to eat a breakfast of suet.

The cardinals come over to visit him quite frequently and then we have a beautiful display of gay colored feathers in the yard. Between the red on the woodpecker and the brilliant plumage of the cardinal male the winter morning seems pretty bright, despite an overcast sky.

Bluebirds Are Plentiful.

Of course the lower half of the state of Illinois has more birds around during the winter than we can see here in Chicagoland. For example, W. D. W. of Mount Vernon reports a large number of bluebirds in that part of the state. He writes:

"No robins here at this time. Lots of them here during January last winter. Many blue birds here now. In fact, more of them than we had last year. A succession of mild winters or an increase of blubirds may be the reason. Bob whites here have learned to evade the hunter by hot-footing it. So many hunters that the birds [I believe] have learned how to fool them. The cardinal grosbeak, the champion optimist, has been singing the last two weeks. Very few starlings have made their appearance. Easy to distinguish their characteristics of short tails, yellowish beaks and nervous, jumpy manner. Guess here is another pest that has come to stay. I am now feeding titmice, chicadees, marsh wrens, nuthatches, juncos, and cardinals with very little trouble from the sparrows, whereas a few years ago it was a constant battle."

Here's Another Surprise.

One of the most interesting reports on birds observed during the middle of our winter season is that concerning a flock of wild geese flying around near Mackinaw City at the extreme northern part of the lower peninsula of Michigan. Nelson L. Barnes of Chicago writes us that residents near the straits of Mackinaw were dumbfounded by the appearance of the birds at this time of the year.

George Haberski Whips Johnny Fitzpatrick.

Solly Dukelsky, Chicago, won an eight round decision over Jack King of Little Rock, Ark., last night at the Arcadia Gardens. Dukelsky weighed 137 pounds and King 161½.

It was a slugging bout throughout. Dukelsky's superior stamina and harder punching gave him the battle.

Pacek whipped Frank Ketter at the Stadium last month. The other matches will bring together Hugh Allen and Art Zimmer, featherweights, and Jack O'Connell and Frank Keevil, lightweights.

Young Geno, La Salle, Ill., featherweight, started training at Trafton's gymnasium yesterday for an eight round battle with Paul Dazzo, Chicago, at Midway arena Monday. It will be their third meeting, each having won previously.

Karl Ogren and Solly Dukelsky, local middleweights, will meet at Arcadia gardens next Tuesday instead of Wednesday. . . . Henry Rothier resumed workouts yesterday after a layoff due to a managerial dispute. . . . Johnny Phagan has opened drills for a bout against Solly Dukelsky at Marigold gardens, Feb. 5. . . . Nate Lewis, Stadium matchmaker, will return from New York tomorrow.

Jimmy Cummings, middleweight Golden Gloves runnerup last year, will receive his hardest pro test against Mickey Misko on the Sammy Slaughter-Frank Battaglia card at Milwaukee tomorrow. . . . Frankie Misko, Saginaw, Mich., 160 pounder, expects to battle Tony Bruno for the second time at Milwaukee Feb. 6.

The annual charity amateur show sponsored by the Franklin Park Athletic association will be held tonight at the park gymnasium, 14th street and Kolin avenue. Harry Joseph, president of the west parks board, and several commissioners, headed by James C. Petrillo, will be introduced. Proceeds will go into the park fund to buy athletic equipment.

Entries will close a week from tomorrow for the Jewish Orangized Youths' amateur boxing tournament at Jewish People's institute Feb. 5 and 6. Any boxer who hasn't competed professionally and is of Jewish antecedents is eligible to enter.

8 State Race Boards Aim to Consolidate

Miami, Fla., Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Racing officials from eight states, meeting here today, took preliminary steps toward the formation of a permanent organization of racing commissioners. Its purpose is to bring about uniformity of action among commissions in all states where horse racing is legal.

Discussions during the meeting led to the belief that the chief objective of the proposed organization is the elimination of the use of narcotic drugs and other stimulants on race horses, a practice which has resulted in government intercession and conviction on violation of the narcotic laws of many trainers and jockeys in widely separated parts of the United States.

Credit Hanna for Idea.

The organization will be the first of its kind ever formed in the United States. Mark R. Hanna of Michigan, the only "one man racing commission" in the country, is credited with having originated the plan.

A committee to prepare by-laws for a permanent association was appointed with the following members: James F. Hayward of Maryland, John F. Mudd, also of Maryland; Ralph W. Davis of New Hampshire, B. F. Paty of Florida, George Blecker of Ohio, Robert O'Brien of New Jersey, Tom R. Underwood of Kentucky.

In announcing preliminary plans to the meeting Mr. Mudd said that under present conditions every state commission has different functions and degrees of authority in turf matters and that a nation-wide organization would permit the immediate exchange of rulings in cases of violation of the narcotic act, as well as breaches of common practice in the conduct of racing.

Mr. Mudd and Theodore E. Mueller, commissioner from Kentucky, urged that all important matters be referred for final action individually by the commissions in each state.

Will Invite Coöperation.

Mr. Hanna said that the association will invite the full coöperation of breeders, racing associations, horsemen, and all interested in the welfare of the sport. He paid particular tribute to the press of the country, which, he averred, has been largely instrumental in the development of racing throughout the United States. He said the continuation of this support would rest upon action which will bolster public confidence in racing and the men responsible for it.

"Racing is more than 95 per cent clean," Mr. Hanna said, "and it must be the purpose of the racing commissions to do coöperatively what they have undertaken individually in trying to uplift the standards of racing."

Arthur N. Hancock, thoroughbred breeder of Paris, Ky., who attended by invitation, urged that the entertainment of racing be made the primary feature and that betting be looked upon only as an incident to it.

Horsemen Meet to Plan Trot Revival

Further impetus was given to harness racing and a Grand Circuit meeting in Chicago last night at a get-together of trot enthusiasts at the Hotel Sherman, where Thomas B. Hogan outlined his plans for the coming season of approximately 42 days.

The group of 75 harness racing veterans, who recalled the past and meetings at Washington Park, Garfield Park, and Wheaton, were informed by Mr. Hogan that the first harness race meeting in Chicago for many years will open at the county fair ground track, West River road and North avenue, on May 30 and will continue until the last week of October, with matinée events and one professional race each Saturday, Sunday, and holiday during this period.

Matinees for Sport.

Matinée trots, Mr. Hogan explained, are for the love of the sport and have as their reward trophies and cups. Purses of $100 to $300 will be offered for the professional races. The plans for the Grand Circuit meeting Sept. 10 to 14 also were pushed ahead as the visiting horsemen of Chicago and out of town promised their undivided support to restore Chicago to an important place in the harness race wheel.

Another meeting to perfect plans will be called about March 1 in a downtown location, after which the clubhouse at the county fair grounds will be the headquarters of the Chicago Riding and Trotting club, organized by Mr. Hogan, who 18 months ago again became imbued with the desire of taking part in harness racing after years away from the game.

Out of Towners Attend.

Driving forces behind the new Chicago Riding and Trotting club are, in addition to Mr. Hogan, who is slated to be secretary-treasurer, Henry Knight, Frank Fulton, and R. W. McElvin, one of whom is to be president.

Racing Fans Cheer Drive on Dope Rings

It happened at a winter track when the Chicagoan possessed a nag on the shady side of life and he conceived the idea of giving the steed a shot to make him better than he was. He entered the animal in what he deemed proper company for his exploit, but decided he'd better not take his trainer into his confidence.

Mr. Owner, at the proper moment, dispatched his trainer to the saddle shop and as soon as the trainer was out of sight he proceeded to give Old Dobbin a spirited bang of dope.

The trainer did not suspect the ruse and while the owner was away making a sizeable bet, Mr. Trainer decided to give the steed an inspirational jolt and he, too, tripped away to lay down a wager. That make two bangs for Old Dobbin.

But this was not the end. The stable superintendent, seeing the owner and trainer both absent, decided he had discovered a good spot. Soon Old Dobbin's hide was popping with shot No. 3 and the barn superintendent ran away to gamble.

In due course the hopped up animal was saddled and got away from the post before his burden of narcotics really took hold. At the eighth pole all the bangs took effect at once and Old Dobbin got the idea he was a Pegasus, Napoleon's big white horse, George Washington's favorite single footer and Gen. Sheridan's charger, all rolled into one.

Were Bettors' Faces Red!

Truth is Old Dobbin acted perfectly silly, revealing that he had his mind on history and not on racing. Three bettors felt even sillier than Old Dobbin acted.

Track officials, 'tis said, noted the quaint behavior of the horse, but thought nothing of it. They figured that if old men sometimes figured they were Napoleon, it was all right for an old nag to imagine itself Napoleon's horse. And they let it go at that, expecting at any time to see Old Dobbin trying to kiss the patrol judge good night.

97 Take Third Golden Gloves Examination

Ninety-seven boxers reported last night for their physical examinations at Trafton's gymnasium, the third of a series which will qualify them for the Chicago sectional Golden Gloves tournaments. The examinations will be resumed next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. Nine hundred more letters will have been mailed to entrants by Saturday with instructions to report on those nights.

Six failed to pass requirements of the medical examiners last night. One of those rejected was a 17 year old boy who was found to have incipient tuberculosis. He told doctors he never had been ill.

Fred W. Morross, 34 years old, engineer at the Congress theater and Pat Witty, 33, janitor, passed their physical examinations. Morross, who weighs 190 pounds, also is proprietor of a candy store at 2639 North Rockwell street. He has a son four years old. Whitty was stopped by Johnny Phagan in the 1933 Golden Gloves trials.

Earl Morton Roberts is not satisfied with winning the Southern A. A. U. bantamweight championship at New Orleans, La., three years ago. He wants to add a diamond studded Golden Glove to his collection of medals. He is in the featherweight class.

The tall and short of it was exemplified by Sammy Scoleri, 4 feet 11 inch flyweight, and George Wallace, 6 ft 5 inch light heavyweight. The tiny Scoleri is in the open division and the rangy Wallace in the novice.

His 16th birthday last Dec. 31 was his most important, according to James Mitchell, a student at Lane Tech High school. He said it gave him an opportunity to enter this year's tournament. Boys under 16 are not eligible.

Billy Tontsch, member of Trafton's gymnasium, is a contender for welterweight honors. Billy, born at Farrell, Pa., 20 years ago, recently finished serving a year in the United States aviation corps at Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill.

HAWKS FIGHT TO STAY NEAR LEAD IN GAME TONIGHT

Must Beat Canadiens to Keep Pace.

The Montreal Canadiens, who have always been favorites in Chicago, will play their second game of the season on Stadium ice tonight against the Blackhawks. If the Hawks expect to keep pace with the division leading New York Rangers and Detroit Red Wings, they must defeat the Canadiens.

The Hawks were tied with the Red Wings and Rangers before Tuesday night's games. They were dropped to third place when the other two leaders won from the Ottawa Senators and Boston Bruins.

Test of Speed.

Tonight the Rangers play the Senators at Ottawa and the Red Wings meet the Americans in New York. Defeat by the Canadiens will drop the Hawks two full games behind the leaders, if Detroit and the Rangers triumph. However, if the Red Wings and Rangers lose, a victory for the Hawks will move them back into a tie for first place.

The game tonight will be a test of speed. Unlike the other clubs in their division, the Canadiens leave all the body checking to their defense men and the forwards try to outskate the opposition. The Hawks, light and fast, take kindly to this style of play.

He Plays 500.

On Thursday night, Feb. 8, Joliat will be honored by the city of Montreal on the occasion of his 500th consecutive game in a Canadien uniform, a record unequaled by any other player in the history of hockey.

The Hawks completed their preparations for the game with a workout at the Stadium yesterday. All injured players have completely recovered.

LEAFS PLAY ALL STARS

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—National Hockey league officials decided today to play an exhibition game with in the next four weeks at Toronto, proceeds of which will go to Irvin (Ace) Bailey, who was seriously injured in a game at Boston several weeks ago.

The Toronto Maple Leafs, of which Bailey is a member, will meet an all-star team composed of members of all the other teams in the league. No more than two members of each team will be selected for the all-star squad.

This decision was made at a special meeting of the board of governors, called by Toronto, Montreal Maroons, and Ottawa Senators in protest over the original decision in the Bailey-Shore incident.

Toronto requested that it be reimbursed for the $8,000 hospital bill incurred by Bailey's injuries. The directors voted for the exhibition game instead, all proceeds to go to Bailey. Frank Calder, president of the league; Frank Patrick, managing director, and Thomas Arnold of Montreal, will decide the exact date of the game and will select the all-star team.

Expenses of the all-team combination will be paid by the clubs of which they are members and the Toronto arena will donate the use of the Toronto garden.

Decision Is Compromise.

The all-star game was a compromise between two proposals: One, that the Boston club should be fined, and the other that such accidents were a part of the game and that no financial settlement should be made.

The original suspensions were approved, and Shore will return to eligibility Sunday, when the Rangers play the Boston Bruins here.

Since a regular meeting was scheduled for early in February, the board adjourned its special session after disposing of the Bailey-Shore case and then went into regular session to consider other league matters.

Connie Smythe, Toronto manager, said he was satisfied with the disposition of the case. Toronto's main objective, he asserted, was to protect Bailey, who probably never will be able to make a livelihood out of hockey again. The Leafs also will drop their $8,000 hospital and medical expense claim against Boston.

HOLD WOMEN'S WESTERN GOLF MEET OCT. 22-27

The 1934 match play championship of the Women's Western Golf association will be held at Los Angeles, Cal., the week of Oct. 22-27, according to an announcement made yesterday. The California climate was responsible for choosing the unusually late dates, Mrs. Howard D. Raymond, president of the association, said.

The open tournament at Portland, Ore., probably will be held two weeks previous to the match play event. Between the two, a two day invitation event will be held at San Francisco. Miss Marion Hollins, former national champion, will entertain contestants from the central states at her Santa Cruz club.

Dates for the Derby, 72 hole medal play tourney, and the junior event, both of which will be held on Chicago district courses, were reserved.

Kildeer to Hold First Party at Patten Gym Tonight

The first annual midwinter stag party of the Kildeer Country club will be held tonight at Patten gymnasium in Evanston. K. L. Wilson, club president and athletic director of Northwestern university, has turned over the facilities of the gymnasium for the event. A program of ping-pong, volley ball, swimming, boxing, and wrestling has been arranged for the members. Northwestern's wrestling and swimming team will give exhibitions. Plans for the summer golfing program will also be made at this time.

Skate Marks Are Periled at Oconomowoc

Herb Taylor of New York, covered a practice mile in 2:52 3-5; same time it took Ed Schroeder last Sunday to win the national title at Minneapolis. Allan Potts of Brooklyn, whose specialty is sprinting, was timed at 36 seconds in a 440 yard dash, four-tenths of a second faster than his time in the nationals.

Most of the skaters time themselves in practice. Each carries a stop watch. Leo Freisinger, who lowered four records and tied one in a single meet, took a loosing up drill today. He will meet his stiffest competition in Orel Duffy, Canada, a record holder.

The intermediate title will be at stake for the first time. Henceforth a North American champion will be crowned in that division. Those who qualify as leading contenders for championships, besides Duffy and Freisinger, are Clifford Mainz, Milwaukee, Wis.; Frankie Rowan, Minneapolis, Minn., and Jim McElroy, Troy, N. Y.

Schroeder will rest until the arrival of a new pair of skates from Chicago. He cracked up his blades in the spill during the five miler that cost him the United States title last week.

Despite Jim Webster's victory in the nationals, he is not the favorite to win the major event here. Schroeder, Bill Logan of St. John, N. B., Canada, and his teammate, Herb Flack, rank as most likely winners.

Draw Will Decide Referee in Knight, Rosenbloom Bout

Miami, Fla., Jan. 24.—(AP)—A hat draw will determine the referee for the Maxie Rosenbloom-Joe Knight bout here Feb. 1 for the world's light heavyweight championship, their managers decided today.

After two hours of argument the managers agreed to the boxing commission's suggestion that the names of Leo Shea and Harry Graham be placed in a hat and a name be drawn by some disinterested person after the fighters are in the ring.

The managers also agreed to select one judge each from a list of eight proposed by the commission. This selection will also be announced after the fighters are in the ring.

The fighters have until 3 p. m. tomorrow to post their forfeits for weight and appearance. Rosenbloom must deposit $1,000 with the commission and Knight $500.

Hunters' Stamp Tax Indorsed by Conference

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—A resolution indorsing the duck stamp bill, providing that hunters of migratory water fowl shall pay $1 for a stamp to be placed on their state hunting license, was passed today by the American game conference. Proceeds would be used for improvement and protection of breeding grounds and refuges to perpetuate wild water fowl.

Two hundred delegates arranged to leave tonight for Washington to go before a senate wild life committee and discuss the Thomas H. Beck $18,000,000 wild life program. The plan must yet be approved by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. It provides for a corporation, of which Harry L. Hopkins, civil works administrator, is president, to lease for one year, with an option to buy, 50,000,000 acres of marginal land.

Land for Upland Game.

Through dams and dikes and other engineering, nesting and breeding areas would be developed. The second part of the plan provides for land to be made habitable for upland game.

Speakers at the conference talked enthusiastically of the government land acquisition plan, which was presented to them in detail yesterday by Mr. Beck. In a paper by Prof. Aldo Leopold, chairman of the American game policy committee, the plan already tried in Iowa was discussed. Here demonstration areas, warden training camps, and farmer handbooks are among the effective instruments used to perpetuate wild life, he said.

Paul E. Redington of the bureau of biological survey of the United States department of agriculture told the conference that the alarming decrease of wild fowl reflects more than a century of indifference, and that if any game is to be preserved, a national program will have to be put mto effect at once.

Gives Real Solution.

Instead of increased restriction of the gunner, Mr. Redington said that the real solution of the problem lies in the conservation of wild fowl breeding spots, by enforcing the game laws, and by multiplying the sanctuary areas.

Cleveland to Send 8 Goal Team for Polo

Word was received here yesterday that the Cleveland Riding club, which will oppose the North Shore Polo and Hunt club of Chicago in Saturday night's windup at the 124th Field Artillery arena in Washington park, will be represented by an eight goal team. These trios will clash in the senior division feature of the Metropolitan Indoor Polo league.

Captained by William D. Fergus, three goal player, the Buckeyes will line up also with Hank Evinger and Maj. Ollie Gaites, rating three and two goals, respectively. Fergus and Maj. Gaites played on the Cleveland Riding club's high goal team, which was defeated only by the 112th Field Artillery of Trenton, N. J., in the class C national championships last spring.

Evinger was captain of the low goal team that brought the national class D title in 1933 to Cleveland through defeat of the Chicago champions, the 124th Field Artillery Cardinals.

With a rating of 12 goals, North Shore's combination of Jim Hannah, Herb Lorber and Frank Bering will award the visitors a 4 goal handicap.

The Chicago Riding club trio, which will meet Fort Sheridan in the opener of the evening, will present John C. Bowers, team captain; William [Bud] Collins and Dave Silberman. Two certainties for Fort Sheridan are Lieut. R. C. [Red] Cooper, and Lieut E. C. Greiner.

2 TOWNS OF INDIA WIPED OFF MAP BY EARTHQUAKE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 24.—A report by engineers who had made a hasty survey that the names of Monghyr and Muzaffarpur, towns of India, might as well be erased from the map because of the appalling loss of life and property in the earthquake of Jan. 15 today supported fears that deaths will surpass anything in the country's history.

Twenty-five thousand are dead in Monghyr district alone, the rajah of Monghyr declared. At least two weeks more will be needed to dig the remaining unnumbered dead from the shambles of homes, temples, and business houses, he said. Two generations, he predicted, will be needed to rehabilitate the quake area.

Fear Cholera Outbreak.

An epidemic of cholera is feared in the disrupted area, which, should it develop, would wreak further incalculable hardship and death on the homeless rescuers. An isolation ward has been erected.

A government inspector said bodies are being found hourly in the twisted wreckage of an area two miles square about the town of Monghyr, in which region an important Moslem festival was in progress when the temblors struck.

The death list is reported to include two daughters of a sovereign in a province of Nepal, where recent delayed reports indicated the three chief towns of Patan, Bhatgaon and Katmandu were nearly destroyed. The ruler's daughters were killed when a part of the palace collapsed.

Worst in Generations.

Though authorities seemingly try to conceal the colossal proportions of death and destruction, they have been unable to hide the fact that this is one of India's greatest catastrophes in generations.

Bihar province's government functions are halted with the administration buildings damaged. Relief measures are said to be sufficient, and tents dot the province as temporary homes for the victims.

2,200 Dead Reported to London.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—(AP)—A death toll in excess of 2,200 in three British Indian provinces, which with Nepal comprised the center of the Indian earthquake, was reported today in advices to the India office.

Information from the government of Bihar and Orissa province gave the known deaths reported by cities as: Muzaffarpur, 800; Aerbhanga, about 300; Monghyr, between 400 and 500. The total of fatalities reported outside these towns is about 600. Full extent of the disaster will be known only when normal communications are restored, it was explained.

CHARGES FALSE ARREST IN SUIT AGAINST STORE

Charles R. Nichols, 559 Surf street, a real estate agent, filed suit for $100,000 against the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company yesterday in the Superior court, charging false arrest and malicious prosecution.

Nichols charges in his bill that employés in the A. & P. store at 2901 Broadway seized him on Aug. 26, 1933, accused him of trying to steal a 19 cent can of corn, treated him roughly, and held him for an hour and a half before turning him over to police. He was charged with larceny and acquitted later by a jury in the Municipal court.

Attorney Paul Pomeroy, who filed the bill, said Nichols was accompanied by his dog when he entered the store and took the can of corn from a shelf with the intention of purchasing it. The dog ran from the store, the attorney said, and Nichols pursued it, carrying the can.

Stanley Miskiewicz, 10 years old, 248 157th street, Harvey, was fatally injured yesterday when he was struck by an automobile at South Halsted and 158th streets in Harvey. He died on the way to a hospital. The driver of the car, Mrs. J. T. Woodside, Dartmouth road, Flossmoor, was questioned by police and released on her own bond pending an inquest. She said the boy ran into the path of her automobile while apparently playing tag on his way home from school.

This death and four others increased the 1934 motor toll in Cook county to 101. The other victims:

Miss Alice Lindgren, 49 years old, 1712 Glenlake avenue. Died in the Edgewater hospital a short time after she was struck at Clark street and Glenlake avenue by an automobile driven by Fernni Jones, 1349 Estes avenue.

20,000 WATCH 600 CAR CORTEGE OF JOHN M'COOEY

New York, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—Brooklyn gave its late Democratic leader, John H. McCooey, the biggest funeral the borough has known in many years when services were held for him today at the church of Our Lady of Victory. Fully 20,000 persons lined the route of the cortege from the McCooey home to the church, 600 automobiles were in the funeral procession and the capacity of the church was strained by the 1,300 men and women, many of them nationally prominent.

They heard the leader eulogized for his "fair and clean methods of campaigning and his many great services for the betterment of the city."

Three hundred and eight patrolmen and mounted men kept the crowd in perfect order, although it was difficult at times to hold the spectators in line in front of the church. Only a fraction of the number who tried to get in the edifice were able to do so. The family and close personal friends, the honorary pallbearers—among whom were Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Postmaster General James A. Farley—and members of the Democratic and social clubs to which Mr. McCooey belonged practically filled the church, and there was very little room for the general public.

A complaint that the cleaning industry code is not being enforced in Chicago and that as a result the faith of small tailors in the NRA is being broken was sent to Gen. Alex Smied, president, and Louis Retchin, secretary of the association, which has 2,000 members, informed the code officials that a 29 cent price for cleaning garments was being established and that that it is impossible for the membership to carry on with the code in the face of such competition.

$300 IS WEEKLY COST OF JOKERS' FALSE ALARMS

Firemen who responded last night to one of the numerous false fire alarms turned in from in front of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd's girl school, 49th street and Prairie avenue, decided to figure out what these practical jokes cost the city. An average of one false alarm a week is sounded from that corner. Each time 45 men respond and take with them to the scene three pumping engines, two hook and ladder trucks, an insurance patrol, and a rescue squad truck. Included among the men are two battalion chiefs and a division marshal. Based on the cost of operating the entire department annually, they estimated that the city is spending an average of $300 a week to send its fire fighters to this one corner to check on false alarms.

FOUR AMERICANS MAY BE FREED IN MALLORCA TODAY

MADRID, Jan. 24.—Four Americans held in jail in Palma, Mallorca, for assaulting a Civil Guard, may be released tomorrow, it was reliably stated tonight. The Spanish government has under consideration the procedure involved in freeing them from their sentences of six months and a day, pending action upon the attorney general's recommendation for a pardon.

The Americans are Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood of West Springfield, Mass.; Roderick Mead of New York, and Edmund W. Blodgett of Stamford, Conn.

American Ambassador Claude G. Bowers said that "the government is doing everything technically possible to effect the early release of the Americans." They have been in custody since last Sunday when they were arrested following a Supreme court reversal of a military tribunal acquitting them of the charge.

ALLMAN SUSPENDS PATROLMAN WHO BECAME A BANDIT

Commissioner of Police James P. Allman yesterday ordered the suspension of Policeman Boyle Bernot of the New City station, who was captured by fellow policemen Tuesday night after he had robbed the ticket office of the Illinois Central suburban station at 60th street. Bernot confessed after his arrest that he had committed 14 robberies during the ten months he has been on the force. He is being held at the detective bureau.

Bernot is 28 years old, six feet tall and entered on his probation last March 25. He was made a regular member of the department on Sept. 28. In his cell he described himself as a model husband, declaring that he does not drink or smoke.

Bernot will be exhibited at showups in the detective bureau to victims of bandits answering his description. Police were unable to find his wife in the Bernot home at 8138 Drexel boulevard. Bernot said that one of the things that drove him to adopt a career of crime was the fact that his wife is expecting a baby. The wife is being sought.

He was pensioned by Director Frederick Stock in 1922. Later he played with the Chicago Civic Opera orchestra, the Chicago theater orchestra, and the W-G-N orchestra. He is survived by his widow, Elsa, and two married daughters. Funeral services will be held at Graceland chapel at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

SALESMAN SHOT BY HOLDUP GANG DIES OF WOUND

Reginald Henion, 32 years old, 5052 Washington boulevard, a salesman, died in the Burrows hospital yesterday of a bullet wound inflicted New Year's eve when he was shot by one of several robbers who held up a saloon at 2023 South Racine avenue in which he was a patron. Henion his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. John Strickland, 4904 Jackson boulevard, were in the saloon celebrating the occasion when the bandits entered. Disregarding the commands of the leader, who brandished a sawed off shotgun, Henion neglected to raise his hands and congratulated the gunmen for "pulling a good joke." The robber fired and then fled with $150 a companion had snatched from the cash register.

WALLACE SPLIT WITH PACKERS HINTS U. S. RULE

Drops Market Pact; Objects to Hog Bids.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—In a bristling letter to the Institute of American Meat Packers, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace tonight summarily suspended all negotiations between the AAA and the packers looking to the formation of a federal marketing agreement for the packing industry.

The secretary's action had the immediate effect of strengthening reports that the government intends to take over several packing plants and engage in the processing of hogs now being purchased by the Federal Emergency Relief administration for distribution to the idle.

Such a plan is reported to have been urged for some time by certain officials close to Wallace, notably by Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, his economic adviser.

Bids Regarded as Too High.

The secretary's letter, addressed to William W. Wood, president of the packers' institute, declared that Wallace was disappointed at the lack of coöperation given by the packers in the purchase of surplus meat for relief distribution. Bids opened this week for a new purchase of hogs were unsatisfactory, the secretary asserted. In view of the failure of the packers to give coöperation, he stated, it seemed there would be no point in discussing a marketing agreement for the industry.

The relief bids to which Wallace took exception were opened by the Federal Emergency Relief administration day before yesterday and contracts under them for the processing of 23,435 hogs daily have already been awarded to 53 packing concerns throughout the country. The bids, according to relief officials, ranged from $1.25 to $1.82 per hundredweight live hog. The daily purchases are to last for 20 marketing days, it was learned.

See Big Profit to Packers.

For some time, it has been reported that certain officials of the AAA have regarded the packers' bids for the processing of relief hogs as too high. At the same time, other officials of the administration familiar with the hog marketing situation have expressed an opinion that the bids were probably fair in view of the fact that relief contracts force the packers to process the meat in an extraordinary manner. It was learned tonight, however, that officials of the Federal Relief corporation regarded the latest bids as the packers' best guesses at the highest prices the government would stand for.

The sharp tone of Wallace's letter, together with the necessity of slaughtering and processing live hogs bought by the government, gave credence to the repeatedly current reports that radically minded members of the AAA were urging government's entry into the packing business.

Surprise to Packers.

The secretary's action took representatives of the packers here by surprise. At the same time, spokesmen for the cattle industry who have been here for several days in connection with pending legislation to make cattle a "basic commodity" under the farm adjustment act, declared that they had no intimation such a move was contemplated by the AAA.

For some time, it was said, the cattle industry has been vitally interested in the packers' agreement in the belief that it was the only means of securing relief under the farm act. Although cattle are probably to be made a basic commodity, representatives of the industry tonight were gravely concerned as to the possible course the government intends to take regarding the agreement.

Their protest at the apparent scuttling of the pact is expected to be registered at a meeting of spokesmen for sixty-five live stock associations invited by Secretary Wallace to confer with AAA officials on Monday regarding a cattle program.

Prince Likely to Win Posts in Armour Co.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Opposition to the selection of Frederick H. Prince, Boston capitalist, as finance committee chairman of Armour & Co., appeared to have spent itself yesterday as the hour for the annual meeting approached. Shareholders will meet tomorrow at the company's general offices in the stockyards to elect a new board, and it appeared certain yesterday that Prince and a number of his associates would be among the new directors. The new board will then meet and elect officers, including a finance chairman, for the coming year.

ELISHA WALKER.

The opposition to Prince's election comes largely from Chase Ulman, St. Louis capitalist and owner of 25,000 shares of Armour junior stocks, who contends that Prince's position as chief owner of the stockyards renders him unacceptable as head of the big packing concern.

Doubt Ulman's Power.

Last week Ulman addressed a letter to Armour stockholders voicing his objections and soliciting proxies to be voted at the meeting tomorrow. No estimate could be obtained yesterday as to the number of proxies mustered by Ulman, but in quarters close to the company it was doubted if Ulman would be able to insure his own election as a director. Before he took his fight to the shareholders Ulman was offered a position on the board, but refused it.

Several days ago it was stated that the management and the Prince group had in hand sufficient proxies to elect a majority of the board. Since that time, however, there has been time for switch of proxies on both sides. What the net result of such shifting could not be determined, but the management expressed confidence that the results would be satisfactory.

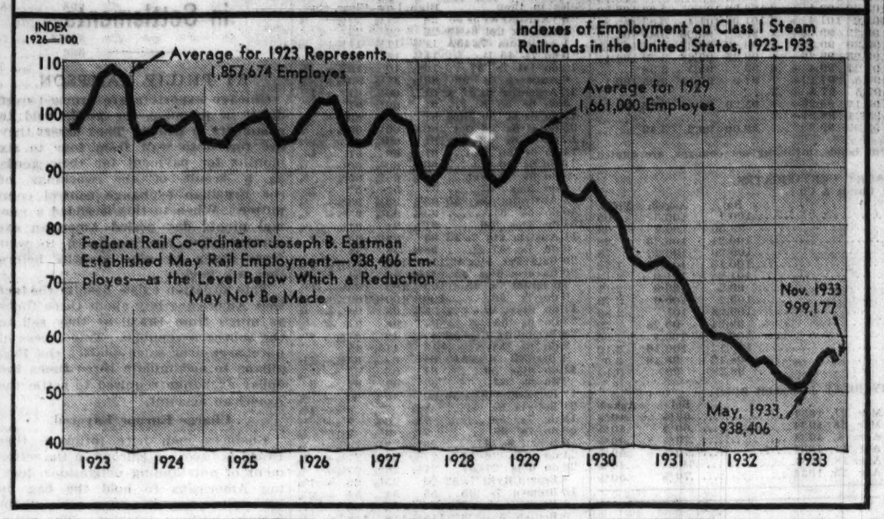
Banking Switch Likely.

Elisha Walker, former chairman of the Bank of America now associated with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York investment bankers, is one of the Prince men who is slated to go on the board.

Entrance of the Kuhn-Loeb interests into the Armour picture is regarded as significant. For many years the Chase National bank of New York was the powerful banking interest in the company and Albert H. Wiggin, its chairman, sat on the company's powerful finance committee. Chase and a group of other banks did the company's big financing. The company has no funded financing to do for a few years, however, but the expected election appears to mark a shift in banking alignment.

Preparation of a new recapitalization plan for the company to substitute for the one turned down last year is expected to begin as soon as the annual meeting is out of the way.

Employment on Railroads Since 1923 Compared With Minimum Established by the U. S. Rail Co-ordinator



Cheerful News Lifts Stocks in Active Trading

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—News of the day was once more with the stock market and a sizeable group of issues was lifted to new highs for the year or longer in broad and active buying. Cautious traders were still numerous enough, however, to hold speculation for the rise in check and the close found most of the active leaders below their highs for the day.

The average for 50 stocks today closed at $94.79, within $3.25 of the high reached on July 18 of last year.

Turnover was 3,369,180 shares. Business piled up in sufficient volume to distance the ticker in the earlier dealings, but the pace slackened a bit along in the afternoon. Observers agreed, however, in pronouncing the market's performance on the whole as excellent with the bull element still firmly intrenched.

News Generally Favorable.

Constructive operations of the day got their chief priming from the heavy oversubscription accorded the new government securities. Trade news items of account included a dispatch from Detroit picturing the automobile factories as being literally swamped with orders and reports that London interests were buying American stocks on a heavy scale.

The rather sour note of the steel reviews was ignored as were the figures showing a drop in electrical output for the week. Confidence was expressed in influential quarters that the uptrend in both these "barometer" industries would be resumed at an early date.

Railroad shares bid for market leadership, being helped somewhat by the dividend declaration of the Pennsylvania. Gains of a point or so were scored by Union Pacific, New Haven and one or two others.

Norfolk Up About 3 Points.

Norfolk and Western rose nearly 3 points in further reflection of the good dividend news which fell to the lot of its shareholders yesterday. Some of the rail equipments also did well, notably American Locomotive and Baldwin. Railroad traffic figures coming out held around those of the previous week.

Anticipation of government orders for the big airplane companies under the naval improvement program continued to redound to the benefit of aviation stocks.

In the motor group Chrysler came to life after its recent setback and drove ahead for more than a point in active dealings. General Motors and Hudson were active, the latter rising a point.

Fresh code difficulties for the copper industry affected the mining stocks, which alone of the big time groups were unable to make any headway.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—Taking the American lumber industry by surprise, Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. today lifted the ban against imports of Russian pulpwood and lumber which previous treasury administrations had held was produced by convict or forced labor.

At the same time Secretary Morgenthau quashed an anti-dumping order against Russia safety matches and also lifted the prohibition against the United States mints receiving soviet gold.

All three moves gave Russia distinctive trade advantages and were the first tangible fruits of Russia recognition.

The American industries which are now faced with Russian competition were not warned of Secretary Morgenthau's move and were aghast to learn of it.

That the lifting of restrictions against Russian goods may be extended to other types of soviet imports was indicated tonight.

The order concerning Russian gold was contained in a letter addressed to the director of the mint instructing that mints accept soviet gold on the same basis with any other country's gold. Previously the treasury had taken Russian gold only subject to investigation because it was believed that the soviet's title to most of the precious metal was questionable.

Steel Activity Off One Point to 32 Per Cent

Steel works operations, still unsustained in the anticipated volume by railroads, construction, and the automobile industry, eased a point last week to 32 per cent of capacity, according to the Iron Age. The expansion in production during recent weeks has represented inventory building rather than consumption.

It was only in Chicago and Cleveland that activity improved at all last week. Local mills raised the rate a half point to 29½ per cent. At Cleveland more automotive tonnage drove up operations from 50 to 54 per cent.

Appreciable losses of 6 points to 30 per cent were experienced in the valleys, 5 to 50 in the Wheeling district, and 3 to 21 at Pittsburgh.

Consider Costs and Prices.

With the delay in fulfillment of their expectations steel producers have turned to a consideration of costs and prices. Increases in some prices, decreases in others have been weighed. It is possible, according to the Iron Age, that sheets will be raised $3 a ton on common finishes to $5 for more highly finished grades. On the other hand, the quotations on stainless steel, one of the industry's new products, have been lowered to induce wider consumption. On 18 and 8 hot rolled strip the decrease is 3½ cents a pound, on cold rolled 3 cents a pound.

For the ninth consecutive week the scrap index has risen—from $11.83 to $12 a ton—reports the review.

The automotive industry is the only source for an early increase in demand. A few more orders are coming from makers of farm equipment and road machinery, and the depletion of stocks of miscellaneous consumers seems to be occurring more quickly than expected. But business from the carriers and construction is still lagging, says the review.

POWER OUTPUT DECLINES

National electric power output for the week ended Jan. 20 not only fell below that of the preceding week but reduced the margin maintained over output in the corresponding period of 1933, the Edison Electric institute reports. In Chicago also electricity production was less than that of the week ended Jan. 13 and its excess over 1933, for the first time in recent weeks, was slightly lower than the national gain.

The institute announces that the output throughout the country amounted to 1,624,846,000 kilowatt hours, or 9.5 per cent ahead of the output in the like week last year, compared with 10.1 per cent for the week ended Jan. 13. The decline from the total of 1,646,271,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week repeated the trend of 1933 and 1932, according to the institute.

In Chicago production of electricity, amounting to 101,527,000 kilowatt hours, was 8.4 per cent in excess of the total of 93,700,000 in the comparable week of 1933. The preceding week's figure was 103,994,000 kilowatt hours.

HUGE WRITEUP IN LEDGER VALUE OF PIPE LINE SHOWN

Washington, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Testimony that in a three year period from June of 1930 the ledger value of the Natural Gas Pipe Line Company of America jumped from $149,349 to $40,471,998 was offered today at a hearing before the federal trade commission, which is examining the company and two others—Texoma Natural Gas and Chicago District Pipe Line—in connection with its investigation of power and gas utilities being conducted under senate resolution.

The three companies, all former Insull interests, handle the entire process of production, transportation and distribution of gas direct from Texas and Oklahoma to Chicago consumers.

Frank Buckingham, a commission examiner testified the increase was "through expenditures and charges for construction purposes and that the combined balance sheets of Natural Gas pipe line and its predecessor, the Continental Construction corporation, corporation, showed an advance in total assets and liabilities of from $2,756,879 as of June 30, 1930 to $67,319,090 as of June 30, 1933.

It was brought out in his testimony that Insull Son & Co., Inc. received a $150,000 fee for services in connection with the financing of the pipe line project.

It will serve those portions, of Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana which use the Cincinnati market. The opening is being accompanied by an intensive promotional campaign, according to R. J. Thain, general advertising manager.

Indiana Township Sells 1st Bond Issue in 118 Years

For the first time in its 118 years of existence a township of Indiana has issued bonds. Center township, which is almost entirely embraced by the city limits of Indianapolis, has sold an issue of $112,000 of judgment funding [poor relief] 5 per cent bonds to John Nuveen & Co., of Chicago. The loan was necessitated by poor relief expenses for October, the only month for which current income did not provide.

CIGARET OUTPUT SHOWS INCREASE OF 7.9 PER CENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—Cigaret production for domestic consumers last year was 7.9 per cent greater than in 1932 and was nearly up to the level of 1931.

The internal revenue bureau's figures, published today, showed a December output of 7,799,623,723 cigarets compared with 7,319,117,167 in December, 1932, an increase of 6.5 per cent.

That lifted production for the full year to 111,763,441,149 cigarets, compared with 153,585,888,866 in 1932 and 113,449,048,657 in 1931. Output was not far behind the record years of 1929, 1930, and 1931. Buying last year was stimulated by two price cuts.

Other forms of tobacco showed declines for the year. Cigar production increased a little last month over the same month of 1932, but for the year output was down to 4,344,752,333 cigars, against 4,442,891,053 in 1932 and 5,318,892,528 in 1931.

This figure, which includes dividends from its General Motors investment equivalent to 45 cents on each share of du Pont common stock, compares with 95 cents a share for the third quarter of 1933.

Pennsylvania Votes 50 Cent Dividend; Others Pay Extra

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—The Pennsylvania railroad today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share, the first payment on the stock since a like disbursement was made a year ago.

In the official announcement of the dividend the Pennsylvania said that the net income for 1933 against which the dividend will be charged was equal to 2.9 per cent on the $50 per capital stock.

For 1932 the Pennsylvania reported a net income of $13,573,536 after taxes and charges, equivalent to 2.6 per cent a share [par $50] on 13,167,686 shares of capital stock then outstanding.

The declaration by the Pennsylvania was the same as paid in the two preceding years and keeps unbroken the company record of making some payment on the stock in every year since 1847, these payments being first designated as dividends in 1856. The dividend is payable March 15 to stockholders of record Feb. 15.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco company declared an extra dividend of $1 a share and the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share on the common and class B common stocks. Like extras were paid a year ago. These are payable March 15, to holders of record Feb. 15.

Earnings for 1933 amounted to $16,731,175, equal to $4.84 a share on the combined common and B stocks, against $23,075,212, or $6.85 a share, in 1932.

Bristol-Myers company, formerly a part of Drugs, Inc., declared an extra dividend of 10 cents a share besides the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock. A similar extra was paid three months ago.

12 MEN, $1,200 BUILT DETROIT'S BIG BANK CHAIN

Testify 120 Shares Ruled $800,000,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—How the Detroit Bankers company, a holding organization, in a little more than three years acquired control of 60 per cent of all the banking resources of Detroit was revealed today to the senate committee on banking and currency.

The committee heard the story of how twelve men, on a total investment of $1,200, built up one of the greatest banking chains in the history of the middle west. The chain, which snapped in February of last year, had as its principal link the First National Bank of Detroit, the other major link being the People's Wayne County bank, the Detroit Security and Trust company, the Bank of Michigan and the Peninsula State bank, all in the Detroit area.

Resources 800 Millions.

Their branches in the metropolitan district numbered more than 250, while depositors were in excess of 900,000. At one time the resources of the company were estimated to be in excess of $800,000,000.

The witness today was John Ballantyne, who was a founder of the Detroit Bankers' company and in 1931 and 1932 the chairman of its board of directors. At times he was not a well informed witness. He could give no specific reason for the promise of a 17 per cent dividend by the holding company more than two months before it came into legal existence. Also he was unable to explain to the committee why the twelve organizers vested in themselves for a period of five years "exclusive voting power in the election and in the removal of directors." Ballantyne, while he refused so to testify, did suggest that this "exclusive provision" may have been adopted to perpetuate the founders of the holding company in office.

120 Controlling Shares.

The articles of association fixed the capital of the holding company at $50,000,000, divided into 2,500,000 shares of common stock, in addition to 120 shares at $10 each, these latter being the "trustee" or controlling shares for the five years following the incorporation of the holding company. Jan. 8, 1930.

The twelve men, all of them prominent in the Michigan banking picture, were said Ballantyne, the late Julius H. Haass, John H. Bodde, Emory W. Clark, D. Dwight Douglas, Ralph Stone, McPherson Browning, T. M. P. Livingstone, H. L. Chittenden, Fred J. Fisher, William T. Barbour, Wesson Seyborn, and himself.

"Now these are the persons who acquired the 120 so-called trustee shares?" asked Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel.

"Yes, sir."

Q.—And paying for those shares $10 apiece, or $100 per person involved? A.—Yes.

That Was Sole Capital.

Q.—And that was the sole capital with which the Detroit Bankers' company commenced business, was it? A.—Yes, sir; I believe so.

In answer to questions about the 17 per cent dividend Ballantyne once said he thought the dividend was wise in view of the past record of the bank.

"Do you think it was wise to put in a capital of only $1,200?" asked Senator Couzens [Rep., Mich.], a member of the committee.

WEST SIDE TRUST REORGANIZATION HEARING MARCH 1

About 500 depositors of the West Side Trust and Savings bank stormed the court of Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel yesterday during a hearing on an intervening petition to hold up the confirmation of a receiver for the bank. Representatives of the state auditor's office desire to have the receiver, William L. O'Connell, who was appointed on Jan. 15, confirmed and to have him liquidate the bank's assets.

Judge Gentzel permitted the filing of the petition and set March 1 for a hearing on it.

The intervening petition was filed by Attorneys Arnold Seeder and Maurice Turner on behalf of 1,500 depositors. It sets forth the fact that the bank was closed at the time of the moratorium and has not opened since and that a new plan of reorganization has been worked out to liquidate the assets and to make the institution a national bank. It was stated that the organizers have received a loan of $2,000,000 from the RFC for this purpose.

The petition also sets forth that Edward J. Barrett, the state auditor, had agreed to reorganization under the plan.

Attorney Michael Ahern, representing the state auditor, objected to the filing of the intervening petition, claiming that it was illegal. Judge Gentzel made a provision that if at the time of the hearing attorneys for the intervening depositors can bring in waivers for $2,500,000 of deposits he will recommend to the state auditor the reorganization of the bank along the plans laid out.

Judge Gentzel gave the receiver permission to liquidate any of the bank's assets up to March 1.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 24.—The "mysterious gold shipment" which for the last week has kept financial circles agog and resulted in widely divergent conjectures as to its real import, fizzled out today as a money market influence.

However, it did force the treasury to reveal its policy on foreign gold. This is that the price of $34.45 an ounce applies to newly mined domestic gold only and that foreign metal shipped in will bring only $20.67 an ounce, the statutory price, if it is presented to the United States mint. This, despite the fact, the government has been buying gold in the open market at London at about $33.50 an ounce.

Routine Transshipment.

The consignment consisted of six boxes of gold, estimated by steamship officials as worth about $240,000, but described in customs records as worth only $50,000 and is merely a routine transshipment.

When reports of the gold movement first appeared in Wall street a week ago, it was thought by many to be a test case engineered by French bankers to discover whether the treasury would pay more than the statutory price.

But when the metal arrived on the Mauretania it was found to be consigned to the Ward line and is thought to have been placed on the Orizaba which sailed for Vera Cruz this morning. Bankers said there was no monetary significance in the transaction.

Dollar Rise ¼ Cent.

Trading in the exchange market was quiet today. The dollar advanced about a quarter of a cent in terms of the French franc, closing at an indicated gold worth of 62.78 cents, against 62.53 yesterday. The French franc fell 2½ points to 6.24 cents.

American funds were also moderately stronger against the British pound sterling, which slipped through the $5 level to close at $4.98 for the day, a loss of 2 cents. The Canadian dollar lost an eighth of a cent to close at 99⅛ cents.

MORATORIUM ON GERMAN DEBTS TO U. S. LOOMS

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—On the eve of the conference on the transfer of Germany's payments on her private foreign debts, especially her debt of $1,200,000,000 to American creditors, the danger of an absolute German moratorium again looms big.

Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, indicated today he might not personally attend the conference tomorrow and American and other bankers fear the conference will end in failure since Germany's creditors are unable to agree on a joint policy.

Schacht declared that unless Germany was granted a partial moratorium she will not be able to keep her gold reserve and would then be compelled to declare an absolute moratorium very soon.

It is suspected that speculators who are booming German stocks in America are trying to prevent an understanding between Schacht and American bankers in Berlin. The Germans continue to assert they are not systematically buying up their own bonds in New York markets.

The British, who at first were firmly allied with the Americans in their protest against discrimination and disregard of the wishes of creditors, are now acting with the greatest reserve. Together with Sweden, they first threatened to apply restrictions to German imports into their countries. Now the British indicate they will not carry out their threat, presumably under pressure from states of the British empire which would like to sell their raw materials to Germany in case of economic friction between America and Germany.

WIDE BUILDING GAINS REPORTED IN DODGE SURVEY

New York, Jan. 24.—(AP)—L. Seth Schnitmann, chief statistician for F. W. Dodge corporation, today reported an indicated widespread construction improvement throughout the country with contracts for the first half of January exceeding those of the full month of January, 1933.

Schnitmann reported a total volume of $101,910,300 for Jan. 1 to 15 in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains. The total for the same territory for January, 1933, was only $83,356,000.

Comparing the first half of January, this year, with the same period of last year, Dodge reports show residential building 50 per cent ahead, non-residential building two and a half times as great and utilities building three times as great. Public works accounts for about 80 per cent of the total.

Abandoning of Stockyards Postal Station Protested

A protest against the abandonment of the Stockyards postal station has been made to Postmaster General James Farley by the Illinois Manufacturers' association in behalf of its membership which includes the leading meat packing companies. Plans are under way to merge the station with the Englewood station. Approximately 175 firms in the territory bounded by State, 35th, 47th street and Western avenue are served by that station.

BILLION DOLLAR FEDERAL LOAN FAR OVERSOLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24.—Borrowing a billion dollars in a day, the federal government today put across the first big loan in the ten billion dollar borrowing program which is necessary to pay the bills of the new deal during the next five months.

Investors in a single day offered the treasury department three and one-half billion dollars although the treasury this morning announced it was seeking a loan of only a billion.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. was amazed and pleased with the huge oversubscription which greeted the first treasury security issue floated since he took office, but he confined his official statement to saying, "I am delighted with the result."

Had Been Regarded as Test.

Because it was the first loan which the treasury had sought since President Roosevelt revealed the necessity of borrowing ten billion dollars before June 30, the security issue was regarded as a vital test of government credit.

Its rousing reception dampened rumors that the treasury will be forced into some type of inflation by its titanic financing needs. Financial circles here, however, attributed not a little of the issue's success to the fact that the treasury offered interest rates slightly higher than the market required.

To obtain the billion dollars the treasury offered to sell five hundred million dollars of its notes bearing 2½ per cent and maturing March 15, 1936, and 500 million dollars of its certificates maturing Sept. 15, 1934, and bearing 1½ per cent interest.

2⅛ Subscribed 5 Times.

On the basis of preliminary figures received at the treasury up to four o'clock Secretary Morgenthau announced that offers to buy the 2½ per cent notes aggregated 2½ billion dollars, a subscription of five times the issue. The same reports showed bids for the 1½ per cent certificates amounted to a billion dollars, a subscription of two times the issue.

Secretary Morgenthau, after receiving these reports, said the treasury would close the subscription books on its offerings but would accept any bids in the mail before midnight tonight. Allotments to bidders will be on a percentage basis and the late subscriptions mailed tonight may swell the total to four billion dollars.

The treasury was reported to be particularly pleased that the issue with larger maturity attracted the larger offering. The treasury is anxious to do its financing for as long a period as it can. Both the notes and certificates will be issued Jan. 29.

Seeks Extra 90 Million.

While the major financing operation was under way, the treasury today sought to borrow an extra 90 million dollars on a 91 day bill issue amounting to 150 million dollars. It offered to replace a sixty million dollar issue of bills maturing Jan. 29 with a new 150 million dollar issue, thereby gaining 90 millions of new money.

It was reported at the White House today that President Roosevelt has almost completed plans for proposing a guarantee of the principal of home loan bonds and for expanding the home loan program to finance modernization of homes. It was said that the bill would be substantially the same as that now before congress to guarantee farm credit securities. The president also wishes an extension of authority to the home loan board to finance about $250,000,000 for improving homes.

U. S. GETS STORY OF BITTER FIGHT FOR TIRE TRADE

Akron, O., Jan. 24.—(AP)—A "very bitter" competitive condition in the tire manufacturing industry was described today before a federal trade commission inquiry into the trade practices of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company.

Appearing for his company, which is being investigated to determine whether its sales contract with Sears, Roebuck & Co. violates the Clayton act, R. S. Wilson, Goodyear vice president, said competition between a tire made by the Firestone company to meet the challenge of Sears' Goodyear-made casings had engendered the bitterness.

New York, Jan. 24.—The listed bond market expressed general satisfaction over the terms of the new treasury financing today. Domestic corporation issues rallied briskly and long term United States government bonds finished generally 1-32 to 7-32 points higher.

The total turnover was $19,711,800, compared with $17,062,050 on the previous day. Sales of government issues exceeded $1,000,000 for the first time in several days.

Rail Showing Best.

Many domestic corporation issues were lifted 1 to 3 points, with railroad liens showing better average gains than industrial and utility bonds. Today's advance carried a number of issues in all three groups above their best levels in more than a year. Few of the more active issues failed to close higher on the day.

Among the rails which gained 1 to 3 or more points were some loans of Alleghany corporation, St. Paul, Chicago and North Western, Rock Island, Cuba Northern, Denver and Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, M., K. & T., Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern, Wabash, and Western Pacific.

Foreign Loans Uneven.

Foreign loans were irregular in quiet trading. Obligations of the French government, the kingdom of Belgium, and most of the Scandinavian countries pointed higher, while those of the United Kingdom, Dutch East Indies, and a number of German issues were generally lower.

On the curb exchange domestic bonds scored sizable advances in active dealings. Foreign loans closed irregularly lower, particularly German issues.

Pillsbury Flour Mills, Inc.

Investors' Guide: Would appreciate information about Pillsbury's Flour as an investment.—N. T.

Answer: Pillsbury Flour Mills, Inc., is a holding company whose assets consist of stock of Pillsbury Flour Mills company, one of the larger independent millers. From 1926 to 1931 the company reinvested about $7,500,000 of profits in plant expansion. It now has modern, adequate plant facilities, situated close to centers of supply.

Most of flour output is sold direct to large scale purchasers, such as large bakers, chain stores and similar organizations. Large expenditures for promotional work have built up a steady demand for its products.

Net income for the 11 months to May 31, 1933, was $1,157,000, or $2.11 per share, against net of $830,000, or $1.51 per share, for the preceding 12 months. Net for the year ended June 30, 1931, was $1,979,000, or $3.60 per share, against $2,225,000, or $4.05 per share, for the June 30, 1930, year.

On May 31, 1933, cash assets were almost $2,000,000 compared with current liabilities of $1,703,000. Total current assets were $11,508,000.

Subsidiary funded debt aggregated $5,729,000. Capitalization of the parent company consists of 549,225 shares of no par stock. The stock pays 25 cents a quarter. During the last seven years dividend payments have totaled about 50 per cent of profits.

Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey).

Investors' Guide: Will you please give me your opinion of Standard Oil of New Jersey 5s, due 1946?—Mrs. M. S.

Answer: Standard Oil company [New Jersey], one of the largest petroleum companies in the world, engages in both domestic and foreign trade. Although the company is an extensive producer, it is primarily a refiner and distributor, purchasing more than half its crude oil needs.

Gross revenues during the six years through 1932 have been measured in billions and charges were covered by ample margins. Bond interest and discount were earned 2.59 times in 1932, 3.20 times in 1931 and 7.40 times in 1930.

Weakness in the price structure of oil products in the first half of 1933 probably caused a sag in profits during that period, but improvement in conditions is believed to have strengthened operating results in the second half.

SLIGHTLY LOWER TREND IS SHOWN IN GRAIN PRICES

Change in Wheat Small; Interest Dull.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Little interest was accorded the grain market yesterday. Price fluctuations were erratic within narrow limits, wheat having a range of 1 cent and corn ⅛ cent for the day, with the finish showing little change.

Wheat was ⅛ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher at the close, with May at 90¼ to 90⅜ cents, and July at 88⅝ to 88⅞ cents. Corn was unchanged to ¼ cent lower with May 52⅝ to 52¾ cents. Oats were off ⅛ to ⅜ cent, May resting at 38⅛ cents, while rye lost ¼ to ⅜ cent with May closing at 61⅞ cents. Barley gained ¼ cent for the day with May at 51⅜ cents.

A severe cold wave was forecast for part of the winter wheat belt, and while snowfall was anticipated, it was feared the sudden change in temperatures following a week or so of mild weather would be followed by increased complaints regarding the outlook for the new crop.

Ignore Wallace Statement.

A statement by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that the AAA was considering a supplementary plan to reduce the wheat acreage for 1934 at least 15 per cent below an average of the previous three years failed to have any effect on the market.

Eastern interests were fair buyers of wheat at times and were said to be talking bullish, with inflation ideas a factor. Winnipeg lost ¼ to ⅜ cent for the day, with only a small export business in evidence. Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼ cent higher.

Mills were again in the market for cash wheat. Trading basis here advanced 1 to 1½ cents due to a scarcity of country offerings. Shipping sales were reported at 50,000 bushels.

Corn Buying Persistent.

Commission house buying was again in evidence in May corn around 52½ cents, and was sufficient in volume to prevent any material decline in the price. Persistent buying the last three days has caused considerable comment. Country offerings to arrive were very small, but the shipping demand was not aggressive, and sales aggregated only 24,000 bushels.

Houses with eastern connections sold rye futures. A report by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics claimed Germany and Poland had entered into an agreement to control exports of rye, but there is no quota for either country, the apparent intention being to prevent competition in the way of a sharp lowering of prices.

COTTON TRADERS LIMIT BUYING; PRICES DECLINE

At the close futures in Chicago were 4 to 8 points net lower and other markets 2 to 9 points net lower on the active trading months. Spot cotton in New York declined 5 points to 11.45 cents, in New Orleans and Galveston 5 points to 11.10 cents. Houston was unchanged at 11.10 cents. Prices:

JANUARY EGGS ADVANCE SHARPLY; POTATOES OFF

Short covering carried January eggs up to 17½c, or within ¼c of the season's high, on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange yesterday, but selling at the close dropped the price back to 17c, a net gain of ¼c for the day. Butter was unchanged to ½c lower. Potatoes dropped 5c.

Butter withdrawals cut the four market surplus 1,100,000 pounds. Production was reported 12 per cent under last year.

ALL LIVE STOCK MOVES LOWER AS RECEIPTS EXPAND

Federal Buying Supports Cattle and Hogs.

Live stock prices slipped a notch yesterday when receipts attracted by the recent improvement put the market under pressure. Trading in better grades was lively, however, and a good clearance was effected in most divisions of the hog and sheep market. A good many cattle were left.

Hogs sold 5 to 15 cents lower, both the top and general average prices showing 10 cent losses at $3.60 and $3.40, respectively. Packers arrived on the market early with new government contracts to buy 100 to 200 pound hogs for the account of the relief corporation, and this bolstered the better grades.

Plainer classes and the underweights and pigs which were not up to requirements of the federal buyers met an undependable trade and were extremely erratic at the finish.

Cattle Receipts Heavy.

Cattle receipts yesterday were largest in two weeks, barring Mondays, and all but top grades of light and yearlings declined 15 to 25 cents, with late bids off more. Selected light weights were scarce and sold under brisk competition at new highs, full carloads of 1,037 pound averages bringing $7.35, while a small lot averaging 1,016 pounds at $7.50 was within 10 cents of the highest mark made by cattle since Dec. 7, 1932.

Beef cows maintained a steady basis, while heifers were weak to 25 cents lower. Government buying supported the lower grades of cows and these closed firm. Calves were weak to 50 cents lower.

Lambs Move Lower.

Lamb prices followed the trend of cattle and hogs and lost 25 cents of the recent advance, but there was a wide demand on the break and a strong undertone was evident on final rounds. All packers carried liberal orders for wooled lambs around the $9.00 line, but balked at going above this figure.

Prime 93 to 95 pound averages at $9.10 established the packer top for the day, while handier weights to city butchers reached $9.15. All interests were buying freely up to $9.35 on the preceding session.

SILVER FUTURES

Silver futures in New York developed a heavy undertone yesterday and after selling around Tuesday's finish closed at the inside figures of the day with net losses of 63 to 50 points. January closed at 44.15c; March, 44.30@44.30c; May, 44.85c; July, 45.15@45.30c, and September at 45.77c. Foreign bar silver was unchanged at 44¼c and new domestic steady at 64¾c per ounce. Sales of futures aggregated 3,200,000 ounces, or 128 lots.

MEET ME THURSDAY
IF YOU ARE MONEY-MAKING MINDED!

My name is M. T. Jones and I am making money—in a line of business wholly different from the work I did successfully for years, but which flickered out like a candle in the wind when conditions got bad. I got into this work when things were said to be worst, and I was not even physically fitted for a good day's work, but I learned what was taught to me and persevered, and today I have the satisfaction of knowing I am successful. Not only that, but I have helped several others to be successful. This is a mighty fine company and a big one, and while it asks of every man who is accepted such qualities as character and determination, home connections and responsibilities, health, and ability to work, it gives in return far more than it demands. When I had my first $100.00 week in this work I was mighty happy. But there are men who regularly make one and a half and two times that sum—men who had no knowledge of this work at all in the beginning. There is one young man in this business who began in July, 1930, and who since has received in cash over $14,000.00. Now, there are many hitting the ball that way, but there is just as much to be made by others if they go at it earnestly, and several are crowding up in that neighborhood—and I can assure you that I am monthly increasing my income. You do not invest or deposit a cent, or spend a penny for goods. You can place the utmost confidence in getting your money, because this is one of the big companies—and it is the greatest developer of independence in men I have ever heard of!

Am I right in assuming that YOU want a permanent connection where you can make money from the start and more and more as you apply yourself? Then suppose we talk it over and go into detail? Give me time enough to show you all about it and I will tell you at the end of that time if I believe you can do the job, and you will know if you wish to do it. Therefore, I want you to come here promptly at two o'clock—no other time—Thursday, Jan. 25, in Room 215 at 1046 Wilson-av., provided you are a north side or north suburban man. Ask for M. T. Jones, I shall be mighty glad to go into this opportunity with you. I shall expect you—on time!

A GUAR. SALARY WITH EXPENSES PAID while learning. Must we tell you tired of chasing rainbows? Will you believe your own eyes? By field demonstrations I will prove that you can earn $25 a week. No investment or car. 1024 W. Madison-st.
